Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if he will list the formal protests lodged by the Irish Government with the Anglo-Irish secretariat since November 1985, with the subject matter in each case; [39577]

(2) if he will list the protests lodged with the Irish side of the Anglo-Irish secretariat since 1985 and the subject matter. [39580]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: I will write to the hon. and learned Gentleman.

Indecency Convictions

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many males (a) were convicted and (b) were cautioned in respect of the offences of gross indecency, indecent behaviour and indecent assault in 1995 which involved only males separately identifying those involving minors. [39578]

Sir John Wheeler: I will write to the hon. and learned Gentleman.

Belfast International Airport

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what criteria will be used to decide (a) the price and (b) the buyer in the sale of Belfast international airport; and if he will make a statement. [39579]

Mr. Moss: The price offered for Belfast international airport is a matter for the commercial judgment of the existing owners and the proposed purchaser.

The Government retained a reversionary interest in BIAL the principal purpose of which was to enable it to retain, for security reasons, an element of control over the identity of the owners of the property. The control mechanisms can be exercised by means of a special share and a 999-year lease. The current management of BIAL, has complied with the requirements of the special share in consulting the department with regard to the identity of the proposed purchasers.

The Government welcome this important vote of confidence in the strength and potential of the Northern Ireland economy.

Phoenix Criminal Record System

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what access the Royal Ulster Constabulary has to the Phoenix criminal record system used in Great Britain; and what is the Northern Ireland equivalent of that system. [39581]

Sir John Wheeler: The Royal Ulster Constabulary, through designated offices, can access the Phoenix criminal record system to:

(i) search and extract conviction details; and

(ii) enter and extract details of wanted or missing persons.

Criminal records within the RUC are retained on computer; the system is called CIRS—criminal information retrieval system.

Border Markers (Discussions)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he intends to enter into discussions with the Irish Government with a view to the authorities in the Republic of Ireland marking clearly on every cross-border road where British territory ends and Irish territory begins. [39671]

Sir John Wheeler: The Government will consider raising the issue via the intergovernmental conference arrangements, but essentially the way in which roads are marked in the Republic of Ireland is a matter for the Irish Government.

Car Park Charges

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the average increase in car park charges in Department of Environment car parks in 1996; and what was the increase in car parks in Newtownards. [39655]

Mr. Moss: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Roads Service under its chief executive, Mr. W. J. McCoubrey. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from W. J. McCoubrey to Mr. John D. Taylor, dated 23 July 1996:

The Secretary of State for Northern Ireland has asked me to reply to your question about car park charges in Department of Environment car parks.

The average increase in car parking charges across Northern Ireland is 30%. The average increase in Newtownards is approximately 39%.

Civilian Disturbances (Deaths)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons in (a) Northern Ireland, (b) Great Britain and (c) the Republic of Ireland have been killed by (i) loyalist terrorists, (ii) republican terrorists, (iii) the police and (iv) the Army since 1968 in civil disturbances in Northern Ireland; and how many in (i) to (iv) are assessed to have been (1) Protestant and (2) Roman Catholic. [39591]

Sir John Wheeler: I will write to the right hon. Gentleman.

Ulsterbus (Overcrowding)

Mr. John D. Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what measures are in place to prevent overcrowding of buses operated by Ulsterbus. [39595]

Mr. Moss: Each bus is certified as to the number of seats and the level of standing by the public service vehicle authorities and the company adheres to these regulations. Enforcement of the regulations is carried out by the bus driver. Periodic checks, involving a physical count of passengers, are carried out by inspectors. The maximum carrying capacity is displayed on each bus.

Business Development Service

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what progress has been made in establishing the business development service of the Department of Finance and Personnel as a next steps agency. [39935]

Sir John Wheeler: The business development service of the Department of Finance and Personnel will be established as an executive agency on 1 October 1996. It will continue to be known as the business development service.

I have set a number of key performances targets for the agency to achieve by April 1997, as follows:

- at least 80 per cent. of customers to be satisfied with the services that they have received;
- at least 80 per cent. of customers to be satisfied with the way in which services were assessed and provided;
- an efficiency saving of 5 per cent. to be achieved in running costs over 1995–96 along with an improvement of 4 per cent. in unit costs across all services; and
- the agency to be positioned to recover the costs of its services of Telecommunications, Information Systems Services, Information Systems Personnel and Training, Thinklink, the Human Resource Management System, Forms Design and the Central Print Unit commencing on 1 April 1997, and to continue to develop mechanisms for charging for all other services.

Copies of the framework document which sets out the terms within which the agency will operate will be placed in the Library prior to the agency's launch along with its first corporate and business plan.

Parades and Marches

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland when he will publish the terms of reference for the proposed review of parades and marches in Northern Ireland. [39936]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: The review of parades and marches in Northern Ireland which I announced in the House on 15 July will have the following terms of reference:

"To review, in the light of evidence received from any interested party and having regard to the particular experience of 1996, the current arrangements for handling public processions and open-air public meetings and associated public order issues in Northern Ireland, including

- the adequacy of the current legal provisions, and in particular the adequacy of the statutory criteria used in making decisions on public processions and open-air public meetings
- the powers and responsibilities of the Secretary of State, police and others
- the possible need for new machinery, both formal and informal, to play a part in determining whether and how certain public processions and open-air public meetings should take place
- the possible role for and composition of Codes of Practice for organisers of and participants in public processions and open-air public meetings and to make recommendations by the end of January 1997."

The review will begin as soon as possible. I hope to announce the names of those conducting the review shortly.

Health and Safety Division

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if the prior options study of the health and safety division of the Department of Economic Development has been completed; and what was the outcome. [39937]

Mr. Moss: This study, which was undertaken by independent consultants, has been completed and Ministers have concluded that a new executive non-departmental public body, operating along next steps lines, should be established to carry out the functions presently exercisable by both the division and the existing Health and Safety Agency in Northern Ireland.

An Order in Council will be required to implement the recommendations and the timetable will therefore be governed by progress in the making of that order.

Public Order (Review)

Mr. Maginnis: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to review the handling of public order situations and the use of plastic baton rounds in Northern Ireland. [40013]

Sir Patrick Mayhew: Her Majesty's Inspector of Constabulary, as part of this year's formal inspection process, will conduct a review of the RUC's procedures and training for handling public order situations including those relating to the use of plastic baton rounds. That review will take account of the disorders associated with recent marches, including the need to ensure adequate protection of RUC officers faced with determined assaults and petrol bombs. HMI's inspection report will be publicly available later this year.

Pre-school Voucher Scheme

Mr. Beggs: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to have a pilot scheme in Northern Ireland to introduce the voucher system for pre-school education; and if he will make a statement. [40095]

Mr. Ancram: I shall write to the hon. Gentleman.

Licences

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the licences currently issued by his Department, indicating their function and the annual administrative costs for each. [37816]

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 19 July 1996]: The information requested has been placed in the Library. Other than where indicated, to provide the administrative costs of the licences would incur disproportionate cost.

Ulster Hospital (Waiting Times)

Mr. Robert McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people have been waiting more than two years for initial appointments with consultants at the Ulster hospital; in what specialties; and what is the longest waiting time currently outstanding. [36663]

Mr. Moss [holding answer 22 July 1996]: Information is not held centrally for waiting times at individual hospitals. The figure given shows the total for the Ulster North Down and Ards health and social services trust of out-patients who are waiting 24 months and over for their first out-patient appointment at the end of March 1996:

Plastic Surgery—1

Information held centrally relates only to those people waiting 24 months and over. The longest waiting time currently outstanding is not therefore readily available.

Small Businesses

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the impact of (a) his policies and (b) the work of his Department in helping small businesses in the past 12 months as against the previous 12 months; and if he will publish the performance indicators by which his Department monitors the impact and the statistical results of such monitoring. [39143]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 22 July 1996]: Assistance towards small firms in Northern Ireland is delivered for the Department of Economic Development by its agency the local enterprise development unit—LEDU.

LEDU's strategy forms an integral part of the Government's approach to encourage competitiveness and growth among small businesses and I am extremely encouraged that LEDU continues to build upon its excellent performance over past years. The recent study by the Northern Ireland Economic Research Council on LEDU's impact on small firm performance in Northern Ireland from 1989 to 1994, concluded that the agency is making a considerable impact on the small business population, with a 54 per cent. employment increase amongst LEDU-assisted firms over the period. In addition, turnover amongst LEDU "growth" clients increased by 40 per cent. in real terms and external sales by these companies increased by 63 per cent.

LEDU launched its new corporate plan for the period 1995 to 1998 on 29 June 1995 and it includes a revised range of performance indicators, the key ones being:

Performance indicators	1995–96 Targets	1995–96 Actual
Contracts with growth companies	150	218
Contracts with established companies	200	228
Companies participating in export development programmes	12	12
Companies participating in market awareness programmes	120	67
Startups with export potential	90	127

LEDU's end of year results for 1995–96 will be announced in September with the publication of its annual report. These will include the NIERC survey results for 1995–96.

Non-fossil Fuel Generation Targets

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the generation targets for Northern Ireland from non-fossil fuel sources for the 15 years following inception of the scheme; what amount of that generation has been installed to date; what was the original target; what amount of electricity is generated from each source at present; what is the forecast for generation until 2011; how much electricity has been available on average to date and what percentage of installed capacity this represents from each source; and what is the cost per unit of such electricity to (a) the customer and (b) Northern Ireland Electricity. [38622]

Mr. Ancram [holding answer 22 July 1996]: Government established in 1993 a target of 45 MW of renewable plant by the year 2005. The first non-fossil fuel obligation order was made on 31 March 1994 requiring NIE to purchase 15.6 MW of renewable energy. Three renewable technologies; wind (12.6 MW), water (hydro) (2.4 MW) and sewage gas (0.5 MW) were for inclusion in the order. An announcement on the size and composition of a second NFFO order is expected to be made within the next few weeks.

To date, schemes with a declared net capacity of 10.8 MW—wind 10.5 MW and hydro 0.3 MW—have been installed. The wind schemes are currently generating 57 GWh per month; and the hydro schemes 0.1 GWh per month. These figures can vary significantly from month to month. The average monthly power produced by wind schemes since commissioning has been 47.0 GWh and by hydro schemes 0.06 GWh.

There will be 45 MW of electricity generated from renewable schemes by 2005. All such schemes will still be operational in 2011. It is not possible to predict the level of additional renewables capacity which may come on line between 2005 and 2011.

The installed capacity currently available from NFFP 1 is 24.7 MW—wind 98.8 per cent. and hydro 1.2 per cent.

The average cost of electricity contracted to NIE under the first NFFO order is approximately 6.0p/kWh. For consumers, when all schemes are commissioned, this will represent an increase of under 1 per cent. in electricity prices.

Plastic Bullets

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will review the use of plastic bullets in Northern Ireland; what disciplinary action has been taken against Royal Ulster Constabulary over the firing of plastic bullets; and if he will undertake a review of the numbers of people who have received injuries from plastic bullets, and the occasions on which the RUC has fired in breach of the existing rules relating to the use of baton rounds. [38960]

Sir John Wheeler [holding answer 23 July 1996]: Plastic bullets are not used in Northern Ireland.

On the question of a review of the use of plastic baton rounds, I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave today to the hon. Member for Fermanagh and South Tyrone (Mr. Maginnis).

Allegations of breaches of the existing rules in respect of the use of baton rounds are treated as complaints against the police and are subject to thorough investigation. Statistics show that since 1990 no RUC officer has been the subject of disciplinary action as a result of the firing of a plastic baton round.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Industrial Development Boards

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the publication date of the code of practice for industrial development boards. [36250]

Mr. Oppenheim: The Commissioner for Public Appointments' guidance on appointments to executive non-departmental public bodies and NHS bodies applies to the regional industrial development boards. No additional code of practice is to be published.

Missile Exports

Mr. Meacher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many times since 1979 his Department has approved export licences for missiles which are capable of conversion to nuclear use; and for each occasion if he will give the date of approval and the end user specified in the licence. [36763]

Mr. Oppenheim: An initial sweep of computer data—which reliably extends back only to March 1990—has shown that, even for that period, the exercise would involve the manual examination and individual technical assessment of several hundred separate licensing records. That in itself would involve disproportionate cost.

To cover the whole period would multiply that resource requirement several times, involving considerably more time-consuming manual searches.

However, the UK has been, since its inception in 1987, a full and active member of the missile technology control regime and views every application for export licences for missiles, missile systems and associated technology with care.

Computers (Millennium)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on his recent meeting with leaders of industry to discuss the effect of the century date change on computer systems. [37491]

Mr. Ian Taylor: I held a meeting on 9 July with representatives of industry and the Bank of England to discuss the impact of the century date change on computer systems in the private sector. The common assessment was that the problem was serious and that reaction by senior management was inadequate. Many companies are not aware of the issue. Others are aware but have yet to audit their own systems, or to tackle the problem with the necessary urgency. Those who are furthest advanced in taking action are reporting very significant costs to put it right.

I therefore asked the Confederation of British Industry, representing users, and the Computer Services and Software Association, representing suppliers, to set up a joint task force to take stock of activities already under way, and to co-ordinate action across the UK. The objectives are to ensure that senior management in all companies are aware of the issue and that they have access to appropriate help. The Federation of the Electronic Industry will support the task force, the DTI will work closely with it and links will be made with the central IT unit and CCTA to share experience and address issues across the public/private sector boundary. The task force will report on progress in September.

Small Businesses

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the impact of (a) his policies and (b) the work of his Department in helping small businesses in the last 12 months as against the previous 12 months; and if he will publish the performance indicators by which his Department monitors the impact and the statistical results of such monitoring. [39147]

Mr. Page: The DTI report "Small Firms in Britain 1996" was published at the beginning of July and a copy was sent to all Members. The report sets out current Government policy for small businesses and includes key statistical indicators.

"Your Business Matters—Government Response" was published as a companion document to the third competitiveness White Paper. The response outlines 30 measures aimed at helping small businesses to prosper and grow. The progress in implementing these measures will be monitored closely.

Parliamentary Questions (Meetings)

Mr. Barnes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on how many occasions ministerial conference and meeting rooms in the parliamentary estate have been booked in his name, or that of other Ministers in his Department, for meetings with Conservative hon. Members immediately preceding questions to his Department in the current parliamentary Session. [39523]

Mr. Lang: Meeting rooms have been booked on five occasions this Session.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Rendel: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many visits (a) the Secretary of State and (b) other Ministers in his Department have made to (i) the Newbury constituency and (ii) other constituencies in the last 12 months. [39778]

Mr. Lang: According to our records, four visits have been made by DTI Ministers to the Newbury constituency during the last 12 months.

It would not be possible to answer the second part of the question except at disproportionate cost.

Domestic Telephone Bills

Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the average domestic telephone bill in the year before the privatisation of British Telecom; and what is the current equivalent. [37668]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Prices for a basket of BT's commonly used services have fallen by 40 per cent. in real terms since 1984. I understand from BT that the median quarterly bill of a typical residential customer in the year prior to privatisation was £25.82—excluding connection charges. This represents £45.59 in 1995–96 terms—adjusted for inflation. Since then, residential phone users on average have increased their use of the telephone, and this is reflected in the median quarterly BT residential bill in 1995–96 being £46.31. Over this period, residential phone users have benefited from significant reductions in the real price of individual services, and innovative improvements in quality.

Universities

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what his Department is doing to help increase the flow of resources from industry to the university sector. [37281]

Mr. Ian Taylor: My Department's support for technology foresight, Link and the industrial units scheme and our funding of relevant and collaborative research through the research councils are examples of support which encourages companies to work with the university sector to improve national competitiveness and quality of life. Other schemes such as the realising our potential award and foresight challenge have brought industrial funds into academia. Further information is given in our annual report, which is available in the Library of the House.

Companies House

Mr. Morgan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many complaints of (a) victimisation, (b) unfairness and (c) discrimination have been made in respect of Companies House in each of the last two years; how many have gone to (a) appeal and (b) tribunal; how many have been settled; and in each case what was the cost involved. [39533]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I have asked the chief executive of Companies House executive agency to reply to the hon. Member directly.

Letter from John S. Holden to Mr. Rhodri Morgan, dated 24 July 1996:

In response to your recent Parliamentary Question to the President of the Board of Trade, I trust the following information is helpful.

The table summaries formal complaints made during the last two years (to July 1996) at Companies House.

	Year 1	Year 2	Appeal	Tribunal	Settled
Victimisation	—	2	1	—	—
Unfairness	1	1	2	—	2
Discrimination	—	1	1	—	1

Apart from internal management time and costs associated with investigation, appeal and legal advice no other costs have been incurred to date. Two cases remain to be settled and any potential cost involved in settlement has not yet been finalised.

Working Time Directive

Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he next expects to meet his European Union counterparts to discuss the working time directive. [37290]

Mr. John M. Taylor: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade has no such plans at present. If the judgment of the European Court of Justice follows the opinion of the Advocate General, we will raise the question of treaty changes in the intergovernmental conference.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what estimate he has made of the numbers of people likely to be affected by the working time directive; and what percentage he estimates would refuse to agree in any circumstances to work more than 48 hours. [37300]

Mr. Taylor: My Department estimates that some 2.1 million employees do not conform with the daily and weekly rest provisions in the working time directive; 2.7 million regularly work more than 48 hours a week; and about 0.2 million work over the directive's night work limit. Up to 3.8 million workers could be affected by the directive's paid holiday provisions. There is no information about how many of those who currently work more than 48 hours a week might refuse to do so.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received about the financing implications for the United Kingdom's economy of a maximum 48-hour working week. [37683]

Mr. Taylor: My Department has received a wide range of representations about the working time directive. Many of these have been from organisations concerned about its potential cost implications.

Mr. Marlow: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action the Government proposes to prevent the application of the working time directive in the United Kingdom from 23 November. [37283]

Mr. Taylor: The Government have challenged the legal basis of the working time directive in the European Court of Justice, and will be pursuing their fundamental concerns in the intergovernmental conference.

Power Stations (Bovine Wastes)

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what progress is being made with the proposals for burning bovine wastes in power stations; what further regulatory clearances will be required for such disposal; and how environmental costs will be addressed. [40101]

Mr. Lang: The Government are exploring all practical options for the disposal, after rendering, of wastes arising from the over 30-month slaughter scheme, that is, tallow and meat and bone meal. Among other steps, it has asked the power generators to consider the possibility of burning such wastes in power stations. National Power and PowerGen are currently conducting combustion testing on the materials at combustion test facilities at Didcot, Oxfordshire and Ratcliffe on Soar, Nottinghamshire, respectively. These tests are being monitoring by the Environment Agency.

It is too early to say whether burning of these materials in power stations will be feasible. If it is, however, authorisation by the Environment Agency—or in Scotland by the Scottish Environment Protection Agency—under the Environmental Protection Act 1990 would be required for any variations in the authorised process at any station proposed to be used. The relevant agency would have to consider whether any proposed variations were substantial. If it so concludes, the proposals must be advertised, and 28 days allowed for representations before the agency decides whether to authorise the proposed variations.

There might also be a need to vary the consents which have been given to the operation of power stations under section 36 of the Electricity Act 1989. Alternatively, it may be appropriate to disapply section 36 as provided for in section 36(4), in which case normal planning rules would apply in respect of any proposed changes to any station for this purpose. In either case, an environmental impact assessment may be required if the proposed changes were likely to have a significant effect on the environment.

British Coal (Recreational Land)

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what arrangements are in place to ensure that British Coal's recreational land is safeguarded for future recreational use. [40102]

Mr. Page: The Government have consistently made clear their intention that British Coal land currently in active use for sport and recreation should be retained for those purposes. To that end, the Prime Minister announced today, at the launch of the first annual report for "Sport Raising the Game", that it has now been agreed by British Coal and the Coal Industry Social Welfare Organisation that British Coal's freehold interest in its recreational land should be transferred to CISWO. This transfer will be on the basis that existing tenants will, generally, be offered new, long-term leases requiring that the land continues to be used for recreational purposes.

Medical Research Council

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement about the forthcoming prior options reviews of units sponsored by the Medical Research Council. [40103]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The Government announced on 29 September 1995 that all public sector research establishments would be subject to prior options reviews.

Reviews are now beginning of the MRC's arrangements for sponsoring the Dunn nutrition unit, virology unit, toxicology unit, reproductive biology unit, radiation and genome stability unit and mammalian genetics unit.

These reviews will take place alongside those of establishments parented or sponsored by other Government Departments which are carrying out work in similar or related fields. The reviews will build on any relevant recent studies.

I should welcome comments from interested parties. Comments should be sent by 15 September 1996 to:

Dr. Declan Mulkeen, Corporate Affairs Group, MRC Head Office, 20 Park Crescent, London W1N 4AL.

Management Information System for Ministers

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when he plans to publish his Department's annual MINIS return. [40105]

Mr. Lang: The MINIS 96 returns for the Department, including its efficiency plan, were published on 24 July 1996. A set has been placed in the Library of the House.

Radiocommunications Agency

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the revised framework document for the Radiocommunications Agency is to be published. [40100]

Mr. Lang: The Radiocommunications Agency's revised framework document has been published today. A copy of the revised framework document and a copy of an evaluation report on the performance of the Radiocommunications Agency since its inception as an executive agency in April 1990 have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Export Controls

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action the Government have taken to follow up Sir Richard Scott's recommendation for a review of export controls. [40104]

Mr. Lang: In line with Sir Richard's recommendation at chapter K3.6 of his report, I am today publishing a consultative document on strategic export controls, Cm 3349, which will be available via HMSO, and am placing copies in the Libraries of both Houses. I have asked for responses to be made to my Department by 31 October. After this consultation, and depending on what decisions are taken, the Government may need to undertake further more detailed consultation with directly interested parties as proposals for change are worked up in detail.

Industrial Relations

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the current state of industrial relations; and if he will make a statement. [37276]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Industrial relations have improved immensely since the 1960s and 1970s. Strikes in Britain remain at historically very low levels, with only 0.42 million working days lost in the 12 months to April 1996 compared with annual averages of 7.2 million in the 1980s and 12.9 million in the 1970s.

Royal Mail

Mr. Hain: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will place in the Library a copy of his letter of last week to the chairman of Royal Mail concerning a suspension of Royal Mail's monopoly on letters costing less than £1 to send. [38489]

Mr. Lang: I have placed in the Libraries of both Houses a copy of my letter dated 12 July to Sir Michael Heron, the chairman of the Post Office, which initiated consultations with the Post Office about the implications of a suspension of the statutory monopoly on the delivery of letters for under £1.

Departmental Vehicles (Traffic Violations)

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the number of traffic violations involving departmental vehicles, the nature of the violations, and the total amount of fines arising from those violations, in each year since 1986. [39300]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Any driver of a DTI vehicle is personally accountable for any traffic violations when in charge of the vehicle and for any costs incurred as a result. The Department's records are, therefore, very limited. We are aware of three tickets for speeding between 1990 and 1994 and six parking tickets between 1993 and 1996. We do not know the amount of the fines that were paid.

The vehicles currently owned by the Department are not used and are in the process of being sold. There is no intention to replace them.

Low Pay

Mr. McAllion: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will take steps to combat low pay; and if he will make a statement. [37294]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The improved performance of the British economy since 1979, particularly the huge increase in productivity and low inflation, has allowed for significant increases in real wages at all levels, including the lower paid. This is in direct contrast to the late 1970s when low productivity meant that increases in earnings fed through to higher prices and increased inflation.

South West Industrial Development Board

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if he will list the occasions between January 1980 and December 1984 on which members of his Department's south-west industrial office have absented themselves from board meetings because of potential conflicts of interest, indicating (a) the date, (b) the board members, (c) the company, (d) the value of the financial assistance applied for, (e) the value of the assistance subsequently offered and (f) the potential conflict of interest; [35244]

(2) if he will list the occasions between January 1985 and December 1989 on which members of his Department's south-west industrial office have absented themselves from board meetings because of potential conflicts of interest, indicating (a) the date, (b) the board members, (c) the company, (d) the value of the financial assistance applied for, (e) the value of the assistance subsequently offered and (f) the potential conflict of interest. [35245]

Mr. Lang [holding answers 1 July 1996]: Listed in the table are the occasions when members of the South West industrial development board are known to have absented themselves—because of potential conflicts of interest—from discussions between 1980 and 1989 of cases which subsequently resulted in offers of regional selective assistance.

Unfortunately, this list may be incomplete. The files containing the full minutes of the board before early 1988 were destroyed after a set period in accordance with the records management procedures then in place in the Department's south-west regional office—now absorbed in the Government office for the south-west. We have, however, been able to establish some earlier abstentions from other sources.

I should make it clear that, throughout this period, board members declared directorships and similar substantial interests in companies both on appointment and when lists of forthcoming cases were regularly circulated. Where such declarations had been made, the members concerned would neither have seen the papers relating to applications from those companies nor have attended relevant discussions of the board.

[1] For expanded project.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 18 June, Official Report, columns 458–59, in what circumstances the financial assistance schemes mentioned go before the industrial development board for scrutiny and approval; and what other procedures are followed. [37713]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 17 July 1996]: Offers of regional selective assistance cases involving potential grant above a set level—which in the case of the south-west was until recently £100,000 but is now £250,000—but not exceeding £2 million are considered by a regional industrial development board—or, exceptionally, by the national industrial development advisory board. Offers of grant below the set level may be approved by officials without reference to the boards but officials have discretion to seek board advice in any case where they consider it desirable to do so. Offers of regional selective assistance above £2 million are normally appraised in headquarters and considered by the industrial development advisory board. All offers of £1 million or more are subject to ministerial approval.

Offers of assistance under the other schemes referred to in my earlier answer have been considered by officials within guidelines and against criteria approved by Ministers, without reference to external advisory boards but subject to ministerial approval above certain thresholds.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what financial assistance has been given by his Department since 1980 to Company A, the identity having been supplied to him, by (a) type of grant, (b) date offered, including month and (c) date of payment, including month. [37644]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 17 July 1996]: Company A was offered regional selective assistance of £2 million in October 1989. Payment was made in four instalments as follows:

January 1991: £400,000

December 1991: £800,000

December 1992: £400,000

December 1993: £400,000

No other assistance has been offered under the Department's principal regional, enterprise and technology schemes; nor has any loan to the company been covered under the small firms loan guarantee scheme.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to his answer of 18 June, Official Report, columns 461–64, under what terms the financial assistance to Magrathea (Pendennis) Ltd. was granted; what is the company's current status; what assessment he has made of the productiveness of the grant; and if he will make a statement. [37647]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 17 July 1996]: Magrathea (Pendennis) Ltd. was offered regional selective assistance of £400,000 on 31 May 1994 to enable the company to establish a facility for the manufacture of marine components at Pendennis shipyard, Falmouth. The project had created 13 full-time jobs out of a total expected of 32 when the company suffered a major fire at the yard in October 1994 and subsequently went into receivership. A liquidator was appointed in February this year, and the Government office for the south-west has sought recovery of the total grant paid—£320,000. It is possible that Magrathea 2000 Ltd., which has bought the assets of Magrathea (Pendennis) Ltd. will continue the project.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if Mr. D was a member of his Department's South West industrial development board at the time of (a) the application and (b) the offer of any financial assistance since 1985 to company A, the identities having been supplied to him; [37642]

(2) if, during his tenure on his Department's South West industrial development board, Mr. D was obliged to absent himself from any meetings due to a potential conflict of interest arising from his directorship and shareholding in company A, the identities having been supplied to him; [37645]

(3) what role Mr. D has played in the granting of financial assistance by his Department to company A, the identities having been supplied to him. [37646]

Mr. Lang [holding answers 17 July 1996]: Mr. D was a member of the industrial development board when regional selective assistance was applied for, and offered to, company A in 1989. Because of the size of the application, the case was—in accordance with normal procedures—appraised centrally and not considered by the regional board; nor did Mr. D play any other role in the granting of the assistance. The Department is unaware of any instance where Mr. D's interests in company A necessitated his abstention from discussion by the board of applications by other companies.

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the President of the Board if Mr. B of his Department's South West industrial development board absented himself from board meetings discussing grant applications from company A due to a potential conflict of interest as a senior partner of the firm advising this company on its grant application; and if he will make a statement. [37643]

Mr. Lang [holding answer 17 July 1996]: As explained in my answer to a previous question, the board did not discuss the regional selective assistance application from company A.

Inward Investment

Mr. Hardy: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the 10 largest industrial or commercial developments in England which resulted from inward investment since 1993; and, in each case, what estimate he has made of the number of jobs created and the average cost to public funds for each of these jobs. [37637]

Mr. Page [holding answer 18 July 1996]: A full answer can be given only at disproportionate cost. Inward investment includes takeovers, expansions and joint ventures as well as new greenfield projects. Not all these will be eligible for public assistance.

Sellafield (Plutonium Store)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what meetings have been held under the auspices of the International Atomic Energy Agency or other relevant bodies concerning the establishment of an international regional plutonium store at Sellafield since his answer of 13 July 1993, Official Report, columns 430–31. [38242]

Mr. Page [holding answer 19 July 1996]: None.

Non-toxic Gunshot

Mr. Morley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he is taking to amend the international proof convention on small arms to permit and facilitate the use of non-toxic gunshot. [38793]

Mr. John M. Taylor [holding answer 23 July 1996]: No steps are necessary. There is no current rule either domestic or made under the Permanent International Commission for the Proof of Small Arms—CIP—which restricts the use of non-toxic shot in guns. However, in certain situations, steel shot can damage gun barrels with implications for consumer safety. CIP has now produced regulations to avoid the sale of steel shot cartridges above a certain size and velocity.

Exports

Mr. Amess: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the 10 largest manufactured exports from the United Kingdom at the eight digit standard international trade classification level. [38970]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 23 July 1996]: The information is given in the following table:

UK top ten exports—1995

Rank	Commodity code	Description	£ million
1	84719180	Digital processing units other than for use in civil aircraft	3,398

Space Policy

Mr. Cousins: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was discussed, and what conclusions were reached, at his seminar on space policy with industry on 25 June; and what date has been set for the next one. [38891]

Mr. Ian Taylor [holding answer 23 July 1996]: The space policy forum I held on 25 June was extremely successful and was attended by representatives from across the space community. The forum considered the whole range of issues affecting the sector and made an invaluable contribution to the forward plan for UK space activities, which I am publishing today. This process forms an essential part of UK space policy. I look forward to further regular consultation with the space community within the framework set by the plan.

Export Guarantees Advisory Council

Dr. Wright: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if the Export Guarantees Advisory Council (a) publishes its advice to Government and (b) publishes an annual report; and if in each case this is (i) under a statutory requirement or (ii) voluntary. [37903]

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 18 July 1996]: The Export Guarantees Advisory Council is a purely advisory body appointed under the terms of the Export and Investment Guarantees Act 1991. Its function is to advise the Secretary of State, at his request, in respect of any matter relating to the exercise of his functions under the Act. Its members receive no remuneration.

The answers to both the specific questions are no.

Enterprise Zones

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the enterprise zones created in each of the last three years; and if he will make a statement. [39559]

Sir Paul Beresford: I have been asked to reply.

In the last three years, the enterprise zones created have been east midlands, Dearne Valley and east Durham—all designated in 1995—and Tyne riverside which is in the process of being designated this year.

Since the enterprise zone scheme was introduced in 1981, the Government have developed a range of alternative schemes to promote regeneration and growth. These are generally better targeted and can be implemented more rapidly than the enterprise zones scheme which, in part as a result of EC regulations, can take up to three years to designate. Enterprise zones can affect economic activity over wide areas through displacement effects and are not the appropriate regeneration measure in most circumstances. In December 1987, the Government announced that the enterprise zone scheme would not be extended other than in exceptional circumstances.

Considerate Constructors Scheme

Mr. Redmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action his Department has taken to support and promote the building industry's considerate constructors scheme; and if he will make a statement. [39797]

Mr. Clappison: I have been asked to reply.

The considerate constructors scheme is an initiative being piloted by the Construction Industry Board, chaired by Sir Michael Latham. Both the board and the scheme have the full support of the Government.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Publicity

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is her Department's budget in 1996–97 for consultants to assist with information, publicity, press and media. [39341]

Mr. Sproat: None. My Department does not employ consultants within these areas.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many staff are assumed in her Department's budget, employed (i) full time and (ii) part time, (a) to work on press and media and (b) to provide information and publicity in 1996–97. [39468]

Mr. Sproat: Staff in the information division work on publicity and press projects. There are currently 12 full-time information grade posts, and no part-time posts.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many staff were employed full time or part time (a) to provide information and publicity and (b) on press and media in (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1994–95 and (iii) 1993–94. [39423]

Mr. Sproat: Staff in the information division work on publicity and press projects. The number of information grade posts in each of the past three years has been:

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what was the cost of staff employed full time or part time (i) to provide information and publicity and (ii) to work on the press and media in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1994–95 and (c) 1993–94. [39407]

Mr. Sproat: Staff in information division of the Department of National Heritage work on press and publicity projects. The total cost for both (i) and (ii) of staff employed full time or part time was:

(a) £390,864

(b) £435,818

(c) £428,685

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) what is the cost, assumed in the budget, of people employed full time or part time to work on the press and the media in 1996–97; [39977]

(2) what is the cost budgeted for staff, employed full time or part time, to provide information and publicity in 1996–97. [39447]

Mr. Sproat: The total cost budgeted for staff employed full time or part time in the Department of National Heritage, to provide information and publicity and to work on the press and the media in 1996–97 is £455,380.

Staff in information division of the Department of National Heritage work on both press and publicity projects.

Film Industry

Mr. Tim Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when she expects to receive the report from the Middleton committee on the future financing of the film industry; and if she will make a statement. [39693]

Mr. Sproat: My right hon. Friend expects to receive the report on 31 July.

Sir Anthony Durant: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage when she expects to receive the report from the Advisory Committee on Film Finance on the future financing of the United Kingdom film industry. [39584]

Mr. Sproat: My right hon. Friend expects to receive the report on 31 July.

Sir Anthony Durant: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what are the levels of investment in United Kingdom film production in 1996–97. [39586]

Mr. Sproat: Figures for 1996–97 are not available, but the total investment in UK-linked films going into production in the first half of the calendar year 1996 was reported to be £333 million.

Sir Anthony Durant: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the agencies which have made representations to the Middleton committee on the film industry. [39585]

Mr. Sproat: The following organisations have made representations to the advisory committee:

Premier Media Ltd.

British Film Institute

British Screen Advisory Council

Candover Services Ltd.

Cinema Exhibitors Association

Durlacher and Co., Plc

European Film Finance and Insurers Association

Film Financing Ltd

Parliamentary Questions (Meetings)

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage on how many occasions ministerial conference and meeting rooms in the parliamentary estate have been booked in her name, or that of other Ministers in her Department, for meetings with Conservative hon. Members immediately preceding questions to her Department in the current parliamentary Session. [39530]

Mr. Sproat: On no occasions.

National Heritage Memorial Fund

Mr. Patten: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many applications for support from the national heritage memorial fund have been received for projects (a) of a specifically Christian nature and (b) which recognise the millennium as marking 2,000 years since the birth of Jesus Christ; of those how many have been approved; and at what cost. [39583]

Mr. Sproat: The heritage lottery fund does not categorise by religious denomination. However, to date 566 applications have been received from religious organisations 31 per cent. of total—asking for grants amounting to £57,505,362. Eighty-seven grants have been awarded to religious organisations, 23 per cent. of total grants awarded amounting to £8,024,510.

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what was the total national lottery funding allocated for distribution through the heritage commission in 1995–96; what sum is planned for 1996–97; what was the total sum allocated and paid through the commission in 1995–96; and what sum has been allocated and paid to date in 1996–97. [40039]

Mr. Sproat: The total national lottery funding allocated for distribution through the national heritage memorial fund in 1995–96 was £305 million; of this, £40.4 million was drawn down in that year. A total of £33.6 million has been drawn down in 1996–97 out of a planned expenditure of £197 million. Estimated income for the NHMF in 1996–97 is £250 million.

Loan Indemnification

Mr. Hawkins: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is the total value of contingent liabilities arising from her indemnification, under section 16 of the National Heritage Act 1980, of loans from the Gilbert collection to the Victoria and Albert museum. [40030]

Mr. Sproat: My right hon. Friend made a written statement to the House on 5 June 1996 at columns 499-500 setting out the total value of statutory contingent liabilities arising from all section 16 indemnities that remained outstanding at 31 March 1996. Since making that report, we have indemnified, under section 16 of the National Heritage Act 1980, a number of loans by the Gilbert Public Arts Foundation to the Victoria and Albert museum. The current total value of statutory contingent liabilities arising from these particular undertakings is £33,140,563. The Gilbert loans comprise an outstanding collection of more than 600 pieces of historic English and continental gold and silversmiths' work from about 1500 to 1830 and the definitive group of micromosaics and pietra dura furniture. The objects will be with the V and A for about three years and a number of them will be on display to the public.

British Academy of Sport

Mr. Hargreaves: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what progress has been made in establishing the British academy of sport. [40021]

Mr. Sproat: Details of the Government's proposals for the British academy of sport, as the pinnacle of a regional network of centres of sporting excellence and academies for particular sports, are set out in the bid prospectus, which is published today. Bidders have until 31 October to submit their bids, and it is hoped that a final decision will be reached by the end of January 1997.

I have placed copies of the prospectus in the Libraries of the House.

"Sport: Raising the Game"

Mr. Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what progress has been made on implementing the initiatives set out in "Sport: Raising the Game". [40086]

Mr. Sproat: We have today published "Sport: Raising the Game—The First Year Report", which reports progress on all 38 action points set out in the sports policy statement published last July.

The report shows that real progress has been made in the past year, but it also emphasises our determination to sustain the momentum in the coming year.

In schools, a revised physical education curriculum, with greater emphasis on team games, was introduced in August 1995.

From the 1996–97 academic year, schools' annual reports and prospectuses will include information on sporting aims, provision and achievements.

In October, secondary schools, which have particularly good policies for sport, will be able to apply for a sportsmark award. The first awards will be made in April 1997.

From this summer, games that are offered as part of the formal PE curriculum will be inspected and reported on by Ofsted. Inspectors will also report on extra-curricular sporting provision made by the school.

The Ofsted survey of good practice in school PE was published in December 1995, and a summary was sent to all schools in January 1996.

For the first time, Her Majesty's chief inspector's annual report in February 1996 addressed the state of both curriculum PE and extra-curricular activities and sport in schools.

Pilot "Coaching Weeks for Teachers" are under way, involving 300 to 500 teachers and trainee teachers. The aim is to mount a nationwide programme in 1997–98.

Schools can claim up to 80 per cent. of the costs of a new facility from the lottery sports fund for projects linked with their communities and sports clubs.

A £2 million challenge fund, to promote links between schools and clubs, has been established by the Sports Council. Applications will be invited from schools, clubs and governing bodies of sport this October.

From 5 August, following concern that too many school, and other, playing fields had been sold off, the Sports Council will be a statutory consultee for planning applications affecting playing fields.

Under the Sports Council's priority areas initiative, announced earlier this year, up to 90 per cent. lottery funding is now available for projects in defined areas of recreational and social deprivation.

The Further Education Funding Council published a report last month focusing on good sporting practice in further education colleges.

The Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals and the Standing Conference of Principals will be publishing an audit of higher education sports facilities and provision in the autumn.

The report of the working group on university sports scholarships, chaired by Sir Roger Bannister, was published last month. The report highlights the increasing importance of the higher education sector in providing opportunities for the development of sporting excellence. Its main recommendation is that increased investment in talented sports men and women attending university, through lottery-funded sports scholarships, is an essential step in ensuring the development of our sporting elite.

Details of the Government's proposals for the British academy of sport, as the pinnacle of a regional network of centres of sporting excellence and academies of particular sports, are included in the bid prospectus which is published today. Bidders have until 31 October to submit their bids, and it is hoped that a final decision will be reached by the end of January 1997.

The first year report also reports on the restructuring of the sports councils, the very successful first year of the lottery sports fund, the launch in March 1996 of the national junior sport programme, and on initiatives taken by governing bodies of sport and local authorities relating to school sport.

I have today placed copies of "Sport: Raising the Game—The First Year Report" in the Libraries of the House.

BBC Transmitter Network

Mr. Donohoe: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on the proposals for the privatisation of the BBC's transmitter network; and what assessment she has made of the impact this will have on the provision of NICAM broadcasting facilities throughout the BBC's transmitter network. [38643]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 22 July 1996]: As we announced last November, the BBC is handling the arrangements for the sale of its transmission assets. I understand that the BBC remains committed to an extension of NICAM stereo sound coverage as part of its continuing programme of investment in its transmitter network. It is for the BBC to determine the rate and order of this programme in the light of its resources and other engineering priorities. This position will not be affected by the privatisation of the transmission network.

Lottery Funding (Wales)

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list under each head through which money is available from the national lottery the organisations in Wales which have been allocated money; and what assessment she has made of the take-up rate of the allocations. [38840]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 22 July 1996]: To date, 767 awards in Wales totalling £152,278,948 have been made. I will write to the hon. Member with a full list of these awards. National lottery awards are made in response to applications.

Millennium Fund

Mr. Patten: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) how many projects supported by the millennium fund (a) recognise the millennium as marking 2,000 years since the birth of Jesus Christ and (b) otherwise have a specifically Christian character; [39582]

(2) how many schemes have been approved and of what value from the millennium fund; how many of these and at what value (a) specifically recognise that the year 2,000 as marking the birth of Jesus Christ and (b) are of a Christian nature; and what percentage of the total approved schemes by number and value these represent. [39652]

Mr. Sproat: This is a matter for the Millennium Commission. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for National Heritage will reply to the hon. Member in her capacity as chairman of the commission and place copies of her reply in the Libraries of the House.

National Lottery

Mr. Dixon: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the grants awarded by the national lottery organisations in (a) the Jarrow constituency, (b) the South Tyneside district council area and (c) the Tyne and Wear area. [38014]

Mr. Sproat: Lottery grants to the Jarrow constituency and South Tyneside district council are listed. It is not possible to generate figures for Tyne and Wear because it does not have precisely defined boundaries. To date, there have been 346 awards in the north-east region for a total of £91,646,291. I will write to the hon. Member with a full list of these awards.

British Cycling Federation

Mr. Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what monitoring she conducts of the extent to which sports governing bodies let contracts in receipt of Sports Council grants to suppliers of goods and services in ways which are open and transparent and which comply with proper codes of accounting practice, with particular reference to the British Cycling Federation. [38695]

Mr. Sproat: Government support to individual governing bodies of sport is primarily channelled through the Sports Council, an independent body set up by royal charter. All sports governing bodies in receipt of Sports Council grants are required to have their annual accounts audited and to supply a copy of these audited accounts to the Sports Council. The Sports Council's liaison officers have regular informal meetings with officials of the governing bodies and have the right to attend meetings of relevant committees. This applies to the British Cycling Federation. The Comptroller and Auditor General may conduct more detailed audits. The Sports Council also has the right to conduct more detailed audits and the council's management audit programme includes a review of the operations of a sample of governing bodies in receipt of Sports Council grants. The British Cycling Federation has a formal tendering process for contracts which is administered by the directors of the British Cycling Federation/British Cycling Federation Promotions Ltd. It is established custom and practice for members of the Executive to declare any conflict of interest.

Mr. Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what reports he has received from the auditors of the British Cycling Federation in relation to contractual links between the federation and (a) Impsport Ltd., (b) Fletcher Marketing and (c) Sports Ambassador Ltd. [38636]

Mr. Sproat: Government support to the individual governing bodies of sport is primarily channelled through the Sports Council, an independent body set up by royal charter. All sports governing bodies in receipt of Sports

Council grants are required to have their annual accounts audited and to supply a copy of these audited accounts to the Sports Council. I understand from the Sports Council that no report has been received, nor has one been requested, from the auditors of the British Cycling Federation in relation to contractual links between the Federation and (a) Impsport Ltd. (b) Fletcher Marketing and (c) Sports Ambassador Ltd.

Mr. Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what steps she will take to protect public funds given to the British Cycling Federation by the Sports Council in respect of the legal proceedings between the British Cycling Federation and its former president. [39135]

Mr. Sproat: The Sports Council has advised the British Cycling Federation formally that the grant it receives cannot be used to pay any legal fees or costs associated with the legal proceedings between the British Cycling Federation and its former president. The Sports Council's liaison officers have regular informal meetings with officials of the governing bodies and have the right to attend meetings of relevant committees. The Sports Council also has the right to conduct detailed audits and review the operations of governing bodies in receipt of Sports Council grants. The Sports Council will continue to monitor the position closely to ensure that the British Cycling Federation honours the terms of its agreement with the council.

Small Businesses

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on the impact of (a) her policies and (b) the work of her Department in helping small businesses in the past 12 months as against the previous 12 months; and if she will publish the performance indicators by which her Department monitors the impact and the statistical results of such monitoring. [39153]

Mr. Sproat: The Government recognise the crucial role played by small firms in the UK economy and aim to help them by providing sound economic conditions—keeping inflation and interest rates low; reducing legislative, administrative and taxation burdens; and where appropriate providing direct assistance in the form of specialist advice and support, and easing access to finance.

My Department has particular interest in the tourism industry. The overwhelming majority of tourism-related businesses are small firms, so the Department's sponsorship support for the industry mainly helps the small firms sector.

My Department has continued to pursue an active sponsorship role in relation to the tourism industry and develop its strategy to assist the industry in improving its competitiveness.

In November 1995, the Department and the English tourist board published "Hotels: The Consumer View", which summarised findings from research into consumer expectations of hotel accommodation. In March 1996, we published "Benchmarking for Smaller Hotels", the outcome of an innovative project to help small hoteliers improve quality, value for money and profitability. Some 50,000 copies of the report and a user-friendly self-assessment test have been disseminated. We will publish the findings of a wide-ranging review of the use of human resources in the tourism industry in the autumn, and with the ETB we have commissioned a study of the domestic tourism market designed to help us determine how the Department and tourist boards can most productively intervene in the future.

The Department has continued to work within the Government to ease the burden of regulation and red tape on the tourism industry. There has been significant progress in this area, with many measures that we have taken benefiting the industry. For example, new risk assessment-based food hygiene regulations came into effect on 15 September 1995. Liquor licensing and Sunday trading restrictions have been relaxed. Revised regulations, significantly widening eligibility for white-on-brown directional road signs to tourist attractions and facilities, came into effect in January 1996. The industry was able to voice its current concerns on regulatory issues at the tourism and hospitality deregulation seminar in Brighton on 15 May 1996. The tourism industry is represented on the permanent deregulation task force. On 14 June 1996, the Department announced the formation of a group of tourism and hospitality experts to complement the work of the Department and the tourist boards in helping to improve the industry's international competitiveness.

The national lottery, which began in November 1994, has also benefited many small businesses; in particular, the thousands of small retailers who sell tickets, and businesses offering ancillary services to the lottery operator. Camelot Group plc's 1995–96 results revealed that a total of £265 million had been paid to retailers in the financial year, an average of £8,750 per outlet.

My Department will continue to work within Government to set the right climate within which small tourism-related businesses can flourish. The Department is represented on the ministerial group on small firms.

Manchester Velodrome

Mr. Trickett: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on the financial future of the Manchester velodrome following the threat of legal action between the British Cycling Federation and its former president; and what contingency plans the Government have in place to protect the future of the velodrome. [39136]

Mr. Sproat: The Manchester velodrome is protected by being operated by a separate legal entity—Manchester Velodrome Ltd. This company is a wholly owned subsidiary of the British Cycling Federation. The Sports Council has entered into a formal agreement with Manchester Velodrome Ltd. which requires the operational and accounting records of the company to be kept clearly separate from the records of any other activities of the British Cycling Federation and its associated companies and any related organisations, and that all transactions between these parties is to be on a full commercial basis.

Sports Council

Mr. Hargreaves: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement about the appointment of ministerial nominees to the new English Sports Council. [40020]

Mr. Sproat: I am pleased to announce that, at a meeting of the Privy Council on 23 July, Her Majesty the Queen approved the grant of charters establishing the English and United Kingdom sports councils. The new charters will come into effect later in the summer and the sports councils will be fully operational on the new basis after the summer break.

The Secretary of State for National Heritage intends to appoint up to five ministerial nominees in each region of the English Sports Council to promote the development and practice of sport in those regions. Further nominees will be announced in due course, drawing on suggestions from the sector. For the present the Secretary of State proposes to appoint the following persons and designate them under provision in the new charter to work alongside the English Sports Council:

National Lottery (Interest Receipts)

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what interest was received in 1995 by the Treasury for national lottery funds it holds for distribution to each of the commissions with responsibilities for the allocation of funds to individual projects. [40041]

Mr. Sproat: None. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State is responsible for the national lottery distribution fund and interest on funds not yet drawn down by the distributing bodies accrue to the NLDF itself for the benefit of the good causes.

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what interest was received in 1995–96 by Camelot for national lottery funds it holds for distribution to each of the commissions with responsibilities for the allocation of funds to individual projects. [40040]

Mr. Sproat: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the summer recess. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what was the interest received in 1995–96 on funds held prior to such allocation and payment in respect of each of the commissions set up for the distribution of national lottery funds allocated to individual projects. [40042]

Mr. Sproat: Interest gains on moneys held in the national lottery distribution fund were £66,416,000 for 1995–96.

War Memorials

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what is her policy with respect to the removal of or change of site of war memorials (a) throughout the country and (b) in the district local authority area of Stafford district council. [40005]

Mr. Sproat: My Department's interest in war memorials relates to whether they are statutorily protected as scheduled ancient monuments or listed buildings. In such cases, under the Ancient Monuments and Archaeological Areas Act 1979 and the Planning (Listed Buildings and Conservation Areas) Act 1990, scheduled monument or listed building consent would be required for their resiting or removal. Applications for scheduled monument and listed building consent are made to the Secretary of State for National Heritage and the local planning authority respectively. Any such applications would be considered in the light of the policies set out in planning policy guidance notes 15 and 16.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Harvey: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the constituencies she has visited in the past three months on official business and the constituencies she intends to visit in the next three months; and if she will make a statement. [34358]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: In the three months to 20 June, I visited the following constituencies on official business: Battersea; Brent, North; Brighton, Kemptown;

Brighton, Pavilion; Cambridge; City of London and Westminster, South; Croydon, North-West; Ellesmere Port and Neston; Guildford; Hackney, South and Shoreditch; Hampstead and Highgate; Islington, South and Finsbury; Islington, North; Kensington; Liverpool Riverside; Southwark and Bermondsey; Staffordshire Moorlands; Stratford-on-Avon; Twickenham; Vauxhall; Watford; Westbury; and Worthing.

It is not normal practice to make public details of forward diaries.

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many visits (i) she and (ii) her Ministers made to (a) the Newbury constituency and (b) other constituencies in the last 12 months. [39873]

Mr. Sproat: No Minister in the Department of National Heritage has visited the Newbury constituency in the last 12 months.

A full breakdown of visits that Ministers in the Department of National Heritage have made to other constituencies could be supplied only at disproportionate cost.

Channel 5

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the parliamentary constituencies in which (a) no reception and (b) partial reception of the channel 5 television service will be available. [39741]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before the summer recess. I shall therefore write to the right hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Libraries of the House.

Departmental Vehicles (Traffic Violations)

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the number of traffic violations involving departmental vehicles, the nature of the violations, and the total amount of fines arising from those violations, in each year since 1986. [39304]

Mr. Sproat: My Department owns no vehicles. Of my two agencies a departmental vehicle of Historic Royal Palaces was issued with a parking ticket in 1993. The fine was £20.

Millennium Exhibition

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a progress report on the plans for the millennium exhibition funding. [39785]

Mr. Sproat: The Millennium Commission, which is responsible for the organisation and funding of the millennium exhibition, is making satisfactory progress. My right hon. Friend will reply to the hon. Member in her capacity as chairman of the commission setting out the current position in more detail, placing copies of her response in the Libraries of the House.

Licences

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the licences issued by her Department; for what purpose they are issued; and what are the administrative costs for each. [38676]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 23 July 1996]: My Department issues only one licence. This is used to permit the legal export of cultural objects from the UK. The administrative costs are not available.

HEALTH

Nurses (Cheshire)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of nurses employed by the health authorities in Cheshire for each of the last five years; and what was the national average number of nurses employed by health authorities in each of those years. [36492]

Mr. Horam: The information is shown in the table. Figures in the table represent nursing and midwifery staff employed by district health authorities and, therefore, do not include staff employed by national health service trusts.

NHS Hospital and Community Health Services (HCHS) Nursing and Midwifery Staff (excluding Agency) employed by District Health Authorities (DHAs) in Cheshire and the Average Number of Nursing and Midwifery Staff employed by Health Authorities in England at 30 September 1990 to 1994

Negligence

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information the national health service litigation authority has compiled or is compiling on medical negligence cases and claims. [37332]

Mr. Horam: The national health service litigation authority compiles such information as it deems to be necessary to carry out its delegated functions.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish a list of trusts in each region which (a) have and (b) have not subscribed to the clinical negligence scheme for trusts, indicating the cost of each annual premium. [37331]

Mr. Horam: An updated list of members and non-members of the clinical negligence scheme for trusts will be placed in the Library. The scheme is voluntary and is open to all national health service trusts in England. The clinical negligence scheme for trusts represents a pooling arrangement between trusts which is in its first year of operation. Until the scheme has had an opportunity to mature it would not be appropriate to give details of the contribution of individual trusts.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 4 December, Official Report, column 44, if he will publish the latest information on clinical negligence claims settled by individual trusts. [37442]

Mr. Horam: I will write to the hon. Member.

Contracts

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will publish a list showing the number, nature and value of contracts awarded by his Department to Coopers and Lybrand, KPMG, Price Waterhouse, Ernst and Young, Deloitte and Touche, Arthur Andersen, Grant Thornton, BDO Stoy Hayward, Pannell Kerr Forster, and Robson Rhodes and their subsidiaries and associates, during 1995 and 1996. [37327]

Mr. Horam: Information regarding the number of contracts awarded by this Department is not available centrally. The total sums paid those firms listed in 1995–96 are as follows:

	1995–96 £
Coopers and Lybrand	nil
KPMG	620,110
Price Waterhouse	97,932
Ernst and Young	nil
Deloitte and Touche	63,150
Arthur Andersen	nil
Grant Thornton	nil
BDO Stoy Hayward	42,000
Pannell Kerr Forster	nil
Robson Rhodes	nil

NHS Litigation Authority

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the members and occupations of the litigation authority and place in the Library all declarations of interests they have made. [37333]

Mr. Horam: The national health service litigation authority currently has two members: the chairman, Sir Bruce Martin QC, who is a company chairman, and Mr. Ron Bradshaw, a solicitor. An exercise to appoint additional members is currently under way. Declarations of interests for all members will be available from the litigation authority.

HIV (Drug Therapy)

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health whether two or three drug combination therapy for those with HIV is approved for support within (a) the GP prescribing scheme and (b) hospital trust pharmacies, and if he will make a statement. [37564]

Mr. Horam: Where different drug regimes are available, it is a matter for general practitioners to discuss with patients and decide on the best form of treatment. Likewise, hospital clinicians prescribe medicines to meet patients' clinical needs, and these are supplied by the hospital pharmacy. Unlicensed drugs can be prescribed on a named patient basis. No specific instructions have been issued on drug combination therapies for HIV, but the Department recommends developing local strategies for the managed entry of new medicines into the national health service, making use of evidence of their clinical and cost effectiveness.

Pharmaceutical Services

Mr. Nigel Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on his policy for the future of independent community pharmacists. [38013]

Mr. Malone: Community pharmacists play an important part in the primary care team. We are committed to using their skills more effectively in a wider role.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list those dispensing companies with more than 10 outlets and the number of prescriptions each of those companies dispensed in each year since 1990; [38011]

(2) what proportion of prescriptions were dispensed by independent pharmacists or companies with fewer than 10 outlets in each year since 1990. [38012]

Mr. Malone: This information is not available centrally.

Hospitals (Joint Ventures)

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many joint ventures are currently established between the NHS and the private sector in hospitals covering the Greater London area; and if he will list each project and hospital involved. [37858]

Mr. Horam: There are eight schemes currently completed or under way in the Greater London area—London boroughs included—that have gone forward under the private finance initiative. A number of other joint ventures are established for schemes which have not yet had full business case approval. Information is shown in the table.

PFI schemes with a capital value of £1 million or more in the Greater London Area

Key:
FBC = full business case.
ITN = invitation to negotiate.

Disease Research

Dr. Spink: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what public funds were spent in the last financial year on research to find a treatment or cure for (a) AIDS, (b) cancer, (c) heart disease and (d) Alzheimer's disease per victim of that disease. [37891]

Mr. Horam: Information is not available to produce comparable estimates of research expenditure per individual.

Hospital Building Projects

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many new NHS hospital building projects are currently being carried out in England and Wales; and for how many funding has been allocated. [37859]

Mr. Horam: There are currently 70 major national health service building projects under construction in England. Information on minor schemes is not available centrally.

Funding must be secured prior to any project being approved.

Doctors (Early Retirement)

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for each of the last 10 years the number of NHS doctors who (i) applied for retirement on grounds of ill health, (ii) were successful in such applications without resorting to appeal, (iii) were unsuccessful and (a) appealed and (b) were successful on appeal and (iv) retired early by staff grade; if he will estimate the annual cost of these early retirements in terms of payments made to former NHS doctors prior to their normal retirement age; and if he will make a statement on the retirement rate for NHS doctors on grounds of ill health relative to other similar professionals. [38029]

Mr. Malone: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the National Health Service Pensions Agency under its chief executive, Mr. A. F. Cowan. I have asked him to reply to the hon. Member.

Letter from A. F. Cowan to Mr. Hugh Bayley, dated 22 July 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question as it falls within my area of responsibility.

The only information readily available on ill-health retirement for specific categories of NHS employees is derived from the Government Actuary's Department quinquennial valuation of the Pension Scheme. Unfortunately it does not provide a yearly breakdown.

Figures in respect of doctors retiring on the grounds of ill-health are:

Doctors—early retirement due to ill-health

554	748

These statistics relate to successful applications where ill-health retirement was granted. No information is gathered about unsuccessful applications by employment type.

Water Tower Mental Hospitals

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 11 June, Official Report, column 111, whether the national survey by the NHS executive of the water tower mental hospitals in England will provide the same information as the previous surveys conducted for the mental health task force. [38434]

Mr. Malone: The survey will be conducted by the national health service executive regional offices. It will provide information on water tower hospitals in the context of health authority plans whereas the review commissioned by the mental health task force collected information on a trust-by-trust basis.

Small Businesses

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the impact of (a) his policies and (b) the work of his Department in helping small businesses in the last 12 months as against the previous 12 months; and if he will publish the performance indicators by which his Department monitors the impact and the statistical results of such monitoring. [39140]

Mr. Horam: The Government recognise the crucial role played by small firms in the United Kingdom economy and aim to help them by providing sound economic conditions—keeping inflation and interest rates low; reducing legislative administrative and taxation burdens; and where appropriate provide direct assistance in the form of specialist advice and support and easing access to finance.

In October 1995 the Department appointed a small business Minister who continues to be actively involved in the various measures being taken forward across government by the small business Ministers' initiative.

The Department has created a new sponsorship branch to deal with the health care medical systems industry, which is dominated by small businesses, and has begun a regular series of meetings with the lead trade association to identify those issues which need to be addressed if the industry is to maintain its competitive performance.

The Department is particularly sensitive to the effect of new regulations on business, especially small businesses. It is taking action to stem the flow of new regulations and to make sure that those that are introduced are better regulations. We have promoted a sensitive approach to small businesses on food safety enforcement matters. This has included issuing guidance to local authorities and, recently, making an order under the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994 to provide new rights of representation and a period of notice before certain enforcement action is taken. On 15 September 1995, 12 sets of regulations were replaced with two for general food hygiene and temperature controls. Temperature controls provide for significant potential savings in the food industry, which includes many small businesses. Two regional small business panels have been set up to act as sounding board for small food businesses.

Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Act 1970

Sir Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was (a) the total number of persons, (b) persons aged under 16, (c) persons aged 16 to 64, (d) persons aged 65 to 74 and (e) persons aged over 65 years who were provided with (i) telephones and attachments, (ii) telephone rentals and (iii) other services by local authorities for the year ended 31 March 1995 under the terms of the Chronically Sick and Disabled Persons Act 1970; and if he will provide this information by (1) county councils, (2) metropolitan districts, (3) inner London boroughs, (4) outer London boroughs and (5) in total. [38910]

Mr. Malone: This information is not available centrally.

Smoke Alarms

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will encourage the free distribution of smoke alarms by health visitors and community care organisations. [38912]

Mr. Malone: Safety in the home is something which all agencies concerned with community care seek to promote. Fire precautions specifically, however, are a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for the Home Department.

Accident Survivors

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will commission a study into factors affecting help-seeking behaviour in survivors of accidents with psychological trauma symptoms; and if he will make a statement. [39228]

Mr. Malone: No. The factors affecting help-seeking behaviour by survivors of trauma are many and varied. In each individual case, referral for specialist help is a matter for each patient and his or her general practitioner. Many non-national health service and other organisations provide valuable assistance in this area and complement that which is provided in the NHS.

Tamoxifen

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will commission a study into adjuvant Tamoxifen treatment; and if he will make a statement. [39206]

Mr. Horam: The Department has no such plans. At least 20 studies have been undertaken into adjuvant Tamoxifen treatment for breast cancer in this country and abroad since 1994.

ALFINN Study

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will commission research into an ALFINN study; and if he will make a statement. [39207]

Mr. Horam: I will write to the hon. Member.

Drugs

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will commission a study into an extended access programme for 3TC1; and if he will make a statement. [39208]

Mr. Horam: We do not run extended access programmes in the United Kingdom but clinicians can approach manufacturers of unlicensed drugs, such as 3TC—lamivudine—to request permission to prescribe the drug for named patients.

Commissioned Research

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will commission double-blind, multi-centre, randomised, parallel group study on the effect of varying dosages and frequency of the use of Colofac; and if he will make a statement; [39209]

(2) if he will commission a study into a double-blind, randomised, parallel group, placebo-controlled, multi-centre to evaluate the efficacy of Lexipafant (BB-882) in patients with acute pancreatitis; and if he will make a statement; [39220]

(3) if he will commission a study into Famotidine as a treatment for nocturnal heartburn; and if he will make a statement; [39211]

(4) if he will commission a randomised, double-blind, parallel group multi-centre study to compare Ranitidine Bismuth CXitrate (GC311) 400 mg bd in combination with either (a) clarithromycin 250 mg qds or (b) 500 mg bd for the eradication of Helicobacter pylori with duodenal ulcer; and if he will make a statement; [39213]

(5) if he will commission a study, into the relationship biochemical properties, biochemical composition and the ultrastructural organisation of human articular cartilage; and if he will make a statement. [39219]

Mr. Malone: There are no plans at present to commission these studies. Research commissioned within the Department's policy research programme is set out in "Centrally Commissioned Research Programme" and "Centrally Commissioned Research Programme: Commissions 1994/95", copies of which are available in the Library.

Pressure Ulcers

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will commission a study into the effects of IodoflexR versus IntraSiteR gel in the treatment of pressure ulcers; and if he will make a statement. [39210]

Mr. Malone: The Department of Health, and the Medical Research Council, which is the main agency through which the Government support biomedical and clinical research, normally commission studies which compare the effectiveness of a broad range of possible treatments and interventions. The Department and the MRC are, however, always willing to consider soundly based scientific proposals in competition with other applications.

St. Ann's Hospital

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what reports he has received about patients sleeping on the floor at St. Ann's hospital in north London. [39258]

Mr. Malone: A recent Mental Health Act Commission report on a visit to St. Ann's hospital criticised Haringey Healthcare NHS trust for the inappropriate use of seclusion rooms. The trust has now addressed this problem and patients no longer use the seclusion rooms as temporary bedrooms.

General Practice

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the extension of the NHS performance guide to include general practices. [39268]

Mr. Malone: The 1995–96 NHS performance guide includes information on four primary care indicators at health authority level. We have no plans to extend the NHS performance guide to include figures for individual practices.

NHS Board Members

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nurses are on the board of (a) the NHS executive and (b) the NHS policy board. [39272]

Mr. Malone: The national health service director of nursing, Mrs. Yvonne Moores, is a member of both the NHS executive and the NHS policy boards.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many executive and non-executive directors of health authorities are qualified nurses. [39271]

Mr. Malone: Information about the executive membership of health authorities is not available centrally. Our records show that 13 non-executive members of health authorities have a background in nursing.

Road Accidents (Children)

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what (i) proposals he has and (ii) targets he set for reducing death and injuries to children on the road. [39280]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Transport on 23 July, Official Report, columns 139–40.

Epilepsy

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will commission a multi-centre trial to assess the effect of a once-daily Epilim Chrono regimen in epileptic patients established on a twice-daily enteric-coated tablet regimen; and if he will make a statement. [39212]

Mr. Malone: The Department of Health, and the Medical Research Council, which is the main agency through which the Government support biomedical and clinical research, normally commission studies which compare the effectiveness of a broad range of possible treatments and interventions. The Department and the MRC are, however, always willing to consider soundly based scientific proposals in competition with other applications.

The Department's health technology assessment programme intends to call for proposals for research comparing the effectiveness of new anti-epileptic drugs and existing therapies.

Blood Pressure

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will commission a study into (a) a comparison of patient self-measurement of blood pressure using automatic sphygmomanometers with general practitioner measurements and its relevance to therapeutics decision making and (b) general practitioner use of Coversyl as standard treatment; and if he will make a statement. [39214]

Mr. Horam: Clinical studies are normally matters for the Medical Research Council which receives it grant in aid from the office of my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade, and other bodies which fund clinical research.

Nurse Prescribing Scheme

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about progress on the nurse prescribing scheme. [39274]

Mr. Malone: The nurse prescribing trial was extended on 1 April 1996 to a further 60 general practitioner sites in Bolton. The evaluation of the original eight pilot sites will be published in the autumn. The extended pilot will be evaluated separately, with a report due in late 1997.

Consultant Psychiatrists

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the number of consultant psychiatrist vacancies. [39260]

Mr. Malone: The available information is contained in the Department of Health annual medical and dental work force census, 30 September 1994, copies of which are available in the Library.

Teenage Mothers

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the proportion of teenagers having babies in each EU country. [39259]

Mr. Horam: The fertility rates per 1,000 women aged 15 to 19 for 1990, the most recent year for which comparable data are available, are shown in the table.

	Fertility rate
England and Wales	33.3
Scotland	31.9
Northern Ireland	29.3

	Fertility rate
Portugal	24.6
Greece	21.8
Austria	21.3
Republic of Ireland	16.2
Sweden	14.1
Spain	13.4
Finland	12.4
West Germany	11.6
Italy	9.8
Belgium	9.3
Denmark	9.1
France	8.8
Netherlands	6.4
Luxembourg	no data

Hospital Bedside Televisions

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average charge to patients for bedside televisions in NHS hospitals. [39269]

Mr. Horam: Arrangements and charges for optional personal bedside television are a local management matter on which information is not available centrally.

Nurses (Redundancies)

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many nurses have been made redundant under his initiative to reduce manage nent levels. [39273]

Mr. Malone: The information is not available centrally.

Emergency Bed Service (London)

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the cost of the London emergency bed service in each of the last five years; and what were the sources of its budget. [39279]

Mr. Malone: This information is not available centrally.

Assaults on NHS Staff

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS staff have been assaulted on NHS premises in each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [39267]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available centrally.

Oral Contraceptives

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will commission an open-label, multi-centre study to determine the efficacy and safety of a 24-day regimen of monophasic oral contraceptive preparation of gestodene 6µg and ethinyl estradion 15µg; and if he will make a statement. [39217]

Mr. Malone: We have no plans to do so.

Mental Health Tribunals

Mr. Cann: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he has taken since March with regard to the constitution of mental health tribunals. [39244]

Mr. Malone: None.

NHS Doctors

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) GPs and (b) hospital doctors are currently in post in the NHS. [39823]

Mr. Malone: There were 26,702 unrestricted principals in England on 1 October 1995 and there were 44,660 whole-time equivalent hospital doctors on 30 September 1994.

Pisces Project

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what arrangements were made to advertise the Pisces project in the contract supplement of the Official Journal of the EU; [39807]

(2) if he will list the cost of the Track software acquired for the Pisces project from the Intelligent Office Company Ltd. of Hammersmith and the process by which it was selected; [39799]

(3) what was the original estimated cost of the Pisces project; and what is his latest estimate of the outturn cost; [39809]

(4) if he will list the methods used to select the project manager for Pisces; [39808]

(5) if he will list the principal expected benefits from the Pisces project and the years in which they were expected to arise. [39810]

Mr. Horam: The Pisces project is an initiative of Liverpool health authority. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman for details.

Airborne Particulates

Sir Graham Bright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the link between airborne particulates and premature death; [39553]

(2) what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the potential beneficial effects of reducing airborne particulate levels in urban areas; [39554]

(3) what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the link between airborne particulate levels and asthma. [39556]

Mr. Horam: In November 1995 the Department of Health published a report of the expert advisory Committee on the Medical Effects of Air Pollutants, "Non-Biological Particles and Health", copies of which are in the Library.

Further research has been commissioned under the joint Department of Health, Department of the Environment and Medical Research Council research strategy on air pollution and respiratory disease.

Sir Graham Bright: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what level of airborne particulates his Department currently assesses to be safe. [39555]

Mr. Horam: The Department of the Environment's expert panel on air quality standards, to which this Department contributes, has made a recommendation for an air quality standard for particulates (PM_{10}) in the United Kingdom of 50 µg/m³, measured as a 24-hour running average. The panel considered that very few individuals in the population will react adversely to this concentration of particles.

Health Authorities (Invoices)

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the average number of invoices sent out by health authorities in the last year. [39747]

Mr. Horam: This information is not held centrally.

Dental Services

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many dental practices in each South Yorkshire metropolitan borough council accepted NHS patients in 1995; [39791]

(2) how many dental practices in each North Yorkshire borough council accepted NHS patients in 1995; [39793]

(3) how many dental practices in each Humberside borough council accepted NHS patients in 1995; [39792]

(4) how many dental practices in each West Yorkshire borough council accepted NHS patients in 1995. [39794]

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dentists claimed NHS fees in each of the last five years nationally and by region. [39826]

Mr. Malone: I will write to the hon. Members.

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many new NHS registrations with a dental practitioner occurred in each six-monthly period between January 1990 and January 1994 and in each month since January 1994; and how many of these are estimated to have been duplicate registrations. [38848]

Mr. Malone: The information available is shown in the table. It is not possible to provide a reliable estimate of how many of the additions to dentists' registers were duplicate registrations.

Formal registration system came into operation in October 1990 with the beginning of the new dental contract.

Additions to registers include registration of patients after a break in attendance and reinstatement of registrations that have been cancelled in error. Additions also include transfers from one dentists to another, changes of surname, and patients being transferred from capitation to continuing care arrangements.

The date refers to the month in which the addition would have first appeared in the registration statistics. Payment is made a month in arrears.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS patients were registered with a dental practitioner in (a) April 1994, (b) April 1995 and (c) April 1996. [38847]

Mr. Malone: The information is set out in the table.

Number of patients registered with a National Health Service dentist at the end of April, 1994–96

	Number of patients registered
	Adults	Children	Total
April 1994	21,447,217	6,916,912	28,364,129
April 1995	20,463,447	6,746,544	27,209,991
April 1996	19,782,487	6,786,617	26,569,104

1. Excludes patients registered with salaried dentists.

2. Since May 1994 the Dental Practice Board has improved procedures for eliminating duplicate registrations. This has produced downward pressure on the levels of registrations over this period.

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of dentists in (a) Wiltshire and (b) Salisbury parliamentary constituency, in each of the last five years, who will treat (i) NHS patients only, (ii) NHS and private patients and (ii) private patients only; and if he will make a statement. [38984]

Mr. Malone: The information available in set out in the table.

General Dental Service: Number of dentists practising in Wiltshire Family Health Services Authority at 30 September

	Number of dentists at 30 September
1991	158
1992	173
1993	170
1995	178

Includes principals on the Family Health Services Authority list for Wiltshire together with assistants and vocational trainees. Some principals may be on more than one Family Health Services Authority list; these dentists have been included where Wiltshire was the FHSA in which the dentist's fee income was greatest. Salaried dentists are excluded.

Single Tender Contracts

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance is issued to civil servants regarding (a) their dealings with applicants for single tender contracts and (b) the provision of written advice to such applicants. [39815]

Mr. Horam: Guidance on single tender action is contained in two internal Department of Health publications, "Purchasing and Supply Manual" and "Guidance Notes on the use of Management Consultants".

The Department's policy is generally to avoid single tender action, but accepts that it may be justifiable in very limited circumstances, for example, where the work is an extension of a recently completed contract and it can be clearly demonstrated that this achieves better value for money or where the expertise required is available only from one source. Applicants are not advised that they are providing the sole tender.

NHS Number Programme

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the initial cost of the new NHS number programme; and what is the estimated cost to date and his latest estimated full outturn cost. [39771]

Mr. Horam: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements were made to advertise the new NHS number programme in the contract supplement of the Official Journal of the EU. [39769]

Mr. Horam: The new national health service number programme has complied with the European Union regulations on procurement where these were applicable. The following contracts were advertised in the contract supplement of the Official Journal of the EU:

The contract for development of a new NHS central register

The contract for provision of a service to trace new NHS numbers

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what date the new NHS number programme was submitted for Treasury approval; on what date such approval was granted; and on what date the project commenced. [39770]

Mr. Horam: The business case for the new NHS number was submitted for Treasury approval in March 1994. Approval was granted in April 1994, and the terms of reference for the programme were agreed by the new NHS number programme board in August 1994.

Hospitality Budgets

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the hospitality budget of his Department, the NHS executive and the regional offices hospitality budget for (a) 1996–97 and (b) 1995–96. [39832]

Mr. Horam: I will write to the hon. Member.

PIMS Project

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements were made to advertise the PIMS—performance indicators for management systems—project in the contract supplement of the Official Journal of the EU. [39811]

Mr. Horam: The Department has framework agreements with a number of companies covering various categories of information technology work, which were awarded after an EC/GATT procurement. The contracts for the performance information management system were awarded following competitions between companies with framework agreements in appropriate categories.

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what date the performance indicators for the management systems project was submitted for Treasury approval; on what date such approval was granted; on what date the project commenced; and at what estimated cost. [39813]

Mr. Horam: Performance indicators for management systems commenced in November 1994 at an estimated cost within departmental delegated limits. Treasury approval has not therefore been necessary.

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what independent evaluation there has been of the expected benefits of the PIMS project as to volume standard and time scale. [39812]

Mr. Horam: These topics are covered in post-implementation reviews, which are carried out at the end of major information technology projects. They are conducted by independent companies drawn from those with which the Department has framework agreements. PIMS is still under development and a PIR is not yet appropriate.

Mental Health

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what percentage of the NHS budget was spent on mental health care in each of the last five years, nationally and by region. [39727]

Mr. Malone: The information is not available in the form requested.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients compulsorily detained under the Mental Health Act 1983 are currently residing in hospitals for the mentally handicapped. [39733]

Mr. Malone: In 1994–95, the latest year for which information is currently available, there were 304 formal admissions of patients detained under the Mental Health Act 1983 and classified as mentally impaired or severely mentally impaired.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if patients compulsorily detained on hospital sites under the Mental Health Act 1983 are allowed to mix with mentally handicapped patients residing in the same hospital. [39732]

Mr. Malone: The Mental Health Act 1983 does not prescribe such matters for those detained under its powers.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many formal admissions of patients detained under the Mental Health Act 1983 there were by health authority in each year between 1990–91 and 1994–95. [39761]

Mr. Malone: I will write to the hon. Member.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many mental health beds there were in the NHS in each of the last five years. [39728]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply by my hon. Friend the then Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Battersea (Mr. Bowis), gave the hon. Member of Birmingham, Selly Oak (Dr. Jones) on 29 February, Official Report, columns 687–89.

Prescribed Drugs

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average cost to the NHS of prescribed drugs dispensed (a) through a general practitioner dispensary and (b) in a pharmacy. [39751]

Mr. Malone: The available information is shown in the table.

Average net ingredient cost per prescription, 1995

England

Prescriptions dispensed by	Average net ingredient cost per prescription fee £
Dispensing doctors	7.38
Community pharmacists and appliance contractors	7.65

1. The data are from the Prescription Pricing Authority PD1 series of forms and prescriptions are based on fees.

2. The net ingredient cost refers to the cost of the drug before discounts and does not include any dispensing costs or fees.

Lung Cancer

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance he has issued on the maximum waiting time for treatment of lung cancer. [39828]

Mr. Horam: It is not appropriate to have a maximum waiting time for treatment of lung cancer. Each case is different and it must be for doctors to decide when treatment should be provided. Patients are placed on a waiting list only if, in the opinion of a clinician at the time of assessment, their condition is judged to be stable.

Extra-contractual Referrals

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the cost of administering the extra-contractual referrals system in each of the last 10 years. [39845]

Mr. Malone: This information is not available centrally.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many extra-contractual referrals there have been in each of the last 10 years; [39844]

(2) how many extra-contractual referrals were made in the last year (a) by trust, (b) regionally and (c) nationally. [39746]

Mr. Malone: Information on the numbers of extra-contractual referrals is not available centrally. I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Darlington (Mr. Milburn) on 11 July, Official Report, column 274, for information on the value of extra-contractual referrals for all available years.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list those trusts in South Yorkshire which have not to date signed contracts with their local authorities. [39795]

Mr. Horam: All health authorities in South Yorkshire have signed health care contracts with national health service trusts in South Yorkshire.

Hospital Services

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) hospital units and (b) accident and emergency units there were in each year since 1979. [39819]

Mr. Horam: I will write to the hon. Member.

"Primary Care—The Future"

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many general practitioners, managers and nurses he has consulted in the course of the listening exercise "Primary Care—The Future". [39759]

Mr. Malone: The range and variety of consultation are outlined in the annexe to "Primary Care: The Future", published on 10 June 1996, copies of which were placed in the Library.

Hospital Waiting Lists

Sir Terence Higgins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the newspaper article sent to him by the right hon. Member for Worthing in respect of the waiting lists for patients of (a) fundholding general practitioners and (b) non-fundholding general practitioners. [39630]

Mr. Malone: I will write to my right hon. Friend.

GP Pharmacies

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the practice of general practitioners converting their dispensaries into pharmacies. [39749]

Mr. Malone: It is open to a dispensing doctor to apply to the Royal Pharmaceutical Society of Great Britain to register his premises as a pharmacy. He would need to meet legal and ethical requirements such as the availability of a pharmacist whenever pharmaceutical services were being provided.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many dispensing general practices there were in each of the last five years. [39750]

Mr. Malone: The available information is shown in the table.

Dispensing General Practices 1992–95 in England

	Number of dispensing general practices
1995	1,214
1994	1,212
1993	1,202
1992	1,197

Source:
Derived from General Medical Services Census October 1992–1995.
Note:
Data on number of dispensing practices for 1991 are incomplete and unreliable.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated on patients' preferences in relation to the dispensing of NHS prescriptions from (i) a general practitioner dispensary and (ii) a pharmacy. [39752]

Mr. Malone: None.

Memphis Project

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on what date the Memphis project was submitted for Treasury approval; on what date such approval was granted; and on what date the project commenced and at what estimated cost. [39817]

Mr. Horam: The Memphis project commenced in 1994 and was completed in August 1995. The cost was within departmental delegated limits. Treasury approval was therefore unnecessary.

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the cost of the Track software and acquired for the Memphis project from the Intelligent Office Company Ltd. of Hammersmith; and if he will give details of the competitive tendering procedure used in the acquisition of the Track software for the Memphis project. [39800]

Mr. Horam: The cost of the software is subject to commercial confidentiality. It was procured from a company through one of the Department's EC/GATT contracts.

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what arrangements were made to advertise the Memphis project in the contract supplement of the Official Journal of the EU. [39816]

Mr. Horam: The Department has framework agreements with a number of companies covering various categories of information technology work, which were awarded after an EC/GATT procurement. The contracts for Memphis were awarded following competitions between companies with framework agreements in appropriate categories.

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what independent evaluation there has been of the expected benefits of the Memphis project as to volume, standard and time scale. [39814]

Mr. Horam: These topics are covered in post-implementation reviews, which are carried out at the end of major information technology projects. They are conducted by independent companies drawn from those with which the Department has framework agreements. A PIR was carried out at the end of the Memphis project.

Leukaemia (Newbury)

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what studies (a) are taking place and (b) he proposes into levels of leukaemia and related disorders in the Newbury district. [39717]

Mr. Horam: The Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment—COMARE—has considered allegations of increased incidence of childhood cancer around a number of nuclear establishments. Its third report considered whether there was any association in local childhood cancer incidence in west Berkshire and north Hampshire and exposure to radioactivity from the nuclear establishments which were then known as the Atomic Weapons Research Establishment, Aldermaston, the Royal Ordnance factory, Burghfield, and the Atomic Energy Research Establishment, Harwell. The report did not include RAF Greenham Common.

In this report COMARE recommended that a study on the geographical distribution of childhood cancer incidence on a nationwide basis should be carried out. This study is currently under way and COMARE will consider all new data now available in assessing whether there is an association between local levels of contamination and cancer incidence.

Breast Lumps

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what guidance his Department has issued on the setting up of one-stop clinics for the treatment of breast lumps. [39834]

Mr. Horam: Guidance for purchasers on improving outcomes in breast cancer will be issued shortly. It will be for health authorities in consultation with their provider units to agree assessment, treatment and care arrangements for women with breast symptoms.

GP Fundholders

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what were the total savings of GP fundholders in the last year. [39729]

Mr. Malone: Final audited information for 1995–96 is not yet available.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the total cost of staff, equipment, computing and management costs in respect of GP fundholding practices in the last year. [39730]

Mr. Malone: Audited information is not available.

NHS Expenditure

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the amount of money reported by each health authority in England to his Department as its outturn spend for 1995–96 and its planned spend for 1996–97 in respect of (a) in-patient case for mental illness, (b) out-patient care for mental illness, (c) residential care for mental illness, (d) day care for mental illness, (e) community nursing care for mental illness, (f) in-patient care for learning disability, (g) out-patient care for learning disability, (h) residential care for learning disability, (i) day care for learning disability and (j) community nursing care for learning disability. [39830]

Mr. Malone: This information is not yet available.

Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 2 July, Official Report, column 367, how many highly suspect cases of the new strain of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease have been reported to the national surveillance unit in Edinburgh (a) up to the end of 1995, (b) in the quarter ending 31 March 1996 and (c) in the quarter ending 30 June 1996. [39846]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Linlithgow (Mr. Dalyell) on 23 July, Official Report, column 215, which explained that the term "highly suspect case" is not used in respect of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease. There are now 12 confirmed cases of the new variant of CJD. Of these, three died in 1995, five in the first quarter of 1996 and three in the second; one patient is still alive.

Mr. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the incubation period for (a) the normal strain as reported conventionally world wide, (b) the strain accidentally caused by pituitary hormone treatment and (c) the new strain reported on 20 March for CJD. [39843]

Mr. Horam: The vast majority of Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease are sporadic and occur spontaneously. It is not possible to ascertain how long a patient may have been incubating the disease before the clinical signs become evident. Studies of the Kuru epidemic in New Guinea showed incubation periods of between five and 30 years. In cases of iatrogenic infection incubation periods have varied from 18 months for central exposures to 25 years for peripheral exposures. The incubation time for the new variant of CJD is uncertain but is likely to be in the range of five to 20 years.

Single-sex Wards

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the number of single-sex wards as a percentage of the total in each of the last six years. [39821]

Mr. Horam: This information is not collected centrally.

Trust Hospitals (Invoices)

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the average number of invoices sent out by trust hospitals in the last year. [39745]

Mr. Horam: This information is not held centrally.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many visits (i) he and (ii) his Ministers made to (a) the Newbury constituency and (b) other constituencies in the last 12 months. [39870]

Mr. Horam: Since October 1995 no visits have been made to the Newbury constituency by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State or his ministerial colleagues. There have been 29 visits to other constituencies by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State and 199 visits by his ministerial colleagues.

General Practice Audit

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what powers the Audit Commission have to audit general practice. [39748]

Mr. Horam: Auditors appointed by the Audit Commission have powers to examine all general practice records necessary to validate national health service income and expenditure.

Community Pharmacists

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many NHS community pharmacists there were in each of the last five years. [39825]

Mr. Malone: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Littleborough and Saddleworth (Mr. Davies) on 17 June, Official Report, columns 352-53.

Young Runaways

Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the Centrepoint National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children report "Nowhere to Hide: Giving Young Runaways a Voice", a copy of which has been sent to him; and what proposals he has to address the problem for young runaways. [39651]

Mr. Malone: A copy of the published report has not yet been received. I shall consider the recommendations when I receive them.

Health Authority Programme

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what business case and option appraisal was carried out prior to the decision to commence the new health authority programme; and what is the estimated outturn cost of the new health authority programme. [39772]

Mr. Horam: Family Health Systems supplies the software to which modifications are needed in order for existing family health services authority based databases to operate effectively within new health authority boundaries. This work can be carried out only by the supplier; therefore no business case is required. The maximum estimated cost of this work is £1.4 million.

Modifications to the national health service central register will be needed in order for it to handle realigned databases. This work has yet to commence but a preliminary estimate of costs is that £300,000 will be required. The project initiation process will include more detailed consideration of costs and options.

Abortions

Mr. Merchant: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will give a breakdown by the procedure adopted of the number of abortions performed in the NHS South Thames region in the latest year for which figures are available. [39777]

Mr. Horam: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Hospital Emergency Admissions

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many emergency admissions to hospitals there were in each of the last four quarters. [39833]

Mr. Horam: I will write to the hon. Member.

Diabetes (Syringes)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will review the availability on prescription of needles for pen-type syringes for diabetes; and what consultations he has had recently concerning their inclusion on the prescription list. [39849]

Mr. Malone: We are considering representations on this matter which have been made by the British Diabetic Association.

Breast Cancer

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about the waiting time for breast cancer surgery at St. Bartholomew's hospital, London. [39828]

Mr. Malone: This is a matter for the Royal Hospitals national health service trust.

Trent RHA (Compensation)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful claims for compensation have been made against the Trent regional health authority during each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [39796]

Mr. Horam: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Practice Managers

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) practice managers and (b) practice administrative staff there were in each of the last five years. [39820]

Mr. Malone: The available information is contained in "Statistics for General Medical Practitioners in England 1985–1995 Bulletin 96/6 May 1996", copies of which are available in the Library.

Medical Audit

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was (a) his Department's and (b) the NHS executive's budget for medical audit in (i) 1994–95, (ii) 1995–96 and (iii) 1996–97. [39760]

Mr. Horam: I will write to the hon. Member.

Magnetic Resonance Imaging

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the reasons for the delay in publishing the health technology assessment project on cost-effectiveness of magnetic resonance imaging in the district general hospital; when he plans to publish it; and if he will make a statement. [39628]

Mr. Horam: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Computer Projects

Ms Eagle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the computer projects currently being (a) developed and (b) administered by the NHS executive and the cost to date of each and the latest estimated final outturn cost. [39818]

Mr. Horam: I will write to the hon. Member.

Greenham Common (Radiation)

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if the investigation by the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment into the incidence of childhood cancer in the West Berkshire and North Hampshire area was informed of the 1961 report by Cripps and Stimson into radiation around the Greenham air base. [39877]

Mr. Horam: The Cripps and Stimson report of July 1961 was not included in the Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation in the Environment investigation into the incidence of childhood cancer in the west Berkshire and north Hampshire area. This investigation, the results of which were published in COMARE's third report in 1989, was specifically related to the nuclear installations which were then known as the Atomic Weapons Research Establishment, Aldermaston, the Royal Ordnance factory, Burghfield, and the Atomic Energy Research Establishment, Harwell.

South Manchester University Hospital

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 19 July, Official Report, column 727, for what reasons he was unable to specify the fees paid by South Manchester University Hospital NHS trust to the Audit Commission; and if he will make a statement. [39625]

Mr. Horam: The trust has paid no fees to the Audit Commission.

Birth Rate

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the causes of current birth rate levels. [39831]

Mr. Horam: Birth data for 1996 are currently being processed by the Office for National Statistics and will not be published until later next year.

Smoking-related Diseases

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people died from smoking-related diseases in each of the last five years. [39822]

Mr. Horam: It is estimated that in the United Kingdom about 110,000 deaths each year are smoking related.

Publicity

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the cost, assumed in the budget, of people employed full time or part time to work on the press and the media in 1996–97. [39975]

Mr. Horam: I will write to the hon. Member.

Administration of Radioactive Substances Advisory Committee

Mr. Thomason: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the membership of the Administration of Radioactive Substances Advisory Committee. [40009]

Mr. Horam: The committee is chaired by Professor James McKillop, Muirhead Professor of Medicine at the University Department of Medicine, Glasgow. The 19 members are:

Dr. Paul Abram, N. Ireland Centre for Clinical Oncology, Belfast (Clinical Oncology);

Dr. Muriel Buxton-Thomas, King's College Hospital, London (Nuclear Medicine);

Dr. Helen Carty, Royal Liverpool Children's Hospital (Clinical Radiology);

Dr. Susan Clarke, Guy's and St. Thomas' Hospital, London (Nuclear Medicine);

Dr. Tony Coakley, Kent and Canterbury Hospital (Nuclear Medicine);

Dr. Malcolm Frier, University Hospital, Nottingham (Radiopharmacy);

Dr. Chris Gibson, Glan Clwyd Hospital, Rhyll (Physics);

Dr. Gerry Gillen, Stobhill Hospital, Glasgow (Physics);

Dr. Michael Henk, Royal Marsden Hospital, London (Clinical Oncology);

Dr. Stuart Hesselwood, City Hospital, Birmingham (Radiopharmacy);

Dr. Stephen Mather, St. Bartholomew's Hospital, London (Radiopharmacy);

Professor Ralph McCready, Royal Marsden Hospital, Sutton (Nuclear Medicine);

Dr. Peter Mountford, Royal Infirmary, Stoke on Trent (Physics);

Dr. Tom Nunan, Guy's and St. Thomas' Hospital, London (Nuclear Medicine);

Dr. Mary Prescott, Manchester Royal Infirmary (Nuclear Medicine);

Dr. John Stather, National Radiological Protection Board (Radiobiology);

Dr. Wendy Tindale, Royal Hallamshire Hospital, Sheffield (Physics);

Dr. Derek Waller, Southampton General Hospital (Clinical Pharmacology);

Mr. John Watkinson, Queen Elizabeth Hospital, Birmingham (Surgery).

Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to advertise for membership of the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority. [40010]

Mr. Horam: There will be a number of vacancies in membership of the authority later this year. We are considering how best to ensure that applications for these vacancies are invited from as wide a field as possible of suitable people. This is likely to include advertising in the national press.

Mr. Duncan Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he intends to make available the management statement agreed with the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority. [40011]

Mr. Horam: Copies of the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority's management statement have today been placed in the Library.

Bristol Royal Infirmary

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will set up an inquiry into the delivery of paediatric cardiac surgical services at Bristol royal infirmary between 1990 and 1995. [40018]

Mr. Dorrell: I am aware of the concerns surrounding the provision of paediatric cardiac surgery at the United Bristol hospital trust. A number of steps have been taken at local level to address those concerns.

I understand that the General Medical Council is now considering whether to take formal proceedings in this case. In the light of its decision I shall consider whether any further action is justified.

Professions Supplementary to Medicine

Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what progress has been made with the review of the Professions Supplementary to Medicine Act 1960. [40019]

Mr. Horam: We have received a report of an independent review of the 1960 Act, copies of which have been placed in the Library. We welcome the report, and support its conclusion that new legislation is needed to streamline existing arrangements. We intend to prepare and consult widely on draft legislation based on the broad principles it establishes.

HIV Prevention

Mr. Key: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what monitoring is in place to ensure that HIV prevention money is being targeted at those communities most affected throughout the United Kingdom. [38312]

Mr. Horam: In England monitoring of health authorities' HIV prevention funding is carried out by means of half-yearly reports on planned expenditure, with an outturn report at the end of the financial year for inclusion in each health authority's AIDS (Control) Act Report.

Guidance was issued to health authorities in March advising them of the need to allocate approximately 50 per cent. of the funds they receive for HIV prevention towards work with those populations most at risk from HIV.

Questions relating to Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland are matters for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales and for Scotland and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Terminally Ill Patients

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total number of (a) in-patient palliative care hospices and (b) Macmillan services in each region. [38844]

Mr. Horam: The total number of in-patient palliative care hospices and Macmillan services in each region is given in the table:

In-patient palliative care services as at January 1996

Region	Number of units
Anglia and Oxford	21
Northern and Yorkshire	26
North Thames	19
South Thames	26
North West	28
South and West	28
West Midlands	12
Trent	11

Figures obtained from Hospice Information Service at St. Christopher's hospice.

Cancer Relief Macmillan Service as at January 1996

Region	Number of services
Anglia and Oxford	54
Northern and Yorkshire	88
North Thames	100
South Thames	63
North West	88
South and West	72
Trent	58

Figures obtained from Cancer Relief Macmillan Fund (CRMF) and show the number of services employing CRMF staff (this includes those funded as well as those no longer funded by CRMF).

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the health authorities which have no in-patient palliative care hospice within their boundaries. [38845]

Mr. Horam: This information is not available centrally.

Gender Dysphoria

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proportion of the population in England and Wales he estimates suffers from gender dysphoria. [40023]

Mr. Malone: I will write to the hon. Member.

Disabled Persons (Carers)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the public expenditure implications of implementing the Disabled Persons and Carers (Short Term Breaks) Bill [Lords]. [38846]

Mr. Malone: Any Bill which places a duty on a local authority to assess and provide for services will have significant cost implications.

Operation Waiting Times

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients receiving (a) hip replacements, (b) cataract extraction, (c) kidney transplants and (d) hernia operations carried out on the NHS in Great Britain and Northern Ireland had to wait for (i) more than six months, (ii) more than nine months, (iii) more than 12 months, (iv) more than 15 months and (v) more than 18 months in the most recent year for which figures are available. [38849]

Mr. Horam: Information for England is contained in "Hospital Episode Statistics, Volume 2", copies of which are available in the Library. The most recent year for which figures have been published is 1993–94. Questions relating to the rest of the United Kingdom are matters for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales and for Scotland and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland.

Health Service Staff

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list by family health services authority or equivalent body the number of (a) doctors, (b) nurses, (c) midwives, (d) health visitors, (e) administration and clerical staff and (f) managers in (i) 1990, (ii) 1992 and (iii) 1994. [39128]

Mr. Malone: The number of general medical services general practitioners and their staff by family health services authority are published in "General Medical Services Statistics" at October and April for the years requested; copies are available in the Library.

Data for the hospital and community health services non-medical staff cannot be listed by FHSA and could be provided in a different breakdown only at a disproportionate cost.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the overall number of (a) administrative staff, (b) managerial staff, (c) nurses, (d) junior doctors and (e) other medical staff employed in each region for each of the last four years. [39129]

Mr. Malone: I will write to the hon. Member.

In-patient Admissions

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of ordinary in-patient admissions by region in each of the last four years. [39130]

Mr. Horam: The latest information is in the publication "ordinary and Day Case Admissions for England: Financial Year 1994–95", copies of which are available in the Library.

MRSA

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospitals in England and Wales were affected by MRSA—methicillin-resistant staphylococcus aureus—in each year since 1990. [39021]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Wakefield (Mr. Hinchliffe) on 28 February, Official Report, columns 569–70.

NHS Pension Scheme

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when an actuarial report was carried out on the effect on the NHS pension scheme's overall liabilities of including GP staff in the scheme, and if he will make a statement on the conclusions. [39131]

Mr. Malone: No actuarial report has been carried out. We last consulted the Government Actuary's Department in February this year.

Departmental Vehicles (Traffic Violations)

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of traffic violations involving departmental vehicles, the nature of the violations, and the total amount of fines arising from those violations, in each year since 1986. [39306]

Mr. Horam: This information is not held by the Department. Fines and other penalties are the responsibility of each driver to settle personally, and we would trace the driver only if there was a delay in paying the fine. Our management company, PHH, has records dated from 1994, which state the offence date and the vehicle in question, but does not state the nature of the violation.

Parliamentary Questions (Meetings)

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health on how many occasions ministerial conference and meeting rooms in the parliamentary estate have been booked in his name, or that of other Ministers in his Department, for meetings with Conservative. Members immediately preceding questions to his Department in the current parliamentary Session. [39524]

Mr. Horam: None.

Yorkshire RHA

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 29 January, Official Report, column 528, how much was spent on the former Yorkshire regional health authority headquarters at Park parade, Harrogate, on (a) refurbishment, repairs, maintenance and improvement, and (b) on furnishings, fixtures and fittings in each year since 1981. [39281]

Mr. Horam: Total spending on refurbishment, repairs, maintenance, improvement, furnishings, fixtures and fittings of the former Yorkshire regional health authority headquarters at Park parade, Harrogate for the financial years from 1981–82 onwards is shown in the table.

Financial year	Expenditure £
1981–82	21,000
1982–83	672,000
1983–84	646,000
1984–85	462,000
1985–86	243,000
1986–87	54,000
1987–88	30,000
1988–89	1,400,000
1989–90	1,400,000
1990–91	46,000
1991–92	371,000
1992–93	88,000

The definitions of fixtures, fittings and building fabric are not distinct and expenditure was not collected separately under these headings at the time the work was carried out.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the answer of 1 July, Official Report, column 334, regarding employment records for regional health authority staff, if he will provide the information requested on 7 June relating to the former Yorkshire regional health authority from the records held in the regional offices. [39189]

Mr. Malone: This information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Care Homes

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if it is his policy that a local authority should not place people in its own directly managed residential care homes at a price, in real terms, higher than that obtainable for comparable quality care in the independent sector; [39879]

(2) what plans he has to ensure that the wish of an individual to be placed in a private residential home of his choice rather than a local authority home so long as the cost is no greater and the service provided is as thorough as the local authority establishment is respected. [39883]

Mr. Dorrell: It is for local authorities to manage their substantial community care resources efficiently and effectively taking full account of their statutory responsibilities. One of these is the responsibility to obtain value for money and we expect them to secure adequate and appropriate care for their clients and the most competitive services regardless of sector. The Government have also issued a statutory direction on choice to make sure that, within certain limits of cost and suitability, people are able to exercise real choice when selecting a care home.

In addition, the Audit (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1996 will enable the Audit Commission and the Department's social services inspectorate to undertake joint reviews of local authorities' social service departments. The reviews will cover every authority in the country on a cyclical programme with about 20 authorities being reviewed each year. Reviews will focus on the three aspects of performance—cost-effectiveness, quality of service and sensitivity to the wishes and needs of users and carers.

Licences

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the licences currently issued by his Department, indicating their function and the annual administrative costs for each. [37814]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 19 July 1996:]: The Department is responsible for issuing six types of licence. Their function is to protect public health by setting standards—and controls where appropriate—of safety, quality, efficacy and service. It is not possible to show the administrative costs for each licence.

The types of licence are:

Department of Health:
Approval of private sector places for abortion.

Medicines Control Agency:
Marketing authorisations

Clinical trials certificates

Manufacturers' licences

Wholesale dealers' licences

Homoeopathic registration certificates.

Ethnic Minorities

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the proportion of minority ethnic applicants for NHS management training schemes; and what proportion obtained a place in 1995. [37092]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 12 July 1996]: In 1995, 19 per cent. of applicants to the national health service financial management training scheme and 12 per cent. of those who successfully obtained a place on the scheme were from ethnic minorities. Figures for the NHS management training scheme in the same period were 9 per cent.—of applicants—and 3.3 per cent.—of successful applicants—respectively.

Edgware General Hospital

Sir John Gorst: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what further developments have taken place to enable a casualty and emergency unit to replace the existing accident and emergency department at Edgware hospital; when he expects further arrangements to be proposed; and when he will write to the hon. Member for Hendon, North with full details. [38983]

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what further developments have taken place to enable a casualty and emergency unit to replace the existing accident and emergency arrangements at Edgware general hospital; when he expects further new arrangements to be proposed; and when he will write to the hon. Member for Harrow, East with full details. [38986]

Sir Rhodes Boyson: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what further developments have taken place to enable the casualty and emergency unit to replace the existing accident and emergency arrangements at Edgware general hospital; when he expects the new arrangements to be proposed; and when he will write to the hon. Member for Brent, North. [39602]

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement about the future of Edgware hospital. [39601]

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the future of Edgware general hospital and its casualty department. [39827]

Mr. Dorrell: Barnet health authority has today sent papers to members in advance of its next meeting on 31 July. The health authority will consider the following recommendations from its officers:

(a) that, in line with the recommendation of the working group which reported to the health authority earlier this month, there should be a medical presence within the casualty service;

(b) that a further working group should be established to explore the development of a GP type admissions unit or the elderly as a demonstration project for which central funding could be sought;

(c) that the opening hours of the casualty service should be considered further in conjunction with the proposal for a demonstration project.

In addition, the health authority will discuss progress on the possible development of a low-risk maternity unit, on which decisions will be made in September.

The health authority will take a decision on these recommendations at its meeting next week. I will write to the local Members immediately after the meeting with further details.

NHS Staff

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what estimate he has made of the numbers (a) employed and (b) in training as (i) health visitors, (ii) school nurses, (iii) district nurses and (iv) community psychiatric nurses; [36711]

(2) how many whole-time equivalent (a) health visitors, (b) school nurses, (c) district nurses and (d) community psychiatric nurses were in training in each region in September of each year since 1990 broken down by (i) gender and (ii) ethnic origin; [36710]

(3) how many whole-time equivalent (a) health visitors, (b) school nurses, (c) district nurses and (d) community psychiatric nurses were employed in each region in September of each year since 1990 broken down by (i) gender and (ii) ethnic origin. [36705]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 11 July 1996]: Information on numbers of health visitors, school nurses, district nurses, and community psychiatric nurses employed by region and gender will be placed in the Library. Information about their ethnic origin is not available centrally.

Such information as is available on the numbers in training is contained in the English National Board for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting's annual report for 1995–96 which was presented to Parliament on 22 July.

TREASURY

Small Businesses

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the impact of (a) his policies and (b) the work of his Department in helping small businesses in the past 12 months as against the previous 12 months; and if he will publish the performance indicators by which his Department monitors the impact and the statistical results of such monitoring. [39150]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The Government recognise the crucial role played by small firms in the UK economy and aim to help them by providing sound economic conditions—keeping inflation and interest rates low; reducing legislative administration and taxation burdens; and, where appropriate, provide direct assistance in the form of specialist advice and support and easing access to finance.

Particular Budget measures aimed to boost small businesses include: cutting the small companies rate of corporate tax and the basic rate of income tax; reducing employers' national insurance contributions from April 1997; reducing the qualifying age for capital gains tax retirement relief; improving transitional relief for smaller properties whose rates bill are rising following the 1995 revaluation; reducing class 4 national insurance contributions by the self-employed and withdrawing the 50 per cent. tax relief from these contributions; increasing the VAT threshold; introducing a deregulation package; and introducing a tax code rewritten in simple user-friendly language.

These measures build on last year's package to costs job cuts and ease access to finance.

Transport Workers

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the average working weeks per year for a transport worker in (a) the road transport industry, (b) the rail industry, (c) the aviation industry and (d) the maritime industry currently and 10 years ago. [39396]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Available information on average weekly hours worked by industry is given in the new earnings survey, part C, tables 54 and 57, for 1986 and 1995, a copy of which is in the House Library.

Publicity

Ms Hodge: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how many staff were employed full time or part time (a) to provide information and publicity and (b) on press and media in (i) 1995–96; (ii) 1994–95 and (iii) 1993–94; [39412]

(2) how many staff are assumed in his Department's budget, employed (i) full time and (ii) part time, (a) to work on press and media and (b) to provide information and publicity in 1996–97. [39385]

Mrs. Angela Knight: I regret that it has not been possible to provide a substantive answer before the summer recess. I shall write to the hon. Member shortly and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Economic Performance

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures he will take to improve the United Kingdom's economic performance relative to other OECD countries. [37661]

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what measures he will take to improve the United Kingdom's economic performance relative to other OECD countries. [37686]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The Government's policies will continue to deliver a stable macro-economic environment and efficient markets. These policies have been very successful. The UK is now performing better against its main competitors. We have enjoyed a stronger recovery since 1992 than any other major European economy, and the OECD expects us to grow significantly faster than Germany, France and Italy in both 1996 and 1997.

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the United Kingdom's economic performance in 1995. [37662]

Mrs. Knight: Last year, the UK economy continued its run of healthy growth, low inflation, falling unemployment and declining Government borrowing, and we were able to reduce taxes in the 1995 Budget, thanks to firm control of public spending.

Cattle Slaughter Compensation Scheme

Dr. Strang: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 27 June to the hon. Member for Southport (Mr. Banks), Official Report, columns 234–35, if he will list the cost for each financial year from 1996–97 to 1998–99 of (a) the compensation arrangements to farmers for cattle over 30 months of age which cannot now enter the food chain, (b) the payments to slaughterhouses for handling cattle over 30 months of age which cannot now enter the food chain, (c) payments to renderers for handling cattle over 30 months of age which cannot now enter the food chain, (d) the cost of storage, prior to incineration, of the rendered remains of cattle over 30 months of age which cannot now enter the food chain, (e) the cost of incineration of the remains of cattle over 30 months of age which cannot now enter the food chain, (f) the calf slaughter premium, (g) the package of aid for the renderers, (h) the package of aid for the abattoirs, (i) the package of aid to the cutting industries, (j) the feed recall scheme and (k) the additional running costs for the agriculture departments; and if he will list where applicable the net EU contribution for each measure, taking account of both the UK's contribution to additional EU spending and the effect of additional receipts on the UK abatement. [38803]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The figures are given to the nearest million pounds in the table. Where applicable, the net EU contribution is given between parentheses.

(a) compensation arrangements to farmers for cattle over 30 months of age which cannot now enter the food chain	455 (153)	455 (213)	455 (47)
(b) payments to slaughterhouses for handling cattle over 30 months of age which cannot now enter the food chain, (c) payments to renderers for handling cattle over 30 months of age which cannot now enter the food chain, (d) the cost of storage, prior to incineration of the remains of cattle over 30 months of age which cannot now enter the food chain, (e) cost of incineration of the remains of cattle over 30 months of age which cannot now enter the food chain[1]	120	120	120
(f) calf slaughter premium	50 (36)	50 (18)	50 (14)
(g) package of aid for the renderers	118	59	0
(h) package of aid for the abattoirs, (i) package of aid to the cutting industries[2]	120	0	0
(j) feed recall scheme	6	0	0
(k) additional running costs for the agriculture departments	60	61	60
(l) other miscellaneous BSE expenditure including top up payments on prime beef, beef stocks disposal schemes and compensation and destruction of young bulls in Northern Ireland	108	3	0
Total cost	1,037	748	685

These figures and the figures for the net EU contribution and the net cost to the UK taxpayer are unchanged from those given on 27 June (Official Report, columns 234–235).

[1] A break down of the costs of slaughter, rendering, storage and disposal of animals under the over 30 month scheme could only be carried out at present at disproportionate cost.

[2] A breakdown of the two costs could only be provided at disproportionate cost.

Competitiveness

Mr. Bill Walker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what role his Department is playing in improving the United Kingdom's competitiveness. [37665]

Mr. Luff: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of the policies of his Department can make on the competitiveness of the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [37675]

Mrs. Angela Knight: As the third competitiveness White Paper shows, the Government have created a climate where competitiveness can flourish based on an economy where interest rates are now at historically low levels, inflation has been below 4 per cent. for the longest period for nearly 50 years, corporation tax is among the lowest for major industrialised countries and public finances are under tight control.

Private Finance Initiative

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on progress with the PFI in Yorkshire. [37664]

Mr. Jack: Detailed information on the progress of the PFI by region is not held centrally. However, Yorkshire has a successful track record of agreed PFI deals. The Royal Armouries in Leeds was one of the first PFI projects and makes an important contribution to the success and prosperity of the city. the £50 million project for St. James's hospital in Leeds was announced on 29 January 1996 and is a pioneering project in the health sector. The region will also benefit from deals in the transport sector such as the M1-A1 link road. Other PFI projects for the region, including transport and office accommodation projects, are currently being developed.

EU Contribution

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the aggregate of the United Kingdom's net contribution to the European Union for the past four years; what average annual percentage increase this represents; what is the estimated aggregate net British contribution for the next four years; and what is his estimate of the average annual percentage increase for this period. [37677]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The UK's net contribution over the four years from 1992–93 to 1995–96 amounted to nearly £10 billion, excluding private sector receipts of perhaps £1 billion or more. Estimates covering the whole of the next four-year period are not yet available. Percentage variations fluctuate enormously from year to year depending both on which years are chosen and on the method of calculation.

Graduates

Ms Church: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what percentage of people who are economically active and who have a degree, in each ethnic group, are unemployed; [38758]

(2) what percentage that is of the total unemployed; and if he will provide a breakdown by ethnic origin; [38768]

(3) how many people, broken down by ethnic origin, who did not gain a higher education qualification are currently unemployed; and what is that figure as a percentage of the total unemployed; [38760]

(4) what percentage of the total unemployed in each ethnic group (a) have a degree and (b) do not have a higher education qualification; [38702]

(5) what percentage of people who are economically active and who do not have a higher education qualification, in each ethnic group, are unemployed. [38703]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The available information from the winter 1995–96—December 1995 to February 1996—labour force survey for Great Britain is given in the table.

Economic status of people of working age by highest qualification and ethnic origin winter 1995–96 (not seasonally adjusted)

Ms Church: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what percentage of the total employed under 25-year-olds in each ethnic group are economically active graduates who completed their degree in 1995. [38756]

Mrs. Knight: The labour force survey does not ask people in which year they obtained their qualification.

Ms Church: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what percentage of the total under 25 years of age population in each ethnic group is unemployed; and what percentage of the total unemployed in each ethnic group is under 25 years of age; [38759]

(2) how many and what percentage of the economically active under 25-year-olds in each ethnic group are unemployed. [38764]

Mrs. Knight: The latest information available from the winter 1995–96—December 1995 to February 1996—labour force survey for Great Britain is given in the table.

ILO unemployed of 16–24 year olds by ethnic origin in winter 1995–96 (not seasonally adjusted)

Ms Church: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are the current figures for unemployment among the under 25-year-olds in terms of (a) actual numbers, (b) percentage of total unemployment, (c) percentage of the under 25-year-old work force and (d) percentage of the under 25-year-old population. [38763]

Mrs. Knight: Latest information available from the labour force survey shows that in Great Britain in spring—March to May—1996, 658,000 people aged 16 to 24 were ILO unemployed. This represents 29.1 per cent. of total ILO unemployment, 14.8 per cent. of those aged 16 to 24 who were economically active—the ILO unemployment rate—and 10.5 per cent. of the 16 to 24-year-old population.

Ms Church: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what percentage of the total unemployed under 25 years old in each ethnic group are economically active people who did not have a higher education qualification and who had been a full-time student or pupil the previous year; [38755]

(2) what are the current unemployment figures for economically active people aged under 25 years who did not have a higher education qualification and who had been a full-time student or pupil the previous year in terms of ethnic origin; [38761]

(3) how many economically active people aged under 25 years who did not have a higher education qualification and who had been a full-time student or pupil the previous year are currently unemployed; and what is this figure as a percentage of (a) total unemployment, (b) total unemployment among under 25-year-olds and (c) the total work force of under 25-year-olds who did not have a higher education qualification and who had been a full-time student or pupil the previous year; [38766]

(4) what percentage of the work force in each ethnic group, who are economically active, aged under 25 years without a higher education qualification and had been a full-time student or pupil the previous year, are currently unemployed. [38767]

Mr. Waldegrave: The available information from the labour force survey is given in the table:

ILO unemployed 16–24 year olds without higher education qualifications who were full-time students 1 year previously Spring 1996 (not seasonally adjusted)

Great Britain, thousands and per cent.

	All persons	White	All ethnic minorities

Ms Church: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what percentage of the work force in each ethnic group, who are economically active people aged under 25 years whose highest qualification was a degree and who had been a full-time student the previous year, are currently unemployed; [38757]

(2) what are the current unemployment figures for economically active people aged under 25 years whose highest qualification was a degree and who had been a full-time student the previous year, in terms of ethnic origin; [38762]

(3) what are the current unemployment figures for economically active people aged under 25 years whose highest qualification was a degree and who had been a full-time student the previous year in tems of (a) actual numbers, (b) percentage of total unemployment, (c) percentage of total unemployment among the under 25-year-olds and (d) percentage of the total work force of under 25-year-olds whose highest qualification was a degree and who had been in full-time education in the previous year. [38765]

Mrs. Knight: This information is not available.

Public Sector Debt

Mr. Bernard Jenkin: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received regarding public sector debt. [37659]

Mr. Waldegrave: The UK has the third lowest debt to GDP ratio in the European Union, and unlike every other G7 economy our debt to GDP ratio is lower now than in 1979.

Privatisation

Mr. Pike: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the current estimate of receipts to the Treasury from privatisation sales in 1996–97. [37660]

Mr. Jack: The current estimate, as published in the summer economic forecast, is £4½ billion.

Company Taxation

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the tax burden on companies in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) other major European countries. [37663]

Mr. Jack: Britain's tax burden compares very favourably with other major European countries, as the most recent OECD survey confirms.

Direct Taxation

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received concerning the level of direct taxation. [37666]

Mr. Jack: We have received a number of representations from the public on the level of direct taxation, many of which welcomed the steps towards a 20p basic rate taken in the last Budget.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what factors underlay the lower than projected yield of value added tax in 1995–96. [37667]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The matter is currently being looked at by a working group comprised of officials from HM Treasury and HM Customs and Excise. The probability is that there is no single explanation, but a range of contributory factors. Receipts for the first quarter of 1996–97 are showing healthy growth.

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what plans he has to ensure the consistency of his proposals with EU law for a retrospective limitation on claims for recovery of value added tax as a result of a customs mistake; [39604]

(2) what plans he has to ensure the legitimate expectations of taxpayers in respect of repayment of VAT are met; and if he will make a statement; [39605]

(3) what considerations led to the setting of (a) the statutory limitation period for customs recovery of value added tax and (b) the proposal for the period regarding taxpayers recovery; and if he will make a statement. [39603]

Mr. Waldegrave: There are no harmonised European Community rules applying to recovery of overpaid VAT. Member states are free to determine their own procedures for claims provided that they respect Community law principles. National time limits for VAT—which operate within an EC framework—cannot be less favourable than those applying for similar domestic taxes, and procedures must not make it excessively difficult for a taxpayer to exercise his Community rights.

The new three-year cap on retrospective refunds of VAT will apply to all the indirect taxes and duties administered by customs. EC law already imposes a three-year limit in respect of repayment of customs duty.

A three-year time limit on refunds achieves a proper balance between the rights of individual taxpayers and the public interest. The Government have become concerned at the increasing amounts of revenue at risk in taxation boundary disputes, in some cases back to the introduction of VAT in 1973. A three-year limit will introduce certainty both for taxpayers and the Exchequer, and is proportionate in effect because, at the time of the relevant transactions, both taxpayers and their customers will normally have worked on the assumption that the tax was due.

Mrs. Currie: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many new registrations for VAT there were in South Derbyshire in each of the last five years. [39758]

Mr. Waldegrave: Customs does not have information concerning the number of new registrations in South Derbyshire alone. The local VAT office at Derby covers, in addition to South Derbyshire, parts of Leicestershire and Staffordshire. The number of VAT registrations for that area in the last five calendar years is as follows:

Year	New registrations
1993	1,900
1994	1,670
1995	1,766
1996 (to 30 June 1996)	1,000

Taxation

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations have been made to him regarding the economic impact of current levels of taxation. [37669]

Mr. Geoffrey Robinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received regarding the economic impact of current levels of taxation. [37679]

Mr. Jack: We have received a number of representations from the public on current levels of taxation, many of which have welcomed the tax cuts made in my right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor's November budget.

Capital Taxation

Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received concerning the reform of the taxation of capital. [37671]

Mr. Jack: The Government have received a number of different representations, which will be carefully considered. The abolishing of capital taxes and inheritance tax remain stated objectives of the Government.

House Prices

Mr. Spring: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the pattern of house price movements in the past 12 months. [37672]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Over the 12 months to June, national average house prices—as measured by the Halifax index—rose by 4 per cent. The disaggregated figures show that house prices have risen in all regions of the UK over this period. Rising living standards, low inflation and the lowest mortgage rates for nearly 30 years mean that the conditions are right for the recovery in the housing market to be sustained.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on present levels of public expenditure. [37674]

Mr. Waldegrave: The current level of general government expenditure is £308 billion. The Cabinet discussed the forthcoming public expenditure survey last week. We reaffirmed our commitment to reduce the share of national income taken by the state. We agreed that spending should be kept within the tightest possible limits, and certainly within the cash plans my right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor announced in the Budget last year.

Living Standards

Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the growth in living standards in the next year. [37680]

Mr. Jack: Real personal disposable income is expected to increase by 2½ per cent. this year and by a further 3 per cent. in 1997.

Industrial and Provident Societies

Mr. Fraser: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he last me the Registrar of Friendly Societies to discuss the registration of industrial and provident societies. [37681]

Mrs. Angela Knight: I have not met the Registrar of Friendly Societies to discuss registration of industrial and provident societies and have no plans to do so.

Electricity Bills

Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the change in the average domestic electricity bill since the industry was privatised; and how the privatisation has affected Government revenues. [37682]

Mr. Jack: The typical UK household electricity bill has fallen by £18 between 1990 and 1995, in real terms excluding VAT. On top of this, bills will fall by about a fifth this year. Privatising the electricity industry has contributed over £20 billion to Government revenues, and the privatised companies now contribute about £1 billion in corporation tax each year.

Inward Investment

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the effect of his policies for the economy on levels of inward investment. [37684]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The Government's economic policies have helped the UK to attract more inward direct investment, in relation to GDP, than any other major economy, with over £20 billion in 1995 alone. In 1995–96, the Invest in Britain bureau was notified of 477 inward investment projects, creating almost 50,000 new jobs and safeguarding as many again. This strong performance is being maintained this year, with LG of Korea announcing £1.7 billion investment in south Wales, creating 6,100 new jobs—the largest inward investment ever made in Europe.

Public Sector Borrowing Requirement

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the PSBR. [37673]

Mr. Waldegrave: Borrowing is continuing to fall and is on a clear downward trend. As a share of GDP the PSBR for 1996–97 will be half its 1993–94 level.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will commission a study into the accuracy of his Department's original forecast of the current year's PSBR. [37687]

Mr. Waldegrave: No. The PSBR is the difference between two large numbers and forecasts are subject to large margins of error. The average error on forecasts made in November for the year ahead is 1½ per cent. of GDP, or £11 billion at current day prices. The error on the 1994 Budget forecast of the 1995–96 PSBR was just under £11 billion, an average-sized forecast error.

Departmental Vehicles (Traffic Violations)

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the number of traffic violations involving departmental vehicles, the nature of the violations, and the total amount of fines arising from those violations, in each year since 1986. [39299]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The Treasury does not own any vehicles.

Parliamentary Questions (Meetings)

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many occasions ministerial conference and meeting rooms in the parliamentary estate have been booked in his name, or that of other Ministers in his Department, for meetings with Conservative Members immediately preceding questions to his Department in the current parliamentary Session. [39529]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: None.

Air Passenger Duty

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much revenue has been raised from air passenger duty since its introduction. [39286]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Air passenger duty receipts, together with those for all other Customs and Excise taxes, are published every month by the Office for National Statistics in table 2.1D of the publication "Financial Statistics", which is held in the House of Commons Library.

Diesel Vehicles

Sir Graham Bright: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what (a) fiscal and (b) other measures he has evaluated to encourage research into particulate traps for diesel vehicles; [39757]

(2) what (a) fiscal and (b) other measures he has evaluated to encourage the use of low-sulphur diesel fuel. [39756]

Mr. Jack: I have continued to look at a wide range of measures to promote the use of cleaner vehicles, technologies and fuels. I will carefully consider all these measures before reaching a judgment for the forthcoming Budget.

Publications

Ms Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the average price of (a) "Social Trends" publications and (b) Economic Trends publications in each year since 1993. [39753]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The prices for the "Social Trends" and "Economic Trends" group of publications in each year since 1993 have been:

£ pounds

	1993	1994	1995	1996
Social Trends (Annual)	26.00	27.00	34.95	35.95
Economic Trends (Monthly)	12.75	13.25	19.95	21.00
ET Quarterly Supplement	9.00	18.00	18.00	21.00
ET Annual Supplement	16.50	17.00	24.95	26.95
Economic Trends annual subscription (all three titles including postage)	155.00	196.00	320.00	335.00

Prices and subscriptions are fixed for the calendar year.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many visits (i) he and (ii) his Ministers made to (a) the Newbury constituency and (b) other constituencies in the last 12 months. [39867]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: In the past 12 months my ministerial colleagues and I have made a number of visits to constituencies but have made no visits to the Newbury constituency.

Redundancies

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many redundancies have been notified to his Department by employers in (a) the York parliamentary constituency, (b) the York travel-to-work area and (c) North Yorkshire in each of the last five years. [39569]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Information is not available for York parliamentary constituency, the travel-to-work area, or for North Yorkshire. In the Yorkshire, Humberside region the 1995 winter labour force survey estimates 19,000 people had been made redundant in the three months prior to interview.

Abortions

Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if he will give a breakdown by gestation of pregnancy of the number of abortions performed in the north-west region in the latest year for which figures are available; [39865]

(2) how many abortions have now been performed in total within the north-west region under the provisions of the Abortion Act 1967; and how many and what percentage of those abortions were performed in emergency to save the life of the woman; [39863]

(3) if he will make a statement on the statistically most likely candidate for an abortion within the north-west region after the 24th week of pregnancy in the latest year for which figures are available in terms of (a) the age of the woman, (b) the marital status of the woman, (c) the number of previous children of the woman and (d) the grounds under which the abortion is performed; [39862]

(4) if he will give a breakdown by the procedure adopted of the number of abortions performed in the north-west region in the latest year for which figures are available. [39864]

Mr. Merchant: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will indicate the statistically most likely candidate for an abortion within the NHS South Thames region after the 24th week of pregnancy, in the latest year for which figures are available, in terms of (a) the age of the woman, (b) the marital status of the woman, (c) the number of previous children of the woman and (d) the grounds under which the abortion is performed. [39781]

Mrs. Angela Knight: I regret that it has not been possible to provide a substantive answer before the summer recess. I shall write to the hon. Members shortly and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

Mr. Sumberg: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the statistically most likely candidate for an abortion within the north-west region in the latest year for which figures are available in terms of (a) the age of the woman, (b) the marital status of the woman, (c) the number of previous children of the woman and (d) the grounds under which the abortion is performed. [39861]

Mr. Waldegrave: The statistically most likely candidate for an abortion for each of the variables listed is defined as the category with the highest recorded frequency of legal terminations. The percentages are based on all legal terminations performed in 1993, to women usually resident in the north-west health region.

The categories with the highest frequencies found in each of the variables are as follows:

age of the woman: 20–24 age group comprised 32 per cent. (3,742) of all terminations.

Marital status: single women comprised 29 per cent. (3,232) of all terminations.

Number of previous children born by the woman: women with no previous (live and still born) children born to them, comprised 49 per cent. (5,669) of all terminations.

Legal ground under which abortion was performed: statutory ground C alone comprised 84 per cent. (9,689) of all terminations. The definition of ground C is "that the pregnancy has not exceeded its 24th week and that the continuance of pregnancy would involve risk, greater than if the pregnancy were terminated, or injury to the physical or mental health of the woman".

Reference: 1993 Abortion Statistics, England and Wales, Series AB no. 20.

Mr. Merchant: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give a breakdown by gestation of pregnancy of the number of abortions performed in the NHS South Thames region in the latest year for which figures are available. [39775]

Mr. Waldegrave: Figures for 1994 which give a breakdown of the number of abortions performed to usually resident women in the South Thames health region by gestation of pregnancy can be found in the OPCS monitor series AB95/9, "Legal abortions in England and Wales 1994: residents of regional and district health areas".

Mr. Merchant: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will indicate the statistically most likely candidate for an abortion within the South Thames region in the latest year for which figures are available in terms of (a) the age of the woman, (b) the marital status of the woman, (c) the number of previous children of the woman and (d) the grounds under which the abortion is performed. [39772]

Mr. Waldegrave: The statistically most likely candidate for an abortion for each of the variables listed is defined as the category with the highest recorded frequency of legal terminations. The percentages are based on all legal terminations performed in 1993, to women usually resident in the South East and South West Thames health regions.

The categories with the highest frequencies found in each of the variables are as follows:

Age of the woman: 20–24 age group comprised 29 per cent. (7,113) of all terminations.

Marital status: single woman comprised 25 per cent. (6,140) of all terminations.

Number of previous children born by the woman: women with no previous (live and still born) children born to them, comprised 37 per cent. (9,245) of all terminations.

Legal ground under which the abortion was performed: statutory ground C alone comprised 85 per cent. (21,328) of all terminations. The definition of ground C is "that the pregnancy has not exceeded its 24th week and that the continuance of the pregnancy would involve risk, greater than if the pregnancy were terminated, or injury to the physical or mental health of the women".

Reference: 1993 Abortions Statistics, England and Wales, Series AB no. 20.

Mr. Merchant: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many abortions have been performed in total within the NHS South Thames region under the provisions of the Abortions Act 1967; and how many and what percentage of those abortions were performed in emergency to save the life of the mother. [39776]

Mr. Waldegrave: The total number of abortions carried out under the Abortion Act, to women usually resident in the South Thames health region[1] from 1970 to 1994[2] was 529,032. During this period 10 abortions, 0 per cent. of the total number of abortions performed were carried out in an emergency, certified by the operating practitioner as immediately necessary, to save the life of the woman[3].

[1] Figures are based, where possible, on 1994 health authority boundaries. Other boundary changes have not been reflected in the figures.

[2] Figures for 1968–69 are not held on a comparable basis.

[3] Abortions performed under statutory grounds 5 (1970—31st March 1991) and F (1st April 1991—present) i.e. where in the case of emergency it was necessary to save the life of the woman.

Capital Gains

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the total amount of capital gains outstanding for each of the last 10 years; and if he will list the longest period for which capital gains has been unpaid while negotiations with the Inland Revenue continue for (a) individuals, (b) companies and (c) trusts. [39685]

Mr. Jack: The amount of capital gains tax outstanding as at 31 October in each of the last 10 years is as follows:

Year	Amount (£ million)	Year	Amount (£ million)
1985	128.1	1990	206.4
1986	132.1	1991	224.4
1987	139.5	1992	196.9
1988	145.6	1993	177.1
1989	165.5	1994	150.7

The information requested in the second part of the question is not available.

Departmental Forms

Mr. Steen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many forms his Department issues annually; and in how many categories. [37688]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 23 July 1996]: The information on statistical inquiries to businesses by the Office for National Statistics is in its compliance plan for 1996 to 1998, a copy of which is available in the House of Commons Library.

Employment Statistics

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many men between the ages of 16 and 60 years were in (a) full-time employment and (b) part-time employment in each year between 1992 and 1996. [38954]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 23 July 1996]: The available information from the labour force survey for Great Britain is given in the table:

Men aged 16–59 working full-time and part-time Spring 1992 to Winter 1995–96 (not seasonally adjusted)

	Great Britain, thousands
	Full-time	Part-time

Labour Force Survey.

Ms Jackson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the numbers of women between the ages of 16 and 60 years in (a) full-time employment and (b) part-time employment below 16 hours in each of the years 1992 to 1996. [38899]

Mrs. Knight [holding answer 23 July 1996]: The available information from the labour force survey for Great Britain is given in the following table:

Women aged 16–59 working full-time and part-time Spring 1992 to Winter 1995–96 (not seasonally adjusted)

	Great Britain		Thousands

Statistical Forms

Mr. Steen: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the statistical forms issued to businesses by his Department, indicating the number of each sent out. [38678]

Mr. Jack: Treasury Departments require information about economic activity and the collection of taxes. Forms are a very necessary part of these processes. There are several hundreds of different types of forms, many of which are variations—for example, Welsh language versions—resulting in several millions of forms issued every year, to two categories; individuals and businesses. To give precise figures would involve disproportionate cost, but the main examples are: for the Inland Revenue, 7 million individual tax returns; for HM Customs and Excise, 6.8 million VAT returns; around ½ million VAT registration forms, although only 180,000 are returned by businesses; 1.5 million Intrastat survey forms; and 175,000 betting and gaming duty forms, all issued to business; for the Office for National Statistics, 1.5 million forms in 101 separate statistical inquiries of business. The information on statistical inquiries to businesses by the Office for National Statistics is in the compliance plan for 1996 to 1998, a copy of which is in the House of Commons Library.

The Treasury's Departments recognise the need to keep the number of forms they require to be completed to a minimum and that those which are necessary should be well designed. They have set targets for reducing the burden they impose on businesses.

Employment (Yorkshire and Humberside)

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many (a) males and (b) females in (i) full-time and (ii) part-time employment in (1) North Yorkshire and (2) Yorkshire and Humberside earn less than £3.40 an hour. [38938]

Mrs. Angela Knight [holding answer 23 July 1996]: Information available from the new earnings survey is provided in the table.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many and what proportion of people aged under 25 years are (a) in full-time employment, (b) in part-time employment, (c) in full-time education and (d) on Government-supported training schemes in (i) York, (ii) North Yorkshire, (iii) Yorkshire and Humberside and (iv) England in each year since 1991. Community Budget

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when he will be publishing the statement on the 1996 Community budget. [39943]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I have today laid before Parliament the statement on the 1996 Community budget, entitled "European Community Finances". This White Paper is the 16th in the series. As in the past it covers annual budgetary matters. It also describes the budget for 1996 as adopted by the European Parliament and the United Kingdom's gross and net contributions to the Community budget over the years 1993 to 1996.

As last year, the annual statement also includes details of recent developments in European Community financial management and in countering fraud against the Community budget.

I have placed copies of the White Paper in the Library of the House.

Child Benefit

Ms Lynne: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what savings he estimates would be made annually if child benefit were taxed at (a) 40 per cent. (b) 24 per cent. and (c) 20 per cent. rates on (i) mothers' and (ii) fathers' earnings. [3949]

Mr. Jack: The yield from taxing it at specified rates would depend on whether all taxpayers were to face the same tax rate on child benefit or whether taxpayers with a lower marginal rate would pay tax at their own marginal rate.

Long-term Care Insurance

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the regulation of selling and marketing of long-term care insurance. [39944]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The Government's consultation document, "A new partnership for care in old age", published on 7 May, invited comments on a proposed partnership scheme to provide extra protection from the means test for residential care to people who took out a "partnership product" to meet some of the costs of their long-term care. Two kinds of partnership product for inclusion in the partnership scheme were mentioned-indemnity insurance and immediate needs annuities. Views were also invited on whether the selling and marketing of long-term care insurance should be regulated under the Financial Services Act 1986, as annuities are already.

It is important, especially as these products will be sold primarily to the elderly, to ensure that arrangements for regulating the products are properly considered. Equally, it is important for any regulation to be cost-effective, and widely accepted as effective for the development of the market in long-term care insurance.

The Treasury is examining the issues raised by responses to the consultation document concerned with regulation. These suggest there is a consensus in favour of regulation under the Financial Services Act 1986, covering the marketing and selling of all long-term care insurance products. Before a decision is taken to extend the scope of the Financial Services Act in this way, the Treasury will explore further the detailed question of how it should be achieved, and will issue a consultation document in the autumn seeking views of interested groups, including financial services participants and consumer interest groups.

Tax Booklet

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will update the information given in the July 1995 "Tax Ready Reckoner and Tax Reliefs" booklet. [40017]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: The Treasury is today publishing a booklet containing estimates of the effects of various illustrative tax changes on tax receipts in 1997–98 and 1998–99 and preliminary estimates of the costs of the main tax reliefs in 1995–96 and 1996–97. Copies are being placed in the Library of the House.

Life Assurance

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the reform of the tax rules for life assurance policy holders and the proposal to publish draft legislation. [39942]

Mr. Jack: The Government intend later this year to publish draft clauses and secondary legislation on the taxation of life assurance and similar policyholders. The draft legislation would form the basis of a comprehensive code for taxing profits from life assurance policies and other types of insurance which are used for investment. The aim of the new rules is to conserve what is good in the existing regime, which dates from 1968, but to modernise it to take account of nearly 30 years of developments in the insurance industry. If enacted, the legislation would give effect to the proposed reform of policyholder taxation I announced on 8 November last year, Official Report, column 912.

At the time of that announcement it was hoped that the draft legislation would be available in the spring, but we have found that more time is needed for the preparation of the new rules. In order to allow time for full consultation with all interested parties, the Government have decided that they will not, in any event, introduce legislation based on the draft clauses in the next Finance Bill.

Earlier this year there was speculation that the Inland Revenue was intending to change the tax treatment of guaranteed income bonds, which are a life assurance-based product. An Inland Revenue press release of 15 March made it clear that it was Ministers' intention to ensure that the tax treatment of holders of existing bonds was consistent with the insurance industry's understanding of the position at that time. That remains true, and discussions with the insurance industry's representatives, including the Association of British Insurers, are continuing to determine how this might be achieved.

Capital Allowances

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what changes he proposes to make to the rules on capital allowances for fixtures following the House of Lords case last year of Melluish v. BMI (No. 3) Ltd. and others. [39945]

Mr. Jack: The Government intend to introduce legislation in the next Finance Bill to correct defects in the rules for giving capital allowances on fixtures in buildings. These defects allow tax to be avoided by obtaining allowances on more than the cost of the fixture and through the acceleration of allowances. The legislation will also reverse that part of the decision of the House of Lords in Melluish v. BMI (No. 3) Ltd. which gave allowances to equipment lessors on fixtures leased to persons not liable to tax. The new rules will apply to expenditure incurred on or after today.

These changes open the way to simplify and deregulate these rules. At present, valuations have to be made whenever allowances are claimed on fixtures included in a property sale. This has been criticised as complex, costly and incorrect. The Inland Revenue will publish proposals today for consultation. The proposals would, in many cases, allow figures agreed between the purchaser and the vendor to be accepted for tax purposes. The Inland Revenue will also consult with representatives of the property industry and their professional advisers on ways in which the rules could be improved further. Subject to the outcome of the consultation, we intend to introduce these measures in the next Finance Bill.

Building Societies Bill

Mr. French: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the responses to the consultation of the draft Building Societies Bill. [39947]

Private Estates (Public Funding)

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what considerations he takes into account when authorising the payment of grants of public money to owners of landed estates of more than 500 acres to improve private buildings on those estates; and if he will make a statement. [39170]

Mr. Sproat [holding answer 23 July 1996]: I have been asked to reply.

In England, Government funding channelled through English Heritage is available for structural repairs to those buildings that English Heritage consider to be of outstanding historic or architectural interest. In deciding whether a grant should be made English Heritage takes account of factors such as the nature, cost and urgency of the proposed works, and also other resources available to the property owner. The general principle behind Government policy is that owners should be responsible for the repair of their own properties, and public funding should be provided only where it is clearly needed to preserve the fabric of our heritage. In accordance with this principle, procedures have been drawn up to assess the resources available to historic estates.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Benefits

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many (a) male and (b) female claimants of (i) severe disablement allowance, (ii) incapacity benefit, (iii) unemployment benefit claimed for an adult dependant but were disqualified; and if he will break the figures down by category of disqualification. [34218]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the (a) numbers of claimants gaining or losing and (b) amounts of costs and savings arising from the option of voluntary reporting of changes of circumstances between fixed-term reviews as detailed in his departmental research report No. 45. [37422]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not centrally available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list those benefits where payments currently are lower in real terms than in 1979; and how many people (a) are now and (b) were in 1979 drawing each of those benefits. [35579]

Mr. Roger Evans: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on Monday 22 July, Official Report, column 65.

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much was paid out in benefits (a) nationally, (b) in the north-west and (c) in Warrington in 1995–96. [37557]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available in the format requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Expenditure on social security benefits in Great Britain in 1995–96 is estimated to have been £88.8 billion.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate listed by benefit of (a) the numbers gaining from and (b) the costs of amending the Social Security Benefit (Computation of Earnings) Regulations 1978 to calculate earnings (i) net of income tax and (ii) to disregard half of any contribution made towards an occupational or private pension scheme. [39186]

Mr. Heald: Based on the data contained in the family resources survey, it is estimated that the number gaining, and the costs of amending, the Social Security (Computation of Earnings) Regulations to calculate earnings net of income tax and to disregard half of any contribution made towards an occupational or personal pension would be negligible.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many and what proportion of claimants of (a) unemployment benefit, (b) incapacity benefit and (c) severe disablement allowance received payments from earnings during 1995–96. [39005]

Mr. Evans: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available relates to unemployment benefit and is set out in the table:

Number and percentage of unemployment benefit recipients receiving payments from earnings—Great Britain

	November 1995	February 1996
Total number of unemployment benefit recipients receiving earnings (thousands)	16	16
Percentage of all unemployment benefit recipients receiving earnings	4	4

Notes:
1. A number of recipients who receive earnings do not have the information recorded on the computer system. These figures relate to computerised claims only and should therefore be taken as a broad indication only.
2. Figures apply to claimants who were receiving unemployment benefit on the second Thursday of the months shown and who have earnings in the benefit week in which that date fell.

Source:
Five per cent. sample of unemployed claimants in Great Britain on the second Thursday of the months shown.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when the hon. Member for Stratford-on-Avon will receive answers to his questions about the child care disregard, adult dependency increases and benefits uprating tabled on 21 June. [39187]

Mr. Burt: I refer the hon. Member to the replies I gave him on Wednesday 3 July, Official Report, column 469, and today and to the reply given to him by the Under-Secretary, my hon. Friend the Member for Monmouth (Mr. Evans), on Tuesday 23 July.

Disability

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what considerations led him to exclude from the definition of disability the personality disorders set out in section 4(1) of the Disability Discrimination (Meaning of Disability) Regulations 1996. [34861]

Mr. Burt: A consultation document, published in December 1995, stated that the Government intended to exclude from the definition of disability kleptomania, paedophilia and personality disorders including psychopathic disorders. The document went on to say that this was because, while such disorders might meet the definition of disability in the Act, the Government believe that it would be wrong to require employers and service providers to consider adjustments to cater for these conditions. Over 75 per cent. of those who expressed a view agreed with the proposal.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Pawsey: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans there are to seek tenders for a replacement for the Child Support Agency computer. [36175]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: If it is decided to replace or upgrade the Child Support Agency computer system, a procurement exercise will be conducted in accordance with the EC directives which govern public sector procurement. This legislation ensures fair and open competition and results in the selection of the supplier whose bid offers best value for money. The Department cannot speculate as to the outcome of any procurement exercise.

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average length of time taken by his Department to reply to letters from hon. Members on matters relating to the Child Support Agency; and how many complaints from hon. Members his Department has received in each of the months since the Child Support Agency started its operations in April 1993. [39740]

Mr. Mitchell: I shall write to the hon. Member shortly.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many individual personal records the Child Support Agency computer system was designed to accommodate. [39689]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 24 July 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the Child Support Agency Computer System.

The database structure of the main Child Support Computer System would enable it to hold just over 11.5 million records of individual people

I hope this is helpful.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what data are required for the purposes of monitoring his targets for the Child Support Agency; and for how long it is required to be held. [39690]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 24 July 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency data held for monitoring the targets he sets the Agency.

The Child Support Agency's targets for 1996/97 are as follows:

(1) Collection—A band of £380 million to £400 million of maintenance to be collected or arranged for direct payment from the absent parent to the parent with care in 1996/97.

(2) Payments—95% of payments to the parent with care to be made within 10 working days of receipt from an absent parent.

(3) Accuracy—To achieve a continuing improvement in accuracy so that in at least 85% of cases checked during March 1997 the cash value of the assessment will be correct.

(4) Second Tier Reviews—Where a client is dissatisfied with a Child Support Officer's decision and requests a review, 55% to be cleared within 13 weeks; 80% to be cleared within 26 weeks; and no more than 15% to be older than 26 weeks as at 31 March 1997.

(5) Maintenance Assessments—60% of new maintenance applications to be cleared within 26 weeks and as at 31 March 1997, no more than 10% of all maintenance applications received by the Agency to be over 52 weeks old.

In order to measure Agency performance and effectiveness, statistical and financial data is obtained from a wide range of sources. Collection of this information can be both clerical and from scans of the Child Support Computer System. The information is used not only to measure performance against the targets but also to manage the business effectively. Statistical and financial data is retained as long as there is a business need to do so and the periods involved vary considerably from say 18 months to many years.

I am sorry I cannot be more precise but this is a very wide ranging question; nevertheless I hope this information is helpful to you.

Benefits Agency

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what guidelines are issued to staff in Benefits Agency offices regarding the structure of interviews and range of questions asked of unemployed people. [36168]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of income support is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Barry Sheerman, dated 23 July 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what guidelines are issued to staff in Benefits Agency (BA) offices regarding the structure of interviews and range of questions asked of unemployed people.

The Code of Office Practice (COP) provides general advice on interviewing for BA staff. I have enclosed a copy of the relevant extracts for your information.

There is no specific guidance on the structure of interviews or the range of questions to ask unemployed people. BA staff interview a wide range of customers including the unemployed. The nature of each interview depends on the customers individual circumstances.

I hope this reply has been helpful.

INTERVIEWING ADVICE

Introduction

The following paragraphs contain advice on interviewing callers at the LO, employers and people in their own homes. Not all paragraphs are relevant in all situations. Try to adopt the following suggestions whenever you interview someone. A good interview is not simply a matter of being nice to the public.

Your manner

Being courteous

Show that you value every person as a person. Call someone by their name if you know it. Never address someone by their surname only. In some localities it is customary to use a first name only. Judge whether this will be acceptable to the interviewee. Stand up when introduced. Shake hands, if it is expected. You may be visiting an employer, or meeting an old person who is accustomed to shaking hands at an introduction.

Being sensitive

For most people, coming to the LO or receiving a home visit is an important event. They may be nervous, or noisy and talkative. Old people for instance are often flustered. Put them at ease. Be friendly but professional. Recognise that giving information about personal affairs can be an ordeal. Reassure them that information supplied to the Department is given in confidence and will be respected. Don't forget how uncertain you felt on your first day.

Listening hard

It is not enough just to seem attentive. Listening requires constant mental effort.

Checking personal prejudices

Do not let personal views colour your judgement and behaviour. In the course of your work you may find that you have been lied to or misled. This is a hazard you must learn to live with.

Explaining and informing

Give accurate information. If you sense the interviewee might not fully understand the issues, give explanations without waiting to be asked. Be objective. See all sides of an issue. Explain the issue leaflets. You may be asked for advice on matters outside the Department's work. Be as helpful as possible but do not give advice on legal and technical matters outside the Department's scope. Keep a list of useful organisations in the area. If you can't answer the query, suggest someone who might be able to, for example the CAB.

For all other social security benefits except SB/IVB and UB encourage enquirers to claim benefit immediately if it seems possible that they may be entitled. They would not be adversely affected if they claimed benefit and this was disallowed but they may lose benefit if they delay claiming.

Take care when advising about SB/IVB and UB. An unsuccessful claim establishes a period of interruption of employment (PIE) and can affect entitlement adversely for subsequent linked claims if the claimant has a deficient contribution record in the original relevant income tax year (RITY). Explain to an enquirer the relationship between tax and benefit years, and the linking rules. Give them the relevant leaflet and encourage them to decide when to make a claim. Point out that a claim cannot be withdrawn after the adjudication officer has given their decision. If a claimant decides to defer their claim to gain the advantage of a later RITY for which they have a better contribution record, tell them how they can submit 'credits only' claims in the meantime.

Never tell people that they will be better off claiming benefits paid by other departments or organisations. If you think this may be the case, give the person all the relevant facts at your disposal. Suggest that they consult the other organisation before making up his mind.

Forecasting

Most people try to provide for their retirement. You may be asked about the pension a person can expect when they retire. Perhaps the question may be linked to a contributions enquiry. This type of question is often difficult to answer precisely, yet the person needs the best information you can give. Always send a written reply. Use one of the DN/NP 322 letters whenever possible. Make it clear at the beginning of the letter that:

(1) the information you have given is based on:

(a) what you have been told about the person's circumstances; and

(b) the law as it is at present; and

(2) as both of these may change, the advice or information you have given may be outdated.

Apply these principles to all enquiries which involve forecasting.

Interviewing points to remember

When conducting an interview, remember the following "good practices":

(1) Identify yourself, preferably by name. This will be especially reassuring to a blind person. Alternatively wear a lapel badge bearing your name or obtain a personal name plate.

(2) Do not smoke in front of the person being interviewed.

(3) Make certain that the interviewees cannot read anything about themselves from the official documents that are necessary for the interview. Do not leave CPs, GBUs or files with interviewees.

(4) If you are asked to countersign a document certifying the identify of the person named on the form, sign only if you have sufficient knowledge. Otherwise, tell the caller to obtain the signature of a personal acquaintance.

(5) Remember to look at the person you are talking to. If writing, look up occasionally. It shows your interest, that you're human and that the interview is more than just routine. It helps if you are asked for identity details at some future time and it also enables you to pick up signals about how the interviewee is feeling. They may be confused, worried or angry. This will be missed if you do not look at them. This is the body language or 'non-verbal communication' and is an important aspect of interviewing skills.

(6) Do not enter into political discussion or argument.

The interview

An interview is a directed, purposeful conversation. Follow the chart shown overleaf.

If the person to be interviewed at the LO is accompanied, perhaps by a husband, wife, friend or relative, make the other person welcome. Be careful to address your questions to the claimant and to write down their answers. Do not ignore the other person. They may retaliate and impede the progress of the interview.

If the claimant is accompanied by two or more people, see COP 1601–1750.

If you call on someone in their home and they are not alone, check before you start the interview if they mind the third party being present. If they do, suggest moving to another room.

War Pensions

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the number of claimants of war pensions in (a) Crewe and Nantwich and (b) Cheshire for each of the last five years. [36346]

Mr. Heald: The information is not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps he intends to take to reduce the waiting times for war pension claims and appeals to be processed. [38861]

Mr. Heald: This is a matter for Kevin Caldwell, chief executive of the War Pensions Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from K. C. Caldwell to Mr. David Hanson, dated 23 July 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question about the steps being taken to reduce the waiting times for war pension claims and appeals to be processed.

You may recall that in my letter to you dated 13 June 1996, in response to a previous Parliamentary Question (Official Report vol 279, col 332–333), I explained the many changes within the War Pensions Agency (WPA) in 1995 and how these had affected our performance.

The situation has improved since I wrote although our performance is still not as good as we would wish. We have taken the following steps to accelerate the improvement:

(i) We have examined the way in which we currently process appeals against the assessment of disablement. We believe that this can be improved with a consequent reduction in the time taken to prepare these appeals for hearing by Pensions Appeal Tribunal. We are currently testing the revised process to ensure that all parties, principally appellants and PAT members, are satisfied with the standard of service provided. As assessment appeals are the majority of all appeals received, this revised process would significantly reduce the time taken in clearing appeals.

(ii) We have created a taskforce within our operational group to address particular issues of process, organisation and resources and to identify and facilitate solutions.

(iii) We are in the process of recruiting a number of additional staff for a limited period to deal with the work currently awaiting action. As these staff need to receive training, it is anticipated that it will be September 1996 before this has a significant effect upon the current situation.

(iv) In the short term, we are committing additional resources, in the form of overtime, specifically to clearing claims and appeals. The results of this will quickly be apparent.

These steps are intended to reduce clearance times and the numbers of uncleared claims and appeals and ensure the Agency achieves the targets set by the Secretary of State for 1996–97.

I hope you find my reply helpful.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many applicants, to date, have successfully claimed war widows' pension under revisions introduced in the Pensions Act 1995; [38109]

(2) what information was provided to claimants of war widows' pensions, following the change of legislation in 1995, on the impact of the backdating of benefits on means-tested benefits; and if he will make a statement. [38108]

(3) if he will make a statement on the average processing times for applications for war widows' pension, since the changes in regulations following the Pensions Act 1995. [38110]

Mr. Heald: These are matters for Kevin Caldwell, chief executive of the War Pensions Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from K. C. Caldwell to Mr. David Hinchliffe, dated 23 July 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions about restoration of War Widows Pensions (WWP).

I can confirm that to date a total of 14,586 widows have successfully applied to have their WWP reinstated under revisions introduced in the Pensions Act 1995.

As far as overlapping benefits are concerned it might be helpful if I explain that WWP overlaps with National Insurance (NI) benefits such as a Retirement Pension payable on the basis of a late husband's NI contributions or Incapacity Benefit and with income related benefits such as Income Support and Housing Benefit. £10 per week of a WWP is statutorily disregarded for the purposes of claims to income related benefits and where the war widow is in receipt of a Supplementary Pension, and the majority are, that statutory disregard is increased to £61.71 per week.

When making a claim for the restoration of a WWP, the widow is asked to complete a claim form which indicates that the award of a WWP might affect the amount of money received from other benefits. The claim form also explains that any arrears of WWP due may have to be reduced to take account of other benefits that have been paid.

In addition, when we notify the widow that her claim has been successful, we again advise her that the restored pension may affect the amount of money she can get from certain other benefits, and that we will have to make enquiries about these benefits.

The average processing time for applications for WWP, since the changes in regulations following the 1995 Pension Act, is 65 days (August 1995 to June 1996). The Secretary of State target for clearance of these cases is 80 per cent in 70 days. These figures do not include the war widows restoration exercise.

I do not have a ready means of calculating precisely the average clearance times for the restored WWP exercise. But I can tell you that the first formal claims began to be received in August 1995 and we were able to start notifying widows of the results from 22 September, by which time we had received 8,282 claims. To date we have received 14,814 claims and have made decisions on 14,719 of them.

Since the announcement of the intention to provide in the Pensions Bill for restoration of WWP, the Agency has had to set up new procedures and supporting material, train staff and reprogram our computer system to handle the claims. It was originally envisaged the Pensions Bill would receive Royal Assent in October 1995. However, Royal Assent was received on 19 July 1995, some 3 months earlier. The Agency set itself a target to clear the vast majority of claims by the end of March 1996 and, by 4 April 1996 of 13,847 claims received we had made decisions on 13,051.

The length of time taken to clear a claim very much depends on how much information the widow is able to supply at the time she claims, and whether we have to make additional enquiries. We have no arrears of work in this area, and currently we are notifying the results of claims made since the middle of June this year, ie less than 5 weeks ago.

I hope you find my reply helpful.

Pensioners

Sir Andrew Bowden: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list as a proportion of all pensioners those (a) pensioners, (b) single male pensioners aged under 75 years, (c) single female pensioners aged under 75 years, (d) single pensioners aged under 75 years, (e) pensioner couples aged under 75 years, (f) single male pensioners aged 75 years and over, (g) single female pensioners aged 75 years and over, (h) single pensioners aged 75 years and over and (i) pensioner couples where at least one partner is aged 75 years and over receiving income from savings; and if he will provide figures for the mean and median amount received for the latest year for which figures are available. [36258]

Mr. Heald: The information is in the table.

	Proportion with investment income (per cent.)	Mean amount for those in receipt (£ per week)	Median amount for those in receipt (£ per week)
All pensioner units	73	37.40	8.70
Single male pensioners under 75	65	51.00	15.80
Single female pensioners under 75	70	29.40	5.90
Single pensioners under 75	69	33.90	7.40
Pensioner couples with head under 75	83	52.80	15.90
Single male pensioners 75 and over	73	38.10	6.50
Single female pensioners 75 and over	65	18.50	3.60

	Proportion with investment income (per cent.)	Mean amount for those in receipt (£ per week)	Median amount for those in receipt (£ per week)
Single pensioners 75 and over	67	22.60	4.40
Pensioner couples with head over 75	80	42.70	11.30

Notes:

1. These results are based on a relatively small sample size. Therefore they should be treated with a higher degree of caution than usual.
2. All amounts are in July 1993 prices.
3. Proportions are rounded to the nearest whole percentage, amounts are rounded to the nearest 10p.
4. A pensioner unit is defined as a single pensioner over State Pension Age (SPA) and a couple where the husband, or head, is over SPA. To provide consistency the age of the head has been used to define the age of the couple.

National Insurance

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many employers have qualified for exemption from national insurance contributions and how many qualifying employees were previously (a) unemployed, (b) on a training scheme, (c) carers and (d) lone parents. [36902]

Mr. Heald: From 6 April 1996 to 9 July 1996, the Contributions Agency issued 398 national insurance holiday deduction certificates to employers[1]. Of the 398 qualifying employees, 381 were unemployed[2], three were carers and 14 were lone parents.

Notes:

[1] The Contributions Agency has recorded 336 employers as having received one or more national insurance holiday deduction certificates. The numbers are less than the number of qualifying employees due to a combination of a short delay in recording employer details after the Contributions Agency has issued a certificate and because an employer may have taken on more than one qualifying employee.

[2] Includes people on a training scheme who are not identified separately for these purposes.

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the effect on national insurance fund revenues in a full year of levying (a) a 2 per cent. employee contribution rate and (b) a 3 per cent. employer contribution rate on the earnings of employees with total earnings currently below the NIC lower earnings limit. [37595]

Mr. Heald: The estimated effects on national insurance fund revenue for 1997–98 are:

+ £ 95 million and + £100 million respectively.

Government Actuary's Department.

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will list the number of people paying voluntary class 3 national insurance contributions for the most recent available year, and the number of these who are employed earners with earnings below the national insurance lower earnings limit, breaking the figures down by gender; [37594]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 2 July, Official Report, column 418, if he will estimate the number of (a) men and (b) women with earnings below the lower earnings limit for national insurance contributions who pay voluntary class 3 NICs. [37586]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is as follows.

Number of people paying voluntary class 3 contributions for 1993–94

Men	111,000
Total	181,000

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be total contribution income for national insurance for 1995–96, 2000–01, 2010–11, 2020–21 and 2030–31, assuming (a) present contribution rates, (b) upper and lower earnings levels linked with earnings and (c) upper and lower earnings levels linked with earnings and the upper earnings level raised by 200 per cent. of average earnings, relative to current estimates of expenditure on benefits in those years. [38543]

Mr. Heald: The available information is in the tables.

Notes:

1. The information given in the tables has been derived from the Government Actuary's Reports on the Third Quinquennial Review under section 137 of the Social Security Act 1975 (HC 160) and on the Financial Provisions of the Pensions Bill 1994 (CM 2714) by:

adjusting the entries in table E3 and E4 of HC 160 so that the projected contribution income is based on a continuation of the 1994–95 combined Class 1 contribution rate (18.25%). Hence, the tables give information for 1994–95 rather than 1995–96;

adjusting contribution income for the years 2020–21 and 2030–31 to allow for the increased number of contributors expected as a result of the Pensions Act 1995;

adjusting the amounts of contracted-out rebate to allow for the difference between rebate rates assumed in HC 160 and those now expected.

2. For table (c), a further adjustment has been made to allow for the change in primary Class 1 contributions and rebates following from increasing the UEL to twice average earnings.

3. The estimated benefit expenditure information given in all three tables is that consistent with increasing the UEL and LEL in line with prices, even where (in tables (b) and (c)) the contribution income figures are based on increasing those limits in line with earnings, and allows for the effects of the Pensions Act 1995.

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the Government Actuary's estimate of the excess of national insurance contribution income over outgoings for 1995–96 and for 1994–95, assuming actual rates of unemployment, excluding the Treasury grant and (a) excluding and (b) including the effects of contracted-out rebates, using the methodology set out in Cm 2445. [38542]

Mr. Heald: The information is in the table.

	1994–95	1995–96
(a) Excluding contracted-out rebates
Contributions income	43.3	45.7
Benefit outgo	39.3	40.6

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the impact on revenue of an increase in the upper earnings limit for national insurance contributions by average earnings for the years 1995–96 and 1996–97. [39006]

Mr. Heald: Raising the upper earnings limit for 1995–96 and 1996–97 in line with the movement in average earnings would increase national insurance contribution revenue for each of those years by an estimated £50 million[1].

Government Actuary's Department

Note:

[1] This figure has been calculated by comparing the effects on national insurance contribution revenue of:

(i) a UEL for 1995/96 derived by applying the September 1993 to September 1994 4 per cent. increase in seasonally adjusted average earnings for all employees in GB [Table 5.1 of Labour Market Trends] to the UEL for 1994/95; and

(ii) a UEL for 1996/97 derived by applying the September 1994 to September 1995 3.1 per cent. increase in seasonally adjusted average earnings for all employees in GB [Table 5.1 of Labour Market Trends] to the unrounded result of (i);

and the actual UELs for those years.

Contracts

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a list showing the number, nature and value of contracts awarded by his Department to Coopers and Lybrand, KPMG, Price Waterhouse, Ernst and Young, Deloitte and Touche, Arthur Andersen, Grant Thornton, BDO Stoy Hayward, Pannel Kerr Forster, and Robson Rhodes and their subsidiaries and associates, during 1995 and 1996. [37316]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available.

Internet

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to ensure that major publications from his Department are accompanied by a simultaneous electronic release of the text on the Internet. [37242]

Mr. Burt: The Department will consider the simultaneous electronic publication of all important documents on a case-by-case basis, in line with the Government's policy on open government. We will shortly be releasing corporate home pages on the Internet. These will be in addition to home pages for some of our executive agencies.

Claims (Duration)

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average duration of a benefit claim in respect of (a) incapacity benefit, (b) severe disablement allowance, (c) invalid care allowance, (d) unemployment benefit, (e) income support where the claimant is unemployed, (f) income support where the claimant is a lone parent and (g) income support where a disability premium is payable. [36904]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the tables.

Table 1

Benefit	Average duration of claim
Sickness benefit/invalidity benefit[1]	1 year 5 months
Severe disablement allowance	7 years 11 months

Benefit	Average duration of claim
Invalid care allowance[1]	2 years 6 months
Unemployment benefit[2]	20 weeks

Notes:

[1] Data are not yet available for incapacity benefit. Sickness benefit, invalidity benefit and invalid care allowance claim durations are based on all claims that terminated during the 1994–95 year. Data are derived from a clerical sample of 500 invalid care allowance cases, and from a 1 per cent. sample of sickness benefit and invalidity benefit cases.

[2] Durations for unemployment benefit and income support are calculated from the number of live claims at a given point in time: for unemployment benefit this is 10 August 1995, for income support 25 August 1995. The unemployment benefit data are derived from a 5 per cent. sample of cases.

Table 2: Income support[1] claim duration

	Number of cases (000)	Percentage on benefit for: Under 1 year	1–2 years	2–3 years	3 years or over
Unemployed	1,710	51.5	16.2	8.8	23.5
Disabled	737	12.8	15.2	12.4	59.6
Lone parents	1,074	23.2	15.9	12.9	48.0

Note:

[1] It is not possible to calculate the average duration of income support claims as no reliable information is available on durations of claims for those people who have been in receipt of income support for relatively long periods. A full explanation is given in the introduction to the 1993 annual statistical enquiry, a copy of which is in the Library.

Income Support

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many new claims have been made for income support where the claimant has liability for a mortgage since October 1995; and how many of these have been treated as existing claims where the claimant (a) is a carer, (b) has been refused payments under a mortgage protection policy because of a pre-existing condition or because he or she is HIV positive, (c) is a lone parent and (d) is a remand prisoner. [37423]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is as follows.

The changes that were introduced in October 1995 differentiated between loans taken out before 2 October 1995 (existing housing costs) and loans taken out after that date (new housing costs). Claimants in the above groups who have new housing costs have them treated as if they were existing housing costs.

The number of claimants who claimed income support for mortgage interest since October 1995, and who were still in receipt in March 1996—the latest available figure—was 73,000, of whom 71,000 had existing housing costs. The remaining 2,000 claimants had new housing costs, some of whom were treated as existing housing costs because they belonged to one of the specified groups.

Changes of Circumstances

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the average number of changes of circumstances over a period of (a) three months and (b) six months for claims in respect of each of (i) incapacity benefit, (ii) severe disablement allowance, (iii) invalid care allowance, (iv) unemployment benefit, (v) income support where the claimant is unemployed, (vi) income support where the claimant is a lone parent and (vii) income support where a disability premium is payable. [36905]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

Benefit	Average number of change of circumstances per customer: January–March 1996[1]	January–June 1996[2]
Income support	1.25	2.29
Invalid care allowance	0.93	1.82

[1] Derived from income support live load figures for February 1996 and invalid care allowance live load for March 1996.

[2] Derived from income support live load figures for May 1996 and invalid care allowance live load for June 1996.

1. All live load information is a snapshot of the number of cases at a point in time. The income support live load is counted quarterly, invalid care allowance live load monthly.

Statutory Sick and Maternity Pay

Mr. Chris Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what percentage of employers he estimates will be able to recover payments of statutory sick pay under the percentage threshold scheme in 1995–96; and what percentage and amount of total spending on statutory sick pay he estimates will be borne by employers as a result. [37593]

Mr. Heald: It is estimated that around 43 per cent. of firms paying statutory sick pay were able to recover some portion of their SSP payments under the percentage threshold scheme in 1995–96.

The Government Actuary's Department estimated that in 1995–96 employers would meet around 97 per cent. of the overall cost of paying SSP to employees. This amounted to £845 million.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the percentage of employers who are able fully to recover payments of statutory maternity pay; and what proportion and amount of total SMP payments is borne by employers. [37592]

Mr. Heald: It is estimated that around 38 per cent. of firms paying statutory maternity pay were able to recover payments of SMP in full in 1995–96.

The Government Actuary's Department estimated that employers would meet around 7 per cent. of the cost of paying SMP to their employees in 1995–96. This amounted to around £35 million.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the average annual amounts and duration of statutory sick pay for male and female workers and the average amount and earnings-related amount of statutory maternity pay paid to female workers using data for 1992–93 from the Lifetime labour market database. [37591]

Mr. Heald: The information relating to statutory sick pay is in the table:

1992–93	Average amount of SSP payment £	Average duration (days)
Men	[1]175	[1,2]17
Women	[1]163	[1,2]16

The estimated average amount of statutory maternity pay (SMP) paid to women in 1992–93 is £1,200[1]. The earnings related element is estimated to be £700[1,3].

[1] All figures taken from a 1 per cent. sample of SSP and SMP payments made in the UK.

[2] Figures estimated on the assumption that the standard working week is five days, and that higher rate statutory sick pay is in payment.

[3] Estimated by taking 90 per cent. of total pay and converting to weekly figure. Assumes that every payment of SMP is for a six-week period. Pay used for this estimate may not be for the same period as that used originally to calculate SMP.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the percentage of female employees who received statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance in the most recent available year. [37589]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is as follows.

It is estimated that around 1 per cent. of female employees at spring 1994 were in receipt of statutory maternity pay or maternity allowance.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will estimate the percentage of employees who received statutory sick pay or sickness benefit in the most recent available year. [37588]

Mr. Heald: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is as follows.

It is estimated that around 2 per cent. of employees at spring 1994 were in receipt of statutory sick pay or sickness benefit.

Out-of-hours Service

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how much his Department will save annually on the new proposals to close the out-of-hours service in October; [37558]

(2) what arrangements are being made for the public for out-of-hours contact with the Benefits Agency. [37559]

Mr. Roger Evans: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 23 July 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking how much his Department will save annually on the new proposals to close the Out of Hours Service (OOHS) in October and what arrangements are being made for the public for out of hours contact with the Benefits Agency.

I recently outlined the BA's plans for the future delivery of social security benefits based on the Benefit Agency vision of "right money to the right person at the right time, every time".

The Agency will carry out a wide-ranging review of its activities as part of the Departmental Change Programme. Such a programme of change will cover all fundamental areas of the organisation's business and we are committed to achieve a 25% improvement in our productivity by 1998/99. In the first year it has been necessary to identify efficiencies and economies in excess of £200 million. All efficiencies and economies have been considered alongside the expenditure priorities the Agency has been set.

It is against this background that the Agency decided to review the need for the OOHS which provides a service to customers at night and weekends. A decision on its viability is expected later this year and it is not possible to say at this time what savings, if any, might be made.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Freeline

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations he has received about the abolition of the DSS freeline. [37580]

Mr. Roger Evans: I have received 81 representations from hon. Members and six representations from members of the public.

Dr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what action he is taking to ensure that staff in local offices have the necessary expertise to (a) provide an overview of services and benefits available, (b) offer advice about maximising benefit entitlement and (c) deal with the other types of inquiries previously dealt with by the freeline; and what plans he has to ensure that these services are quickly and readily available to telephone callers. [37581]

Mr. Evans: The provision of advice on benefits is an operational matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Dr. Lynne Jones, dated 23 July 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what action he is taking to ensure that staff in local offices have the necessary expertise to (a) provide an overview of services and benefits available, (b) offer advice about maximising benefit entitlement and (c) deal with the other types of inquiries previously dealt with by the Freeline; and what plans he has to ensure that these services are quickly and readily available to telephone callers.

The Benefits Agency (BA) is working towards a vision to provide an efficient service which offers reliable advice and pays the right money to the right person, at the right time, every time. The BA Customer Service Requirement issued in April this year was developed to establish a minimum level of customer service throughout the Agency. These minimum standards are displayed in all public caller areas. The BA customer charter also sets out the standards of service that have to be provided by the BA.

Staff in local offices receive guidance on the full range of benefits as part of their initial and ongoing training and development. Staff have access to benefit computer systems and individual customer details, and are well placed to advise callers accurately on their entitlement to benefit.

All staff have been made aware of the closure of Freeline. Any callers who may have contacted Freeline previously will be referred either to a section able to deal with general enquiries or to a relevant expert on a particular benefit. All BA offices have access to the Integrated Benefit Information System which staff can use to provide general benefit advice.

The BA has made considerable investment in its telephone services and infrastructure over the last two and half years and by October 1996 all sites will have Direct Dial facilities. This will improve access for customers and reduce costs.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what sources of help will be available for clients following the closure of the Benefits Agency freephone advice line; and if he will make a statement. [38329]

Mr. Evans: This is an operational matter for Peter Mathison, chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 24 July 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what sources of help will be available for clients following the closure of the Benefits Agency freephone advice line; and if he will make a statement.

Following the closure of Freeline help and advice will be available for customers through the Agency's network of local benefit offices. The closure of Freeline will allow resources to be refocused so that the customer is in touch with the staff who administer their claims or who can directly link the benefits available with the specific personal details of the customer.

Benefit literature is readily available in local offices, post offices and numerous other outlets.

Customers with disabilities may still ring the Benefit Enquiry Line free of charge for help and advice.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many telephone inquiries the Benefits Agency freephone advice line has received in each month since January; and if he will provide a breakdown of the nature of the advice requested. [38328]

Mr. Evans: This is an operational matter for Peter Mathison, chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 23 July 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many telephone enquiries his Benefits Agency (BA) freephone advice line has received in each month since January; and if he will provide a breakdown of the nature of the advice requested.

The information is not available in the format requested. The number of calls received has been taken to mean the number of calls answered by an adviser. Due to the confidentiality of the Freeline service records were not kept about the nature of the advice sought or provided. However, research for the BA's National Customer Survey 1995 indicated that 37% of customers telephoned Freeline to find out about eligibility, 25% for general information and 29% for issues relating to individual benefit enquiries.

1996	Number
January	215,546
February	238,494
March	290,787
April	231,067
May	293,542
June	223,692
July (up to 12 July)	59,957

Figures are provisional and subject to change. I hope you find this reply helpful.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans his Department has to monitor the effects of the closure of the national Benefits Agency inquiry freeline on the take-up of income-related benefits. [39232]

Mr. Evans: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 23 July 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what plans his Department has to monitor the effects of the closure of the national Benefits Agency Enquiry Freeline on the take-up of income related benefits.

In my letter dated 3 July I explained it was not anticipated that the closure of Freeline would have any material impact on the take up of income related benefits.

There was no monitoring of the take up of income related benefits when Freeline was open and there are currently no plans to monitor the take up now Freeline has closed.

Thank you for allowing me to explain the position.

State Earnings-related Pensions

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the additional cost in cash terms to public funds in 1996–97 in respect of pensions if the 1979 SERPS rules still applied. [37582]

Mr. Heald: The only changes to the SERPS rules which have come into effect since 1979 relate to the calculation of the amount deducted from gross additional pension in respect of post-April 1988 periods of contracted-out employment. It is estimated that expenditure is £60 million higher in 1996–97 as a result. The remaining changes under the Social Security Act 1986 will be implemented from April 1999 onwards and those under the Pensions Act 1995 from April 1997 onwards.

Performance Targets

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish the performance targets for each social security office and area in the county of Tyne and Wear for (a) 1995–96 and (b) 1996–97; how many of those targets were achieved in 1995–96, in each case indicating how those targets and achievements relate to those set nationally. Retirement Pension

Mr. Redwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be the additional cost to public funds in cash terms in 1996–97 of the basic retirement pension, if pensions had been indexed to wages for the last 25 years. [37578]

Mr. Heald: The additional cost to public funds if the basic pension had been uprated by average earnings over the last 25 years is estimated to be £5.2 billion per annum in 1996–97 (cash prices).

Notes:

1. The additional cost is net of the effect on income-related benefits.

2. The cost is calculated on a basic state pension in 1996–97 being:

Cat A: £76.10

Cat BL: £47.70

Source:

Average earnings index (whole economy, all earnings, unadjusted). The Abstract of Statistics for Social Security Benefits and Contributions and Indices of Prices and Earnings. Uprating rounding convention has been followed in calculating benefit rates.

The estimate is based on the expenditure figures shown in the departmental report, Cm 3213, for basic retirement pensions. It does not include the effect on those benefits normally paid at the same rate as basic retirement pension or other benefits paid to people over pension age.

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the Government Actuary's estimate of the average lump sum investment required in an annuity to provide a personal pension equivalent to the basic retirement pension at 65 years for people aged 25, 35, 45 and 55 years today, assuming that the pension is related (a) only to prices and (b) to earnings at 1.5 per cent. per annum. [38541]

Mr. Heald: The information is in the table.

Estimated lump sum investment required in an annuity to provide a personal pension equivalent to the basic retirement pension at 65 years

Government Actuary's Department.
Notes:
1. The table indicates the estimated lump sum payments if:

Column (a): the current basic retirement pension for a single person of £61.15 per week were to be increased in future in line with the retail prices index; or

Column (b): the current basic retirement pension for a single person of £61.15 per week were to be increased in future in line with the index of national average earnings, which has been assumed to increase by 1.5 per cent. per annum over the increase in the retail prices index.

2. The assumptions underlying these estimates are consistent with those adopted for the purpose of the Government Actuary's March 1996 review of the National Insurance rebates for persons contracted-out of the State Earnings-Related Pension Scheme through Appropriate Personal Pension Schemes for the five year period commencing on 6 April 1997 (Cm 3221).

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the weekly state basic and earnings-related pensions payable to men and women on average earnings and half average earnings reaching pension age in each year from 1996 to 2040, in cash terms and as a percentage of their pre-retirement earnings. [37884]

1. All amounts are in cash prices. Amounts of AP are rounded to the nearest 10p, amounts of RP are rounded to the nearest 5p and percentages are rounded to the nearest whole number.
2. Average earnings figures are taken from New Earnings Survey 1995.
3. The above estimates are prepared by the Government Actuary's Department (GAD) using the following assumptions:
Treasury forecast was used for the current year. Thereafter GAD have used an illustrative assumption of 5 per cent. per annum.
Earnings rise by 1.5 per cent. higher than prices.
Individuals are contracted in to the State Earnings Related Pension Scheme throughout.
Pre-retirement earnings are taken as estimated earnings in the year prior to retirement.
Changes introduced in the Pensions Act 1995 have been taken into account.

Allowances

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the number of people who have suffered a reduction in the reduced earnings allowance with the introduction of the retirement allowance in (a) the benefit offices covering Merthyr Tydfil and Rhymney, (b) Wales and (c) the United Kingdom. [37873]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is as follows.

As at 1 April 1995 there were approximately 985 people receiving retirement allowance in Wales and 10,700 in Great Britain. In order to assess those who will be transferred to retirement allowance under the amended legislation which came into force on 24 March, the Benefits Agency has identified all remaining reduced earnings allowance recipients who are over pensionable age. About 350 such recipients were identified within the area administered by the Eastern Valleys district, about 1,900 in Wales and about 20,000 in Great Britain.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list all decisions relating to (a) the special hardship allowance and (b) the reduced earnings allowance by the hearings of (a) the commission, (b) the tribunal and (c) the divisional court. [37874]

Mr. Evans: The information is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Robert Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many appeals have been lodged against a disallowance of incapacity benefit in the Coventry benefits district in each quarter since April 1995; how many of these have been from (a) new incapacity benefit claimants and (b) former claimants of invalidity benefit; in each case, how many appeals have been (i) disallowed, (ii) superseded and (iii) found in the claimant's favour; and how many are outstanding. [37853]

Mr. Burt: The administration of incapacity benefit is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Robert Ainsworth, dated 23 July 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliament Question asking how many appeals have been lodged against a disallowance of Incapacity Benefit (IB) in the Coventry benefits district in each quarter since April 1995; how many of these have been from (a) new IB claimants and (b) former claimants of Invalidity Benefit (IVB); in each case, how many appeals have been (i) disallowed, (ii) superseded and (iii) found in the claimant's favour; and how many are outstanding.

The information is not available in the format requested. Statistics are kept for disallowances relating to the all Work Test only. A breakdown of customers formerly in receipt of IVB and customers claiming IB on or after 13 April 1995 is not available as such statistics are not kept.

Such information as is available is shown in the attached table.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Total number of IB appeals against the All Work Test disallowance for the Coventry Benefits Agency (BA) District

Quarter ending	June 1995	September 1995	December 1995	March 1995

Notes:
Number of cases include both customer's formerly in receipt of IVB and customer's claiming IB on or after 13 April 1995, a breakdown of the two is not available.
Number of cases outstanding is a cumulative figure at the end of each quarter
Data are provisional and subject to amendment.

Mr. Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people are currently receiving incapacity benefit in the Coventry benefits district; and how many of these were formerly in receipt of invalidity benefit. [37850]

Mr. Burt: The administration of incapacity benefit is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Robert Ainsworth, dated 23 July 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many people are currently receiving Incapacity Benefit (IB) in the Coventry Benefits District; and how many of these were formerly in receipt of Invalidity Benefit (IVB).

The number of people in receipt of IB in the Coventry District, on 29 February 1996, was 10,800, of which 7,500 were formerly in receipt of IVB. This figure excludes a small number of clerically processed cases and it is provisional and subject to amendment.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Mr. Ainsworth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many new claims for incapacity benefit have been made in the Coventry benefits district since April 1995; how many of these were refused to the Benefits Agency medical service; and how many of these were subsequently (a) allowed and (b) disallowed by reason of (i) failing the all-work test, (ii) failing to attend the medical examination and (iii) failing to return the IB50 questionnaire; [37851]

(2) how many claimants formerly in receipt of invalidity benefit in the Coventry benefits district were referred to the Benefits Agency medical service in each quarter since April 1995; and how many of these were subsequently (a) transferred to incapacity benefit and (b) disallowed by reason of (i) failing the all-work test, (ii) failing to attend the medical examination and (iii) failing to return the IB50 questionnaire. [37852]

Mr. Burt: The administration of incapacity benefit is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Robert Ainsworth, dated 23 July 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Questions asking how many new claims for Incapacity Benefit (IB) have been made in the Coventry Benefits District since April 1995; how many of these were referred to the Benefits Agency Medical Service (BAMS); and how many of these were subsequently (a) allowed and (b) disallowed by reason of (i) failing the all work test, (ii) failing to attend the medical examination and (iii) failing to return the IB50 questionnaire; and how many claimants formerly in receipt of Invalidity Benefit (IVB) in the Coventry Benefits District were referred to the BAMS in each quarter since April 1995; and how many of these were subsequently (a) transferred to incapacity benefit and (b) disallowed by reason of (i) failing the all work test, (ii) failing to attend the medical examination and (iii) failing to return the IB50 questionnaire.

The information is not available in the format requested. The statistics kept do not differentiate between customers formerly in receipt of IVB and customers claiming IB on or after 13 April 1995.

The attached table gives details of the information available.

(4) how many people who have been disallowed incapacity benefits in the Coventry benefits district in each quarter since April 1995 are (a) currently signing on as unemployed, (b) claiming unemployment benefits and (c) have started work. [39706]

Mr. Burt: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the chief executive of the Benefits Agency, Peter Mathison, on 23 July 1996.

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish a breakdown by age, sex and region of those claiming benefit due to medical incapacity on 1 April 1989 and on subsequent 1 Aprils distinguishing between those only receiving national insurance credits and those claiming direct payments of incapacity benefit. [38155]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available has been placed in the Library.

Family Credit

Mrs. Maddock: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people in (a) the south-west region, (b) the county of Dorset and (c) each district in Dorset were in receipt of family credit in each of the last five financial years. [38165]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of family credit is a matter for Peter Mathison, chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mrs. Diana Maddock, dated 23 July 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many people in the South West Region, the County of Dorset and in each district of Dorset were in receipt of Family Credit (FC) in each of the last five financial years.

The information is not available in the format requested. The FC computer system holds records of the total number of claims received, awarded and disallowed on a national basis.

Statistics are not kept which are specific to the South West Region or individual towns or areas. However, statistics are available which indicate the number of families in receipt of Family Credit within a BA office area at a particular date. The available information shown in the attached tables relates to the BA's Dorset District which includes the offices at Bournemouth, Poole and Weymouth.

Information is only available from 1993 as details relating to FC claims are normally destroyed after 18 months.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

7 June 1996	2,788	1,470	2,037	6,295

Data are provisional and subject to change.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans his Department has to monitor the impact that the Family Credit (General) Amendment Regulations 1996 will have on the staying-on rate for post-16 education for children whose parents are receiving family credit; and what consultations his Department held with the Department for Education and Employment before the implementation of these regulations. [39235]

Mr. Evans: We do not anticipate any impact on the staying-on rate. We estimate that the change will affect only about 15,000 families, all of whom will have already made a decision on school leaving. Family credit will remain in payment to families where the dependant has elected to remain in full-time non-advanced education.

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what is his estimate of (a) the numbers gaining from and (b) the costs of introducing into the calculation for family credit (i) the disabled child's premium, (ii) the disability premium and (iii) the carer premium; [39185]

(2) how many claimants of family credit have a disabled child. [39184]

Mr. Evans: Information is not currently available on which to base reliable estimates.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the cost of replacing the child care disregard with a cash allowance of the same value payable for (a) each child under five years and

(b) each child under 11 years in each of (i) family credit, (ii) disability working allowance, (iii) housing benefit and (iv) control tax benefit. [39002]

Mr. Evans: The cost of including an additional cash allowance of £60 a week per child in basic entitlement for family credit, disability allowance, housing benefit and council tax benefit is given in the table.

	Cost (£ billion)
Cash allowance for each child under five years	Around 1.8
Cash allowance for each child under 11 years	Around 4.7

Notes:

Estimates do not include behavioural effects.

Source:

Figures are based on the 1991–92–93 Family Expenditure Surveys, uprated to 1996–97 levels. Estimates are net of the savings from abolishing the childcare disregard.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of the impact of the child care disregard on the hours worked by claimants of (i) family credit and (ii) disability working allowance. [39003]

Mr. Evans: The information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many claims in total have been made for the child care disregard in respect of (i) family credit and (ii) disability working allowance; and how many have been disallowed for (a) being in receipt of the maximum benefit, (b) child care not being provided by a registered provider, (c) the child being aged over 11 years and (d) being one of a couple where the partner was not incapacitated. [39048]

Mr. Evans [holding answer 23 July 1996]: Since October 1994, there have been 77,000 family credit claims and 156 disability working allowance claims where an award of benefit has been made and where there has also been a claim for help with child care charges. Information is not available on claims which have not led to an award of FC or DWA.

Provisional figures for the period up to 30 April 1996 for the number of families who did not receive extra help with child care charges is provided in the table.

Non-receipt of extra benefit from the child care disregard in family credit and disability working allowance

Reason for the non-receipt of extra benefit from the childcare disregard	Family credit	Disability working allowance
Receiving maximum FC/DWA	18,000	17
No registered childcare provider	12,000	5
Child aged 11 years or over	3,000	4

Tribunal Venues

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) how many tribunal venues run by the independent tribunal service have been closed in the last 12 months; and where they were; [38492]

(2) what plans there are to close tribunal venues currently run by the independent tribunal service in the next 12 months. [38494]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administrative arrangements for social security appeals tribunals are the responsibility of the independent tribunal service, which has been asked to write to the hon. Member.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many tribunal venues there are in England, Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland for the hearing of (a) social security appeal tribunals, (b) disability appeal tribunals, (c) child support appeal tribunals and (d) medical appeal tribunals. [38491]

Mr. Evans: The administrative arrangements for social security, disability, medical and child support appeals tribunals are the responsibility of the independent tribunal service and the independent tribunal service, Northern Ireland, which have been asked to write to the hon. Member.

Small Businesses

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the impact of (a) his policies and (b) the work of his Department in helping small businesses in the last 12 months as against the previous 12 months; and if he will publish the performance indicators by which his Department monitors the impact and the statistical results of such monitoring. [39144]

Mr. Heald: The Government recognise the crucial role played by small firms in the UK economy and aim to help them by providing sound economic conditions—keeping inflation and interest rates low; reducing legislative, administrative and taxation burdens; and where appropriate provide direct assistance in the form of specialist advice and support and easing access to finance.

The reductions we have made to the lower rates of employers' national insurance contributions have helped to keep down the non-wage costs of UK businesses, including small business, and they are now among the lowest in Europe. The introduction of the employers' national insurance contribution "holiday" from April 1996 offers small businesses a further opportunity to reduce their non-wage costs. With the Inland Revenue, we have an on-going joint working programme to reduce the burdens on businesses of operating pay-as-you-earn and national insurance contributions. Successes of the programme so far include the piloting of a new employers telephone helpline and annual pack, and the provision of a joint application form to pay self-employed national insurance and tax for newly self-employed people.

We have also contributed to the Government's core deregulation initiatives by substantially reducing the number of forms sent to business and by revoking or amending regulations to reduce the burdens on business in areas such as statutory sick pay and statutory maternity pay.

We have targets for the current year of reducing forms sent to businesses by 20 per cent. and surveys, which businesses and local authorities are asked to take part in, by 2 per cent.

Benefits Agency Medical Services

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proposals he has for the future of the Benefits Agency medical services currently based at Grove house, Swansea. [38997]

Mr. Burt: The administration of the Benefits Agency medical services is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Alan Williams, dated 23 July 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to our recent Parliamentary Question asking what proposals he has for the future of the Benefits Agency Medical Services (BAMS) currently based at Grove House, Swansea.

At present there are no plans to close down the existing operations at Grove House, Swansea in advance of the contractorisation. BAMS regularly review the use of resources to ensure maximum efficiency and cost effectiveness. Any changes to the use of Grove House in the light of changing work volumes or staffing levels will be made in full consultation with staff and their representatives.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what safeguards will be put in place under the contractorisation of the Benefits Agency medical services to ensure that personal medical information obtained about benefit claimants will remain confidential to those who hold the patients' fully informed consent to receive it and will be used exclusively for purposes related to the claim for state benefit. [39188]

Mr. Burt: The Department places strong emphasis on customer confidentiality and would demand the same standards from the successful or contractors. The contractor will have a mandatory contractual requirement to confirm to the security policy of the Department which is based on Government security policy.

The successful bidder or bidders will be required to ensure that any data or information passed to them by the Department or a third party, or revealed during the course of the contract, is used only for the purpose directly relating to the Department's business and only by the appropriate staff.

Rigorous monitoring systems will be put in place to ensure on-going compliance with the requirements.

Information Services

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people used the Benefits Agency's information services in North Yorkshire in each year since 1992–93. [38933]

Mr. Roger Evans: This is an operational matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Hugh Bayley, dated 23 July 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many people used in Benefits Agency's (BA's) information services in North Yorkshire in each year since 1992–93.

The information is not available in the format requested. I have assumed that the reference to Benefits Agency Information Services is about the Mobile Information Unit (MIU) covering the BA District of North Yorkshire. This District has offices in York, Harrogate, Northallerton, Richmond, Selby, Malton and Ripon. Figures for the number of people who used the service were kept from 1994/95 only and are shown below:

Figures are provisional and subject to change.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Publicity

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what is the cost budgeted for staff, employed full time or part time, to provide information and publicity in 1996–97; [39454]

(2) how many staff were assumed in his Department's budget, employed (i) full time and (ii) part time, (a) to work on press and media and (b) to provide information and publicity in 1996–97; [39472]

(3) what is the cost, assumed in the budget, of people employed full time or part time to work on the press and the media in 1996–97; [39989]

(4) what was the cost of staff employed full time or part time (i) to provide information and publicity and (ii) to work on the press and media in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1994–95 and (c) 1993–94; [39431]

(5) how many staff were employed full time or part time (a) to provide information and publicity and (b) on press and media in (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1994–95 and (iii) 1993–94. [39428]

Mr. Burt: I shall write to the hon. Member shortly.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his Department's budget in 1996–97 for consultants to assist with information, publicity, press and media. [39345]

Mr. Burt: The Department and its agencies do not use consultants to assist with information, publicity, press and media work.

Child Benefit

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the current level of expenditure on child benefit for 16 to 19 years, broken down by (a) age and (b) level of family income (i) before and (ii) after housing costs. [39234]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: Expenditure in 1995–96 on child benefit for 16-year-olds was estimated to be £320 million, for 17-year-olds £225 million and for 18-year-olds £100 million, a total of £645 million. Distribution of child benefit expenditure for 16 to 18-year-olds in 1992–93, the latest date for which information is available, is in the table:

Distribution of child benefit expenditure for children aged 16 to 18 by equivalised income band, UK 1992–93

Percentages

Equivalised weekly household income (January 1993 prices)	Before housing costs	After housing costs
£100 or less	10	19
>£100 to £150	18	16
>£150 to £200	19	22
>£200 to £250	16	14
>£250 to £300	13	11
>£300 to £350	8	7
Over £350	17	12

1. Information in the table is derived from the 1992/93 Households Below Average Income dataset. 1992/93 figures are for two calendar years data combined.
2. Income bands are based on the standard Households Below Average Income definition of income—weekly household disposable income adjusted for household size and composition (equivalised).
3. Estimates are shown by £50 income bands except where figures would be unreliable due to small sample sizes. All estimates are subject to sampling error.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the gross and net savings from removing child benefit from those aged 16 to 19 years. [39233]

Mr. Mitchell: Removing child benefit for 16 to 18-year-olds would save approximately £650 million gross and approximately £520 million net assuming that child allowances continue to be payable in other benefits.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many visits (i) he and (ii) his Ministers made to (a) the Newbury constituency and (b) other constituencies in the last 12 months. [39874]

Mr. Lilley: Such information as is available is set out in the table.

Minister	Visits to Newbury	Visits to other constituencies
Secretary of State	1	15
Minister of State (Lord Mackay)	0	19
Minister of State (Mr. Burt)	0	27
Parliamentary Under-Secretary (Mr. Evans)	0	18
Parliamentary Under-Secretary (Mr. Mitchell)	0	15
Parliamentary Under-Secretary (Mr. Heald)	0	29

Figures in the table do not include visits made by my hon. Friend the Minister for Social Security and Disabled People and the Under-Secretary, my hon. Friend the Minister for Monmouth (Mr. Evans), in their capacity as sponsor Ministers for Manchester and the north-west and for Bristol respectively.

Asthma

Sir Graham Bright: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many working days were lost as a result of asthma in the last year for which figures are available. [39557]

Mr. Heald: I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Disability Discrimination Act 1995

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he plans to publish a code of practice on access to goods, facilities, services and premises under part III of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 and guidance on the definition of disability contained in the Act. [39941]

Mr. Burt: We will be publishing tomorrow a code of practice covering rights to access to goods, facilities, services and premises under part III of the Disability Discrimination Act. The code gives practical advice through a wide range of examples to illustrate how service providers and those involved in the selling, letting and managing of premises can comply with the provisions, although the action required in any given situation will depend on the particular circumstances. By publishing the code now, we are giving service providers and others affected time to take account of its guidance before the new rights come into force on 2 December this year.

We will also be publishing guidance on the definition of disability contained in the Act, which helps to clarify who is protected by the Disability Discrimination Act's provisions.

The code and guidance will form part of a co-ordinated framework of advice and guidance to ensure that the business community and disabled people are aware of their new duties and rights under the Act.

As well as the printed version, the code and guidance will also be available in braille and on audio cassette tape. All formats will be available through Her Majesty's Stationery Office outlets.

Invalid Care Allowance

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate in each case of (a) numbers gaining and (b) the cost of introducing a taper of (i) 50 per cent. and (ii) 70 per cent. above the earnings limit to people in receipt of invalid care allowance. [39182]

Mr. Burt: The information is set out in the table:

1996–97	50 per cent. taper	70 per cent. taper
Net expenditure	£15 million	£15 million
Average gainers in year	25,000	20,000

1. Estimates are based on data from a small sample and should be treated with caution.
2. The calculations are based on deducting either 50p or 70p (depending on whether it is the 50 per cent. or 70 per cent. taper) from the average rate of Invalid Care Allowance for each pound earned about the earnings limit of £50.00.
3. Estimates are rounded to the nearest 5,000 (caseload) and £5 million (expenditure).

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is his estimate of (a) the numbers gaining from and (b) the cost of raising the earnings limit for invalid care allowance to (i) £55.10 and (ii) £61. [39183]

Mr. Burt: The information is set out in the table:

1996–97	Raising limit to £55.10	Raising limit to £61.00
Net expenditure	£5 million	£10 million
Average gainers in year	5,000	5,000

1. Estimates are based on data from a small sample and should be treated with caution.
2. Estimates are rounded to the nearest 5,000 (caseload) and £5 million (expenditure).

Adult Dependency Claims

Mr. Alan Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many and what proportion of claims for adult dependency increases made during 1995–96 of claims for adult dependency increases made during 1995–96 by claimants of (a) unemployment benefit, (b) incapacity benefit, (c) severe disablement allowance and (d) invalid care allowance were disallowed because an overlapping benefit was payable. [39004]

Mr. Roger Evans: Benefits which are subject to the overlapping benefit rules are reduced rather than disallowed. In cases where the benefit is reduced to nil, entitlement remains. This allows payment to commence, without the need for a further claim, should payment of the overlapping benefit cease for any reason. However, information on the number of adult dependency increases of unemployment benefit, incapacity benefit, severe disablement allowance and invalid care allowance that are reduced or extinguished under the overlapping benefit rules is not available and could be obtained only at a disproportionate cost.

EU Expenditure

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is social security expenditure as a percentage of gross domestic product and per capita in each European Union country in the current financial year. [39050]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available in the format requested. The latest available data are for 1993 and are restricted to member states at that time. This information conforms to the Eurostat definition of social protection which includes more than the usual UK definition of social security—for example, spending on health and local authority social services are included.

Current expenditure on social protection as percentage of GDP

Portugal	1,948.3
United Kingdom	4,323.4

[1] The purchasing power standard specific to private consumption is used to equivalise the per capita expenditure between the EU countries in terms of national price levels.
1. The information is reproduced from the Eurostat publication "Social protection expenditure and receipts 1980–1993".
2. The data are provisional for all countries except Denmark.
3. UK data are for the British financial year, all other data are for the calendar year.

Supported Housing Costs

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the terms of reference of his interdepartmental review of funding of supported housing costs; when he intends this review to be concluded; and if the review will involve consultations with other Departments. [38154]

Mr. Roger Evans: The timing and exact terms of the review, which will involve consultation with all interested Government Departments, will be completed shortly.

I shall write to the hon. Member when they are agreed.

Departmental Vehicles (Traffic Violations)

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the number of traffic violations involving departmental vehicles, the nature of the violations, and the total amount of fines arising from those violations, in each year since 1986. [39301]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available. Fines and other penalties are the responsibility of each driver.

Parliamentary Questions (Meetings)

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security on how many occasions ministerial conference and meeting rooms in the parliamentary estate have been booked in his name, or that of other Ministers in his Department, for meetings with Conservative Members immediately preceding questions to his Department in the current parliamentary Session. [39521]

Mr. Lilley: None.

Public Record Office Files

Mr. Livingstone: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security for what reasons the file with the classmark PIN 59/19 recorded at the Public Record Office is currently closed for 75 years by his Department; and if he will consider opening (a) all or (b) part of it. [37611]

Mr. Heald [holding answer 16 July 1996]: Under the Public Records Act, all records are required to be closed for the minimum period consistent with protection of the sensitive information identified in them. The normal closure period is 30 years, but the Lord Chancellor may prescribe an extension to this where any of a number of criteria are satisfied, including, for example, where it is necessary to protect an individual from disclosure of sensitive information during his or her lifetime.

The fact that a record has been closed for a stated period does not, however, preclude its release before that period has elapsed, if its sensitivity has passed, an application may be made for a reduction of the stated period.

We are already actively reviewing classes of information held in the Public Record Office with a view to accelerated opening, and will examine the file to which the question refers at the earliest opportunity.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much has been paid out (i) in unemployment benefit and (ii) on other benefits to unemployed people in (a) York and (b) North Yorkshire in each year since 1979–80. [38934]

Mr. Roger Evans [holding answer 23 July 1996]: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is set out in the table.

Notes:

1. Estimated expenditure is based on weekly caseload and average benefit payment.
2. For unemployment benefit, this is based on sample taken on the second Thursday of May and November for years prior to 1993–94. Thereafter it is based on samples taken on the second Thursday in February, May, August and November. For income support the sample was taken in May each year.
3. Data for 1984–85 for unemployment benefit are not available at this level and for Income Support prior to 1991.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Learmont Report

Sir Trevor Skeet: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in implementing the recommendations of the Learmont report. [40082]

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the Prison Service submission on the Learmont report was first submitted to his Department for consideration. [35862]

Miss Widdecombe: My right hon. and learned Friend asked the Prison Service to examine the operational impact and effectiveness of the Learmont recommendations. The Prison Service has made a number of submissions on various aspects of the Learmont report since it was published on 16 October 1995. Some Learmont recommendations called for fundamental reviews of policy. My right hon. and learned Friend has yet to receive the findings of all these major reviews.

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if there will be a period of consultation following the Government's statement on the implementation of the Learmont report. [35867]

Miss Widdecombe: Our response to the Learmont report and any associated arrangements are still under consideration.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is his latest estimate of the date of publication for his response to the Learmont report; and if he will make a statement; [36486]

(2) what measures are being taken to assess the cost of full implementation of the Learmont report; and if he will make a statement. [36679]

Mr. Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has, over what time scale and at what cost, to devolve greater responsibility to area managers in the Prison Service in respect of (i) corporate planning, (ii) service delivery, (iii) resource management and (iv) budgets and to develop links from area managers to board level through operational directors; [37773]

(2) what plans he has, and at what cost, to ensure that annual training for all staff in the Prison Service is increased to 14 days over the next five years; [37772]

(3) what plans he has, over what time scale and at what cost, to establish core competencies, for training purposes for all grades in the Prison Service; [37770]

(4) what plans he has, over what time scale and at what cost, to ensure that work managers operate from an office on their wing; [37778]

(5) what plans he has, over what time scale and at what cost, to ensure that those remand category A prisoners who cannot be held in dispersal prisons are held in other prisons with accommodation to category A standard; [37766]

(6) what plans he has to introduce overlocking and permanent movement systems to the dispersal prison estate; [37774]

(7) what plans he has to increase the amount of (a) training and (b) enhanced training staff in dispersal prisons undergo; [37731]

(8) what plans he has, over what time scale and at what cost, to ensure that prisoner programmes are adopted nationally, and that each sentenced prisoner serving more than 12 months has a sentence plan and is allocated a personal officer; [37768]

(9) what progress has been made in respect of the security of prisoners' property on transfer; [37776]

(10) what progress has been made with the Prison Service headquarters security survey on electronic security defences; what (i) technical problems and (ii) remedial work have been identified; and what plans he has over what time scale and at what cost to address these matters; [37764]

(11) what plans he has, over what time scale and at what cost, to provide leadership and management training to line managers in the Prison Service; [37771]

(12) what plans he has, over what time scale and at what cost, to ensure that the Prison Service is able to provide suitable accommodation for high-risk women prisoners and young offenders; [37767]

(13) what plans he has, over what time scale and at what cost, in respect of the role of wing managers in prisons; [37775]

(14) what plans he has, over what time scale and at what cost, (i) to improve security standards in the prison estate and (ii) to provide closed circuit television and other appropriate facilities at the entrance of dispersal prisons; [37763]

(15) what plans he has, over what time scale and at what cost, to ensure that an accreditation, system on the basis of performance measurement against national standards is introduced into the Prison Service; [37769]

(16) what plans he has, over what time scale and at what cost, to improve selection procedures for staff for dispersal prisons; [37777]

(17) what plans he has, over what time scale and at what cost, to provide a supporting secretariat to (i) the head of operations and security and (ii) the governing governor in the Prison Service; [37761]

(18) what plans he has, over what time scale and at what cost, to ensure that the option of imposing closed visits is available in all secure establishments; [37765]

(19) when he expects to make a statement on the implementation of the Learmont report; [35868]

(20) pursuant to his answer of 10 July, Official Report, column 170, what estimates have been received for the minimum security standards which are under consideration; if he will set out each of the phases of the programme to develop minimum security standards; and when the work to reach a decision on the appropriate minimum security standards will be complete. [37760]

Miss Widdecombe: Details of steps taken by the Prison Service to improve its performance are contained in the interim progress report on the "Review of Prison Service Security in England and Wales and the escape from Parkhurst Prison on Tuesday 3 January 1995—The Learmont Inquiry" given in a table, copies of which have been placed in the Library. The progress report excludes those recommendations identical or very similar to those of the Woodcock report which my right hon. and learned Friend accepted on 19 December 1994. The table gives details of the recommendations already implemented. Six reviews are still in progress in respect of recommendations: 1, 88, 97, 98, 101, 107. The remaining recommendations are still under consideration.

I shall report to the House on outstanding issues in due course.

The Prison Service has initiated a wide-ranging programme of action to build on the improvement in its performance in security, including measures taken in response to the recommendations of the Woodcock and Learmont reports.

The Prison Service has pressed ahead with upgrading the high security dispersal estate to standards recommended in the Woodcock report—a programme which Sir John Learmont included in his recommendations. In his review of Prison Service progress towards implementing the Woodcock report, Sir John Learmont reported in December 1995 that "in a period of less than a year, the Prison Service has made infinitely more headway in implementing the Woodcock recommendations than it seems reasonable to expect".

The Prison Service has achieved a sharp reduction in the number of escapes. Escapes in 1995–96 were 59 per cent. down on those in 1994–95 and 79 per cent. down compared to 1992–93.

The security manual has been redrafted emphasising the distinction between what is mandatory and what is discretionary.

The Prison Service has made excellent progress to ensure that security measures are consistently observed.

The Prison Service has strengthened independent security audit which it had in hand before the Whitemoor escape in recognition of the major contribution it has to make to improving security standards.

The Prison Service has pressed ahead with a number of organisational changes designed to ensure that operational management of prisons can be carried out more effectively.

In addition to those reviews still in progress and referred to above, the Prison Service has completed 10 reviews, the conclusions of which are under consideration.

Contracts

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish a list showing the number, nature and value of contracts awarded, by his Department to Coopers and Lybrand, KPMG, Price Waterhouse, Ernst and Young, Deloitte and Touche, Arthur Andersen, Grant Thonrton, BDO Stoy Hayward, Pannell Kerr Forster, and Robson Rhodes, and their subsidiaries and associates, during 1995 and 1996. [37325]

Mr. Howard: For the period specified, information on the number and nature of contracts let to each listed company and the total sum paid to each company by my Department is given in the table. Individual contract values are not given on the grounds of commercial confidentiality.

Dispersal Prisons

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many hours of enhanced training staff in each dispersal prison have undergone in each year since 1990; and how many hours are planned in the next four financial years; [37732]

(2) how many hours of training staff in each dispersal prison have undergone in each year since 1990; and how many hours are planned in the next four financial years. [37730]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from David Scott to Mr. George Howarth, dated 24 July 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Questions about the number of hours training undertaken by staff in dispersals.

Training figures for the years in question are not held centrally. I will write to you as soon as they are available.

Deportation

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many persons were recommended for deportation with no custodial sentence during (a) 1995 and (b) 1996 to the latest convenient date; and in how many such cases the courts directed release (i) subject to conditions and (ii) without conditions; [38081]

(2) how many decisions to make a deportation order, by nationality of the potential deportee, where there is a right of appeal as provided under (a) section 5 of the Immigration Act 1988 or (b) section 8(3) of the Asylum and Immigration Appeals Act 1993 have been made in each quarter since 1 July 1994; and on what basis these decisions have been made; [38059]

(3) how many people were received into (i) prison department establishments, (ii) immigration detention centres or (iii) police cells under Immigration Act powers during (a) 1995 and (b) 1996 to the latest convenient date; how many of these were (1) asylum seekers and (2) applying to remain on non-asylum grounds, by individual prison establishment or detention centre; what was the average daily population of persons so detained in each of those years; what was the average length of time spent in detention by persons so detained in each of those years; and if he will give a breakdown by nationality of persons so detained for each of those years; [38082]

(4) how many persons were detained under Immigration Act powers for a period of more than two months on completion of a custodial sentence during 1995 and 1996 to the latest convenient date. [38080]

Mr. Kirkhope: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) decisions to deport have been made, (b) deportation orders have been signed and (c) deportation orders have been enforced against (i) British overseas citizens and (ii) other British nationals who are not British citizens, in each year since 1994; to which countries it has been proposed to send these people; and how many such people whom decisions to deport were made left the country voluntarily. [38076]

Mr. Kirkhope: The information available is given in the table. Statistics are not available on the countries to which British nationals have been removed from the United Kingdom under the deportation process. The British nationals removed in 1994–96 were British dependent territories citizens or British nationals (overseas) from Hong Kong, except for one British dependent territories citizen from St. Helena in 1994 and 1 BDTC—territory not recorded—in 1995.

Drugs

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the number of (a) men and (b) women convicted by the courts of drug offences in England and Wales during 1995. [39225]

Mr. Maclean: Data for 1995 will not be available until the autumn. In 1994, there were 25,264 convictions in England and Wales for males and 2,532 for females, where the principal offence was for a drug offence.

Tobacco Smuggling

Mr. David Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many calls have been received relating to tobacco smuggling on the freephone crime stoppers number; and how many prosecutions have been effected as a result of that hotline. [38778]

Mr. Maclean: There were two calls received in 1993, 21 in 1994 and 26 in 1995. Up to 16 July this year, 48 calls have been received, Information on prosecutions is not available centrally.

Buckley Hall Prison

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 16 July, Official Report, column 446, about prisoners at Buckley Hall prison serving sentences for rape, murder, armed robbery, manslaughter and arson, which of the fires that have occurred at the prison since 14 December 1994 have been caused by prisoners with a sentence for arson. [39231]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from David Scott to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 24 July 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about fires that have occurred at Buckley Hall prison since 14 December 1994 and which may have been caused by prisoners with a sentence for arson.

There have been no fires at Buckley Hall which have been caused by any prisoner serving a sentence for arson.

Illegal Entrants

Mr. Henderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many of the (a) passengers in total and (b) persons treated as illegal entrants who were granted temporary admission or release in 1995 and 1996 to the latest convenient date subsequently absconded; how many of these were (1) asylum seekers and (2) applying for leave on some other basis; and how many (i) later reported voluntarily to the immigration authorities and (ii) were redetained. [38079]

Mr. Kirkhope: The available information relates to the numbers of person who absconded, either from detention or by failing to respond to the terms of temporary admission or release, and is given in the table. The other information requested is not available.

Absconders

Category of person	1995	1996 First quarter
Passengers[1]	2,049	605
Illegal entrants:
Asylum seekers	186	45
Others	101	18
Total	287	63

[1] A breakdown between asylum seekers and other passengers is not available.

Publicity

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the cost of staff employed full time or part time (i) to provide information and publicity and (ii) to work on the press and media in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1994–95 and (c) 1993–94. [39410]

Mr. Howard: The cost of staff employed full time or part time by my Department to provide (i) information and publicity; and (ii) press office services, all media, in each of the years listed was as follows:

(i) £558,238
(ii) £675,761

1994–95
(i) £511,307
(ii) £661,692

1993–94
(i) £524,251
(ii) £699,002

These figures include information and administrative staff. They do not include press and publicity staff employed by the prisons agency.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his Department's budget in 1996–97 for consultants to assist with information, publicity, press and media. [39348]

Mr. Howard: My Department's communication directorate budget for 1996–97 includes no provision for consultants to assist with information, publicity, press and media. The directorate buys the great majority of its production services from a range of suppliers, but does not use consultants. Communication directorate specialists from the Government information service provides Ministers and officials with advice with advice on all aspects of information, publicity and press and media.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff were employed full time or part time (a) to provide information and publicity and (b) on press and media in (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1994–95 and (iii) 1993–94. [39420]

Mr. Howard: Staff numbers employed by my Department, full time or part time, to provide (a) information and publicity and (b) press office services, all media, in each of the years listed were as follows:

(a) 19
(b) 23

1994–95
(a) 17
(b) 22

1993–94
(a) 18
(b) 24

These figures include information and administrative grades. They do not include staff employed by the prisons agency.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the cost budgeted for staff, employed full time or part time, to provide information and publicity in 1996–97. [39445]

Mr. Howard: The cost budgeted for staff employed full time or part time by my Department to provide information and publicity in 1996–97 is £1,303,340. The total includes press office staff, £717,340, and publicity and campaigns staff, £586,000. It covers information and administrative grades but does not include prisons agency staff.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many staff are assumed in his Department's budget, employed (i) full time and (ii) part time, (a) to work on the press and media and (b) to provide information and publicity in 1996–97. [39368]

Mr. Howard: My Department's communication directorate budget for 1996–97 provides for employment of 24 press office, all media, staff and 19 information and publicity staff. These figures include information and administrative grades. There are two part-time information staff and two part-time administrative staff. The total does not include prisons agency staff.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the cost, assumed in the budget, of people employed full time or part time to work on the press and the media in 1996–97. [39985]

Mr. Howard: I will write to the hon. Member.

Road Traffic Regulations

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to include the enforcement of road traffic regulations in the list of key policing objectives of 1996–97 and 1997–98. [38131]

Mr. Maclean: The key objectives for 1996–97 were announced on 15 December 1995. They do not include an objective on the enforcement of road traffic regulations. Consultation on the objectives for 1997–98 has not yet been completed.

Police Driver Training Scheme

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the requirements of the police driver training scheme. [38133]

Mr. Maclean: It is for individual chief constables to determine the extent to which their officers are trained to drive particular vehicles. The recommended criteria for police driver training are set out in the 1989 Association of Chief Officers of Police police driving report and the 1995 pursuits and pursuit training report.

Involuntary Manslaughter

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has to implement the recommendations contained in the Law Commission's report into involuntary manslaughter. [38130]

Mr. Maclean: The Law Commission's report on involuntary manslaughter raises some important but complex issues, which the Government are still considering.

Speed Cameras (Fines)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to reinvest the revenue raised from fines resulting from enforcement work carried out by speed cameras in traffic police enforcement. [38132]

Mr. Maclean: Fine income from the enforcement of speeding offences by cameras, like all fine income, goes to the consolidated fund at the Treasury. It is not the Government's general policy to earmark that income to a particular area of expenditure. We believe that the best way to decide among the competing claims on taxpayers' money is to consider each on its merits and set priorities among them.

Police Officers (Wales)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of police officers employed by each Welsh police authority in each year since 1979; and if he will make a statement. [39194]

Mr. Maclean: Information on police strength in individual force areas from 1979 to 1995 can be found in the appendix to the annual reports of Her Majesty's chief inspector of constabulary, copies of which are in the Library. Details of police strength for each Welsh force at 31 March are set out in the table:

Police force	Strength at 31 March 1996
Dyfed-Powys	991
Gwent	1,044
North Wales	1,328
South Wales	3,027

Mr. Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many new police officers each Welsh local police authority requested in the yearly settlement in each year since 1992; how many police officers they were awarded; and if he will make a statement. [39094]

Mr. Maclean: The information requested is given in the table:

	1992–93		1993–94		1994–95
Force	Numbers requested	Numbers granted	Numbers requested	Numbers[1] granted	Numbers requested	Numbers[1] granted

Gwent	10	1	37	Nil	65	Nil
North Wales	30	17	58	Nil	58	Nil
South Wales	44	Nil	44	Nil	61	Nil

[1] In view of the constraints on public expenditure, no increases in establishments were approved for any force in England and Wales in 1993–94 or 1994–95.

No applications were submitted for 1995–96. The centralised system of determining police numbers by setting an establishment of officers for each police force was abolished from 1 April 1995.

Crime Statistics (Wales)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the numbers of reported (a) violent crimes, (b) burglaries and (c) assaults in each Welsh police authority in (i) 1979, (ii) 1985, (iii) 1990, and at the latest available date; and if he will make a statement. [39095]

Parliamentary Questions (Meetings)

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions ministerial conference and meeting rooms in the parliamentary estate have been booked in his name, or that of other Ministers in his Department, for meetings with Conservative hon. Members immediately preceding questions to his Department in the current parliamentary Session. [39516]

Mr. Howard: None.

Departmental Vehicles (Traffic Violations)

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the number of traffic violations involving departmental vehicles, the nature of the violations, and the total amount of fines arising from those violations, in each year since 1986. [39313]

Mr. Howard: Figures for before February 1988 are not available, but the information requested since that date is as follows:

February 1988–July 1992
77 fixed penalty notices
7 excess charge notices
4 notice of intended prosecutions
1 overloading
Total fines £2,140

July 1992–July 1993

Drunk Driving

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many (a) prosecutions and *(b)*convictions there have been for drunk driving in each year since 1979. [39320]

Mr. Maclean: The available information, which relates to the number of prosecutions and convictions for the offence of "driving etc. after consuming alcohol or taking drugs", is contained in the table:

Prosecutions and convictions at all courts for the offence of driving etc. after consuming alcohol or taking drugs, England and Wales

Year	Number of prosecutions	Number of convictions

Opportunist Crimes (Traffic Lights)

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what advice his Department has issued to (i) police forces and (ii) the public on countering opportunist crimes at traffic lights. [39561]

Mr. Maclean: Advice on preventing this kind of crime is contained in a number of Home Office publications.

The Home Office crime prevention agency handbook, "Your Practical Guide to Crime Prevention", contains advice on personal safety, which includes advice on safety while driving, much of which is relevant to this kind of opportunistic crime. More specific guidance is also included in "Steer Clear of Car Crime", which the Home Office produced in 1995. Copies of these publications are distributed to forces in England and Wales, and are passed on through crime prevention officers to the general public.

As with all crime prevention advice produced by the Home Office, great care is taken to ensure that it is not fear inducing.

Advice on safety while driving is also included in the crime prevention manual produced by the Home Office crime prevention college. Crime prevention officers retain the manual on completion of their training.

Young Runaways

Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what assessment he has made of the Centrepoint-National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children report, "Nowhere to Hide: Giving Young Runaways a Voice", a copy of which has been sent to him; and what progress has been made since the inter-departmental and inter-agency meetings in 1992. [39650]

Mr. Maclean: We have not received a copy of the report but will be glad to look at it should a copy be sent to us.

The Home Office has funded the Police National Missing Persons Bureau, which was set up in 1994 as a national resource for information on vulnerable persons, including juveniles, who have been reported as missing for over 28 days, and those who have been missing for less than 28 days but whose disappearance gives ground for concern.

Metropolitan Police

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the progress of the civilianisation of posts within the Metropolitan police service. [39572]

Mr. Maclean: I understand from the Commissioner that, during the last 10 financial years, 2,592 non-operational police posts have been civilianised within the Metropolitan police.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will make a statement on the future role of the Metropolitan police service in undertaking the coroner's assistant duty; [39570]

(2) what estimate he has made of the annual (i) cost to the Metropolitan police service for undertaking the coroner's assistant role and (ii) the number of hours that the Metropolitan police spend on coroner's assistant duties. [39574]

Mr. Maclean: There are no plans for the Metropolitan police to withdraw from undertaking the coroner's assistant duty. A programme of civilianisation of the role of coroner's officer, releasing police officers for other operational duties, will be completed in September this year. I understand from the Commissioner that the annual cost of the coroner's assistant role is £1.6 million, representing 180,000 hours.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police vehicles were on operational duty with the Metropolitan police service in each of the last five years; and how many are currently on operational duty. [39571]

Mr. Maclean: The information in the table has been supplied by the Commissioner of Police of the Metroplitan. The figures exclude boats, trailers, instructional vehicles, industrial and agricultural equipment, air support units and other miscellaneous vehicles.

Year (as at 31 March)	Operational fleet
1992	4,028
1993	4,037
1994	3,948
1995	4,029
Current	4,289

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much was spent by the Metropolitan police in each of their divisions in the financial year 1995–96; how much is budgeted to be spent in each division in 1996–97; and how many full-time police officers are currently employed in each division. [39692]

Mr. Maclean: I will write to the hon. Member.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many recruits from training school are being taken on by police stations in the Metropolitan police service in the current year; and how many were in each of the last five years. [39573]

Mr. Maclean: The information has been obtained from the Metropolitan police Commissioner and is given in the table.

Calendar year	Number of recruits
1992	877
1993	1,358
1994	1,248
1995	1,012
1996 (to date)	442

Mr. Brian Parsons

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he estimates that solicitors acting for Mr. Brian Parsons will be granted full disclosure of material arising from recent investigations by the Devon and Cornwall police, in accordance with the Hickey ruling. [39608]

Mr. Kirkhope: Officials are arranging for the appropriate material to be disclosed to Mr. Parsons' solicitors within the terms of the divisional court judgment in ex-parte Hickey et al. We would expect to make this disclosure in the next fortnight.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on what date he indicated to the solicitor for Mr. Brian Parsons that the scenes of crime video relating to his case would be disclosed; and when he expects it will be disclosed. [39607]

Mr. Kirkhope: Disclosure of the scenes of crime video is entirely a matter for the Chief Constable of Devon and Cornwall police. I understand, however, that a copy is to be made available to Mr. Parsons' solicitor this week.

Fine Defaulters

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) of those fine defaulters who have received a custodial sentence in the last year for which figures are available, what is the average sentence (a) imposed and (b) served; [39703]

(2) what percentage of the average prison population in the last year for which figures are available has consisted of fine defaulters. [39701]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from David Scott to Mr. Walter Sweeney, dated 24 July 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Questions about fine defaulters.

I will write to you with a full reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Sweeney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to introduce community service orders and combination orders as alternatives to custody for fine defaulters. [39702]

Mr. Maclean: Together with the Lord Chancellor, my right hon. and learned Friend and I are reviewing the powers and procedures available to the courts to ensure that they can enforce payment of fines without restoring to imprisonment save in the most exceptional of circumstances. Alternative options for fine enforcement under consideration include the possibility of a community-based penalty instead of imprisonment for fine default.

Prisoners (Correspondence from Members)

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the policy of the Prison Service in respect of opening letters from hon. Members to serving prisoners. [39656]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from David Scott to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 24 July 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about Prison Service policy on the opening of letters to prisoners from honourable Members.

I will write to you with a full reply as soon as possible.

Prisoners (Taxis)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 10 July, Official Report, column 171, if he will list the (a) destinations and (b) cost of each prisoner and accompanying officers transported by taxi at Doncaster prison. [39805]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from David Scott to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 24 July 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about (a) destinations and (b) the cost of each prisoner and accompanying officers transported by taxi at Doncaster prison.

I will write to you with a full reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 11 July, Official Report, columns 269–70, if he will list the (a) destinations and (b) cost of each prisoner and accompanying officers transported by taxi at The Wolds prison. [39806]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from David Scott to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 24 July 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about the (a) destinations and (b) cost of each prisoner and accompanying officers transported by taxi at Wolds prison.

I will write to you with a full reply as soon as possible.

Liquor Licensing Legislation (Proposed Charges)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the organisations to which the document "Proposed Changes to the Liquor Licensing Legislation to Extend Permitted Hours on Friday and Saturday Nights", has been distributed; and if he will make a statement on the measures he has taken to consult the public on this issue. [39071]

Mr. Kirkhope: The organisations to which I sent the consultation paper were detailed in the reply I gave on 19 June to a question from the hon. Member for Dewsbury (Mrs. Taylor) at columns 466–67. I also sent copies to each hon. Member and issued a press release. Publication was widely reported in national and local newspapers and in the trade press. I have made it clear that I welcome comments from any individual or organisation.

Crimes (Firearms)

Mr. Straw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many (a) homicides, (b) attempted murder and other acts of endangering life, (c) other offences of violence against the person, (d) robberies, (e) burglaries, (f) offences of criminal damage and (g) other offences were recorded by the police in which firearms were reported to have been used in England and Wales in 1995; [39774]

(2) how many notifiable offences were recorded by the police in which firearms were reported to have been used in England and Wales in 1995. [39773]

Mr. Maclean: The latest available information on offences recorded by the police in which firearms were reported to have been used was published in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales 1994", Cm 3010, chapter 3 and table 3.1. A copy of this publication is in the Library. Figures for 1995 are not yet available.

Prison Farms

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prison farms have won prizes for their livestock at agricultural shows; and if he will list them. [39683]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from David Scott to Mr. Barry Field, dated 24 July 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General form the office, to reply to your recent Question about prison farms that have won prizes for their livestock at agricultural shows.

I will write to you with a full reply as soon as possible.

Animal Experiments

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will meet representatives of Naturewatch to discuss its proposal for a royal commission on animal experiments; and if he will make a statement. [39567]

Mr. Sackville: I have received a letter from Naturewatch requesting a meeting. I am replying that I can see no purpose in such a meeting and am not persuaded of the need for a royal commission.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will publish a list of the organisations in Birmingham which his Department has licensed to carry out experiments using animals. [39783]

Mr. Sackville: Section 24 of the Animals (Scientific Procedures) Act 1986 prohibits the publication of such information.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many visits (i) he and (ii) his Ministers made to (a) the Newbury constituency and (b) other constituencies in the last 12 months. [39875]

Mr. Howard: The information requested could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Convicted Prisoners (Earnings)

Mr. Nicholls: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will assess the advantages of allowing convicted prisoners to build up a reserve of income earned while in prison which can be paid to them on release; and if he will make a statement. [39881]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Patrick Nicholls, dated 24 July 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Question about an assessment of the advantages of allowing convicted prisoners to build up a reserve of income which can be paid to them on release.

I will write to you as soon as possible with a full reply.

Asylum Seekers

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many people who had applied for asylum were detained in Birmingham prison during May and June; and what were the nationalities of those detained; [39980]

(2) how many people who had applied for asylum were deported from Birmingham prison during May and June; and what were the nationalities of those deported; [40003]

(3) how many people were detained in Birmingham prison, under Immigration Act powers, in May and June; and what were the nationalities of those detained; [40000]

(4) how many of those people detained in Birmingham prison under Immigration Act powers were deported during May and June; and what were the nationalities of those deported; [40001]

(5) how many people were deported under Immigration Act powers from the United Kingdom for April, May and June; and what were the nationalities of those deported; [40004]

(6) how many people (a) applied and (b) were granted asylum in January, February, March and April; and if he will indicate the nationalities of those granted asylum; [40035]

(7) how many people were deported under Immigration Act powers from Winson Green prison in 1995; [40037]

(8) how many women were detained in prison, under Immigration Act powers, in January, February, March, April, May and June; and what were the nationalities of those detained. [40038]

Mr. Kirkhope: I will write to the hon. Member.

Prisoners (Gender Dysphoria)

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many people imprisoned for longer than two years are receiving treatment for gender dysphoria; [40024]

(2) how many people diagnosed as suffering from gender dysphoria have been imprisoned in each of the last five years. [40025]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Dr. Lynne Jones, dated 24 July 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Questions about prisoners who are diagnosed as suffering form gender diaspora.

I will write to you as soon as possible with a full reply.

Special Constabulary

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if the report of the working group on the special constabulary has been completed; when it will be available; and if he will make a statement. [40083]

Mr. Maclean: The working group has completed its work and I hope to make an announcement about the Government response to the working group's recommendations shortly. A copy of the report will be placed in the Library as soon as it is available.

Hypnotism Act 1952

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when the review of the Hypnotism Act 1952 will be completed; and if revised guidance will be issued. [40084]

Mr. Kirkhope: Consultation with interested parties has now been completed. Guidance to local authorities incorporating revised model conditions to be applied to stage hypnotism performances, will be issued at the beginning of August. A copy will be placed in the Library.

Horseracing Betting Levy

Mr. Gale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he proposes to publish the report on the impact of the national lottery on the horserace betting levy. [40085]

Mr. Kirkhope: An assessment of the impact of the national lottery on the horserace betting levy has been published today. This fulfils an undertaking made during the passage of the National Lottery etc. Bill.

The paper has been prepared by the economics unit of the Home Office. It examines trends in off-course betting expenditure, on which the levy closely depends. The main conclusions are as follows: off-course betting expenditure during 1995 was 6 per cent. lower in real terms than in 1994; a statistical analysis of trends in off-course betting expenditure suggests that it might have been expected to rise by about 5 per cent. in real terms during this period; the study indicates that the national lottery has reduced spending on off-course betting although other special factors, such as the fixture list, may also be involved; and some uncertainty remains about the importance of other special factors and estimates of the size of the national lottery's effect remain imprecise.

Closed Circuit Television

Sir Graham Bright: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 20 June, Official Report, columns 141–42, about funding for closed circuit television, (1) how many cameras it is estimated this funding will lead to; [40097]

(2) how much money has been allocated so far to schemes to install closed circuit television. [40098]

Mr. Maclean: I will write to my hon. Friend.

Correspondence

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will reply to the letter from Ken Peace of the United Reformed Church Tees district council about immigration matters dated 16 May. [39027]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 23 July 1996]: A reply was sent to Mr. Peace on 22 July.

Departmental Legal Costs

Mr. Alan Williams: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 17 July, Official Report, column 550, which sections in his Department made the payments for external legal costs in the cases in which his Departments has been judged to have acted unlawfully; which section or office holder is responsible for ensuring that these external costs are not excessive and how this is achieved; where the records are kept of each case in the last five years in which his Department's actions have been judged to be unlawful; if the personal injury claims arose from the unlawful action; what was the method of recording the total external legal costs of each of these actions; and if Ministers are informed of costs (a) as cases progress and (b) at the end of a case. [38887]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 22 July 1996]: My previous reply of 17 July, Official Report, column 550, explained that my Department does not keep central records of all the legal cases against it over the past 200 years. In the circumstances it is impossible to provide the details requested without incurring disproportionate costs.

Prisons (Purposeful Activity)

Mr. George Howarth: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list (i) the latest available figures, (ii) the figures for 1992, (iii) those for 1988 and (iv) those for 1987 for the average amount of time prisoners spend in purposeful activity in each category C prison. [38748]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 22 July 1996]: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Richard Tilt to Mr. George Howarth, dated 24 July 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me to reply to your recent Question about the average amount of time prisoners spend in purposeful activity in each category C prison.

The most recent information is given in the attached table.

The figures for 1987, 1988 and 1992 are currently unavailable. I will write to you when they become available.

Small Businesses

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the impact of (a) his policies and (b) the work of his Department in helping small businesses in the past 12 months as against the previous 12 months; and if he will publish the performance indicators by which his Department monitors the impact and the statistical results of such monitoring. [39149]

Mr. Howard: The Government recognise the crucial role played by small firms in the United Kingdom economy and aim to help them by providing sound economic conditions—keeping inflation and interest rates low; reducing legislative, administrative and taxation burdens; and, where appropriate, provide direct assistance in the form of specialist advice and support and easing access to finance.

Over the past year, my Department has shown its continued commitment to helping small businesses by taking further forward its wide-ranging programme of deregulation. Measures which have come into effect in this period include: the Licensing (Sunday Hours) Act 1995, which abolished the compulsory Sunday afternoon break for on-licensed premises and registered clubs and, subject to the restrictions on shop opening hours in the Sunday Trading Act 1994, permits off-licensees to sell alcohol from 10 am until 10.30 pm on Sundays; an order to relax certain controls on greyhound racing; an order introducing provisional special hours certificates for licensed premises and reinstating the hour lost to nightclubs at the start of summer time; an order to repeal the "long pull" offence of serving over-measures of alcohol; and an order to amend the law on gaming machines and betting office facilities to provide for, among other things, £10 all cash amusement-with-prizes machines and more jackpot machines in permitted premises.

In addition, draft deregulation orders have been laid which will allow 16 and 17-year-olds on approved training schemes to work in the bars of licensed premises and extend betting office licences and bookmakers' permits to three years.

In May we announced the Government's decisions on the fire safety scrutiny and issued a consultation document containing draft regulations to implement the outstanding fire safety aspects of the European Community framework and workplace directives. The aims of our work on fire safety have been to maintain necessary fire standards and to meet our EC obligations in a way which minimises burdens on business.

Many of the deregulatory measures which were given effect this year by the Home Office were started in the previous 12 months; the achievements of that period were given in my reply of 19 July 1995 to my hon. Friend.

Since the beginning of the deregulation programme, 13 of the 38 Home Office regulations which impact on business have so far been repealed or amended.

Further candidates for deregulation are under active consideration.

Small businesses also continue to benefit from Home Office action on crime prevention. Our programme of introducing closed circuit television across the country is progressing well. On 21 June, I announced the results of the second CCTV challenge competition: 259 winning bidders are sharing the prize fund of over £17 million, in amounts ranging from £3,000 to £250,000. On the same day, I announced a further challenge competition, with £15 million available, for 1997–98. Many small businesses have benefited from reductions in crime following the introduction of CCTV cameras in their areas. Crime prevention guides for small retailers have been widely distributed to all business link shops and a large number of retail organisations.

The Home Office and its agencies have signed the CBI's prompt payment code outlining good practice in handling payments. We are committed to improving our performance, and particularly recognise the impact of late payment on small suppliers. We have recently appointed a small business adviser and issued a new guidance booklet for suppliers which contains information on prompt payment, including a direct contact point for late payment complaints. It also includes information on business links and opportunities for small firms.

Criminal Injuries Compensation

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 25 June, Official Report, column 67, how many interim awards have been made in each of the last three years to applicants by the Criminal Injuries Compensation Board; and how long each applicant had been waiting when they received their interim awards. [39016]

Mr. Maclean: The board advises me that 6,492 interim awards were made in 1993–94, 4,885 in 1994–95 and 6,391 in 1995–96, the latter being a provisional figure.

Interim awards are made in appropriate cases either at the instigation of the board, or on the applicant's request which may be received some time after the original application. Data on the period which had elapsed from the original application to an interim payment in each case are not readily available, but the board's records indicate that in the above cases the shortest period was five months and the longest 26 months.

Landmark Education

Mr. Michael: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many employees of (a) the Prison Service and (b) his Department have been sent on courses run by Landmark Education; and if he will list the numbers in each grade in each case; [37998]

(2) what is the cost to public funds of sending employees of the Prison Service on courses run by Landmark Education to date; and what cost is projected for 1996–97 and 1997–98; [37999]

(3) what inquiries have been made as to the links between Landmark Education and Erhard Seminar Training in the United States. [38000]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 23 July 1996]: The information requested is not readily available from individual Prison Service establishments and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. There is no record of any member of Home Office staff outside Prison Service establishments attending any course run by Landmark Education over the past three years. No inquiries have been made about this organisation.

Departmental Contracts

Mr. Michael: To ask the secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the (a) contracts entered into with and (b) funds provided to (i) the Forum, (ii) the Breakthrough Foundation and (iii) Youth at Risk by (1) the Prison Service and (2) his Department; and what representations have been made by (i), (ii) and (iii) to (1) and (2). [38001]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 23 July 1996]: The Home Office and its agencies have not had any contracts with, nor provided funds to, the Forum, the Breakthrough Foundation or Youth at Risk. In an organisation as large and diverse as the Home Office it is not possible to record every single approach by such organisations, but we are aware that the Prison Service has sent a representative to a Youth at Risk presentation and information from both Forum and Youth at Risk has been received by it in the form of mail-shots.

Statistical Forms

Mr. Steen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the statistical forms issued to businesses by his Department indicating the number of each sent out. [38679]

Mr. Howard [holding answer 23 July 1996]: My Department does not issue any forms to businesses on a regular basis although ad hoc surveys of businesses are carried out from time to time. The last one to be carried out involving the issue of questionnaires was carried out on a voluntary basis in 1994. Some 850 questionnaires were issued to inform policy on the extent and circumstances of heavy goods vehicle theft.

Fire Safety Cover

Mr. Skinner: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will meet the Fire Brigades Union, hon. Members and other interested parties to discuss the problems of fire safety cover. [38942]

Mr. Sackville [holding answer 23 July 1996]: My right hon. and learned Friend would like to consider this request, but the hon. Member has not been specific enough about which hon. Members and the subject matter to be discussed or whether it is a general request or concerns a particular fire authority. However, on the position in respect of the hon. Member's own fire authority my right hon. and noble Friend wrote to the hon. Member on 19 July.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Farm Woodland Premium Scheme

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what changes are proposed to the farm woodland premium scheme. [40043]

Mr. Baldry: The farm woodland premium scheme has been the subject of evaluations and a policy review. The Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales and the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food have today laid before the House a report setting out the changes proposed; subject to approval by Parliament and the European Commission, most changes will take effect from next April. A consultation document will be issued shortly.

Beef Farmers

Mr. Patrick Thompson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how he proposes to allocate the 34 mecu of aid for United Kingdom beef farmers agreed by the Agriculture Council at its meeting on 24 to 26 June; and if he will make a statement. [40045]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Agriculture Ministers have agreed to distribute this money to beef producers in respect of the number of adult clean cattle marketed in the period 20 March to 30 June for slaughter for human consumption. We plan to issue forms to producers in the week beginning 5 August and begin payments in late September. Payments will be at a flat rate per animal, to be set once the number of valid claims has been determined. Firm evidence that the animals concerned were on their holding before 20 March and were marketed for slaughter no later than 30 June will be required. In addition to the £29 million—34 mecu—available to farmers under this one-off measure, supplementary payments worth up to £81 million will be made to farmers who received suckler cow and beef special premium for the 1995 scheme years. I welcome the further assistance that will thus be given to hard-pressed beef producers.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the state veterinary service's surveillance of the handling of specified offals in April, May and June; and if he will make a statement. [40079]

Mrs. Browning: The controls on specified bovine material, previously termed specified bovine offals, are central to the protection of public health from any risk from BSE. Full compliance with them is of paramount importance in combating the disease. They require the removal of all those tissues known potentially to harbour BSE infectivity from all cattle at slaughter.

The state veterinary service carries out regular unannounced visits to all plants handling SBMs to monitor their compliance with the controls. Results of its surveillance visits in April, May and June are as follows:

	April 1996			May 1996			June 1996
	Number of visits	Number of unsatisfactory visits	Percentage unsatisfactory	Number of visits	Number of unsatisfactory visits	Percentage unsatisfactory	Number of visits	Number of unsatisfactory visits	Percentage unsatisfactory
Slaughterhouses	281	4	1.4	313	0	0	268	2	0.7
Hunt kennels and knackeries	265	9	3.4	248	13	5.2	213	4	1.9
Rendering plants[1]	13	0	0	10	0	0	11	1	9.1
Incinerators[1]	27	1	3.7	32	1	3.1	24	4	16.7

[1] Rendering plants and incinerators have to be specifically approved to handle SBOs; only a small number of such plants are so approved.

These results demonstrate an overall continuing trend of improvement in the handling of SBMs since the intensive surveillance programme began in September 1995.

It is disappointing that deficiencies continue to be found in small numbers of premises, and pressure is being maintained to improve the situation. However, the majority of the failings in SBM handling found were relatively mild, for example, problems with staining or with record keeping, which would not present a direct risk to public or animal health. There have been no instances of the most serious failing, of leaving spinal cord attached to carcases, since March 1996.

The Meat Hygiene Service is responsible for enforcing the SBM controls in slaughterhouses in Great Britain. The agency has developed detailed new protocols for the application of SBM controls. It has also established arrangements for specific refresher training on SBM controls for all inspection staff, and introduced a programme of SBM audit to ensure that SBM controls are being fully complied with and properly enforced. This is in addition to the surveillance visits carried out by the SVS. To implement the enhanced supervision of SBM, over 300 meat inspection staff have been recruited by the MHS. This intense effort by the MHS to perfect the application of the existing SBM controls is reflected in these SVS surveillance results.

Slaughterhouses face prosecution for significant breaches of the SBM controls, when sufficient evidence is available. At present, two plants have been successfully prosecuted and several more are under investigation with a view to prosecution.

The SVS will continue regular unannounced visits to all plants handling SBMs. The MHS will continue to enforce rules most vigorously, and press for prosecutions where there is sufficient evidence to support a case.

In future information on this subject will be available in the BSE enforcement bulletin which is to be published at the end of each month. Copies of the bulletin will be placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his Department's estimate of the number of cattle with pre-clinical symptoms of BSE that have been slaughtered and entered the food chain. [32172]

Mrs. Browning: For the purpose of these calculations we have assumed that the risk of exposure of cattle to contaminated feed has not reduced beyond the level experienced in 1990. This is because the number of cases in cattle born in later years is still too small to make more accurate calculations. On the basis of recent modelling studies over 600,000 infected cattle which had not developed clinical symptoms may have been slaughtered for human consumption. The vast majority of these animals would have been born in 1988. It is precisely because we recognised that some pre-clinical cases would enter the human food chain that the SBO, now SBM, controls were introduced in 1989.

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the European Commission was notified of Her Majesty's Government's decision to designate the thymus and intestine of calves under six months old as specified bovine offal; and what form that notification took. [35749]

Mrs. Browning: The amendment to the Bovine Offal (Prohibition) Regulations, which extended the specified bovine offal ban to include thymus and intestines from calves under six months of age, was notified to the Commission on 26 July 1994. The notification was made under the emergency provisions of EC directive 83/189, as amended, laying down a procedure for the provision of information in the field of technical standards and regulations.

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action was taken to inform (a) other EU member states and (b) the European Commission of the United Kingdom's decisions and regulations put in place relating to bovine spongiform encephalopathy, with particular reference to public and animal health during (a) 1994, and (b) 1995. [35748]

Mrs. Browning: All Great Britain legislation relating to BSE which was put in place during 1994 and 1995 was notified to the Commission in accordance with EC directive 83/189, as amended, laying down a procedure for the provision of information in the field of technical standards and regulations.

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the highest numbers of BSE cases at an individual farm in Lancashire and North Yorkshire since the epidemic began; and what percentage this represents of the cattle on the farm over that period. [37391]

Mrs. Browning: As at 18 July the highest number of cases on an individual farm, excluding dealers, is 44 for Lancashire and 93 for North Yorkshire. All the 44 cases were homebred; of the 93 cases, only 11 were homebred. Since the epidemic began, this represents 15.7 per cent. of the herd on the Lancashire farm and 22.1 per cent. of the herd on the North Yorkshire farm.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what guidelines his Department has produced governing the method of removal of the brains of cattle to prevent the spread of BSE into the human food chain; on what date these guidelines were published; what was the interval between publication and the inclusion of brain material as banned specified offal; and if he will make a statement. [37427]

Mrs. Browning: On 13 November 1989 the Bovine Offal Prohibition Regulations came into force which banned the brain and certain other offals for human consumption. Guidance was issued to local authorities on 14 June 1990 which advised MAFF considered that bovine head meat must be recovered from the intact skull before the brain was removed. The Agricultural Select Committee considered the issue of head splitting further and recommended that the harvesting of head meat before the removal of brain should be set down in legislation. The Bovine Offal (Prohibition) (Amendment) Regulations 1992 came into force on 12 March 1992 which prohibited the removal of the brain from the head of a bovine animal in a head boning plant except in an area which was free at all times from food intended for human consumption.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list each occasion in the last two months in which his Department has consulted farmers directly about policy development concerning BSE and the beef crisis; and if he will make a statement. [37365]

Mrs. Browning: During May and June 1996 farming organisations were consulted on the following issues:

	Issues
3 May 1996	Proposal for a mature beef assurance scheme
6 June 1996	Proposal for introduction of cattle passports
7 June 1996	Specified bovine materials (SBM) controls in abattoirs
10 June 1996	Feed recall scheme
12 June 1996	The Fresh Meat (Beef Controls) Regulations 1996
26 June 1996	SBM Controls—treatment of particulate matter derived from SBM

In addition, the Government have written to farmers on a number of occasions to update them on current measures and the Government/industry working group on animal traceability has met regularly during May and June.

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his estimate of the number of cattle that contracted BSE as a result of the failure of renderers to comply in the production, distribution and supply of rendered material with BSE-related control regulations since 1989. [31252]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 4 June 1996]: No such estimates are available. However, up to 1 July 1996 there have been 27,963 confirmed cases of BSE in animals born after the ruminant protein feed ban, which was introduced in July 1988.

Epidemiological investigations carried out following the occurrence of BSE in animals born after the feed ban suggested that exposure was likely to be from a feed-borne source due to cross-contamination of feeding stuffs containing meat and bone meal at the feed mill, in transit or on farm.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what procedures have been introduced to destroy bovine spongiform encephalopathy infectivity during gelatine purification, what are the arrangements for ensuring these are implemented; and if he will make a statement. [33893]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 25 June 1996]: No new procedures have been introduced in the gelatine manufacturing process as the specified bovine materials controls in abattoirs ensure that none of the raw material from which gelatine is produced contains tissues with detectable levels of BSE infectivity. Beyond this it is known that the standard manufacturing methods of gelatine will reduce the infectivity of artificially spiked samples which have BSE material added to them in experiments.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when and in what document, notification was given to (a) the European Commission and (b) standards institutions as listed in list 2 of EU directive 83/1895, EEC, following the United Kingdom Government's decision of 2 November 1994 to prohibit the consumption of the thymus and intestines of calves under six months old. [35470]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 4 July 1996]: The European Commission was notified on 26 July 1994. The notification was made under the emergency provisions of EC directive 83/189, as amended, laying down a procedure for the provision of information in the field of technical standards and regulations. There was no requirement to send details of this notification to the standards institutions because it was not a standardisation measure.

Mr. Ron Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 11 July Official Report, column 307, how many prosecutions or formal warnings have been issued to persons other than farmers in respect of breaches of specified bovine offal or animal feed regulations. [38197]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 19 July 1996]: Since 1 April 1995 when the national Meat Hygiene Service took over responsibility for enforcement of controls on specified bovine materials—SBM—in slaughterhouses, we are aware of two successful prosecutions for breaches of these rules. A number of further cases are being investigated with a view to prosecution if sufficient evidence is available. In addition, slaughterhouse operators are informed of any minor breaches of the SBM regulations by MHS officials or state veterinary service officials on an informal and on-going basis to allow them to review and improve their practice. No information on prosecutions for breaches of the specified bovine offal controls prior to 1 April 1995 are available centrally as the enforcement of these regulations then fell to local authorities.

Several instances where mammalian protein has been detected in ruminant feed in feed mills are under investigation with a view to prosecution if sufficient evidence is available.

Intervention Board

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to publish the annual report and accounts 1995–96 for the Intervention Board executive agency. [40075]

Mr. Baldry: I am pleased to advise that the annual report and accounts 1995–96 has been published and copies have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Biotechnology Conference

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will place in the Library copies of (a) the United Kingdom submissions to and (b) the final declarations of the international conference on biotechnology safety, held in Denmark from 22 July. [39736]

Mr. Clappison: I have been asked to reply.

I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Beef (Cold Storage)

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his assessment of the amount of beef which is currently being kept in cold storage. [24943]

Mr. Baldry: Our estimate of the amount of raw beef in cold storage on 17 July in the United Kingdom is as follows:

	Tonnes
In interventions stores	22,000
In Beef Stocks Transfer Scheme	[1]30,000
From over 30 Month Cattle Scheme	3,800
Private unsaleable stock	[2]500
Total	56,300

[1] Based on quantity claimed for and therefore includes stocks which may on investigation be ineligible and beef destroyed overseas or not yet returned to the UK.
[2] Based on expressions of interest in Intervention Board for Agricultural Produce Disposal Scheme.

In addition, we estimate that about 65,000 tonnes of beef will be produced this month for UK consumption.

Beef Exports

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the countries that have banned imports of British beef in each year since 1980. [32190]

Mrs. Browning: Commission decision 96/239/EEC of 27 March 1996 provided that the UK shall not export from its territory, meat and meat products obtained from bovine animals in the UK. The list of countries given shows those with a ban on the import of British beef on the day before the introduction of the Commission decision. The month and year when the bans commenced are shown where available.

Importing country	Date of ban
Algeria	June 1990
Argentina	August 1991

The following countries have also introduced, but subsequently lifted, a ban during the period in question:

Chile
Cyprus
Egypt
Kuwait
Lebanon
State of Sarawak (Malaysia)
Mauritius
Morocco
Oman
Poland
Qatar
Trinidad and Tobago
Tunisia
Turkey

Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those countries currently exercising a ban on the importation of British beef. [28288]

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list all those countries which currently have in place restrictions on the import of beef meat or other beef products from the United Kingdom. [29619]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 9 and 16 May 1996]: I very much regret that the hon. Members have had to wait so long for a reply.

Commission decision 96/239/EC of 27 March 1996 provided that the UK shall not export to any country from its territory meat and meat products obtained from bovine animals slaughtered in the UK. The list of countries records those which placed a ban on imports of British beef before that date.

In addition, Hong Kong introduced a ban on 28 March 1996.

Forestry Commission Land (Dorset)

Mrs. Maddock: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will list the plots of Forestry Commission land in Dorset which are (a) currently for sale and (b) being considered for sale; and in each case (i) what is the size of the plot, (ii) what consultation will be made in advance of the sale and (iii) how many representations he has received to date for and against the proposed sale; [38169]

(2) if he will list the plots of land which have been sold by the Forestry Commission in Dorset in each of the last five years; and in each case (a) what was the size of the plot, (b) what consultation was made in advance of the sale and (c) how many representations he received for and against the sale. [38168]

Mr. Boswell: The subjects of the questions relate to matters undertaken by Forest Enterprise. I have asked its chief executive, Mr. Gordon Cowie, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Gordon M. Cowie to Mrs. Diana Maddock, dated 24 July 1996:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply to your Questions about the plots of Forestry Commission land, in Dorset, that are being considered for sale, as well as those that have been sold in the last five years. [38168 & 38169]

There are no plots of Forestry Commission land on the market for sale in Dorset at present. However there are four cases which are being considered for sale and the details are as follows:

Name of property	Area (ha)
Alders Coppice	7.0
Black Dog Plantation	3.0
Heathy Field Coppice	4.7
Bryanston Estate	9.5
which consists of the following group:
Folly Clump	1.5
Four Acre Coppice	2.5
Lower and Higher Prensham	3.0
Beechy Clump	2.5

There have only been two sales completed within the last five years, and their details are as follows:

Year sold	Name of property	Area (ha)
1992	Blackwater Copse	13.0
1996	Stapehill Wood	3.0

All properties, prior to sale, are notified in the Estates Gazette. The proposed sales of Alders coppice and Black Dog plantation were also notified to the local authority under the continued public access arrangements so that they could consider whether they wished to enter into an agreement for a continued public access after sale. In both cases, the local authorities declined the offers to enter into agreements.

There have been no representations on any of the above cases.

Small Businesses

Mr. David Shaw: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the impact of (a) his policies and (b) the work of his Department in helping small businesses in the last 12 months as against the previous 12 months; and if he will publish the performance indicators by which his Department monitors the impact and the statistical results of such monitoring. [39138]

Mr. Boswell: The Government recognise the crucial role played by small firms in the UK economy and aims to help them by providing sound economic conditions, keeping inflation and interest rates low; reducing legislative administrative and taxation burdens; and where appropriate provide direct assistance in the form of specialist advice and support and easing access to finance.

MAFF plays an active part in this process. We have appointed a small business Minister who regularly meets small business Ministers from other Departments. This helps to ensure that departmental policies take full account of the needs of small businesses. The rural White Paper published in October 1995 incorporated a number of proposals that will be of interest to small businesses. A progress report, which will be published in the autumn, is currently being prepared. Details of MAFF policy aims and objectives, many of which will be relevant to small businesses interests, are published in the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Intervention Board departmental report. A copy of the most recent version, which covers 1995, is available in the Library of the House.

Food Safety

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for what reasons the proprietor of a food business was given the right to require the officer of an enforcement authority who is minded to serve an improvement notice under section 10 of the Food Safety Act 1990 to furnish a written notice beforehand giving reasons. [38319]

Mrs. Browning: This is in line with the Government's policy to apply the enforcement procedures contained in section 5 of the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994 in all areas of regulatory activity where this is practicable.

These procedures provide for problems to be ironed out a the earliest stage by giving the right to be warned before enforcement action is taken and a chance to make representations to challenge proposed enforcement action. They also require enforcers to give reasons for taking action and to explain how an appeal can be made.

Enforcement officers may still take immediate action where they consider this to be necessary.

Mr. Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many improvement notices have been served under section 10 of the Food Safety Act 1990 in each year since that date. [38318]

Mrs. Browning: Under section 41 of the Food Safety Act 1990, local authorities, which are responsible for the enforcement of food safety law in the UK, are required to submit statistics to central Government detailing the work, including the number of improvement notices issued, which has been carried out. Data for those years for which complete data are available are as follows.

Year	Number of improvement notices issued in the UK
1992	41,641
1993	26,338

Year	Number of improvement notices issued in the UK
1994	9,307

Scrapie

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent representations he has received requesting assistance from the armed forces to hill farmers in (a) culling and (b) rounding up flocks of sheep infected with scrapie; and if he will make a statement. [32754]

Mrs. Browning: I have received no such requests in respect of scrapie.

Sheep and Goats Order

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on what date his Department ensured that his veterinary officials were instructed to take account of the Sheep and Goats (Records, Identification and Movement) Order 1996. [39197]

Mrs. Browning: All state veterinary service staff and technical staff were informed of the forthcoming Sheep and Goats (Records, Identification and Movement) Order 1996 in early September 1995. At that time they were issued with draft guidance notes and instructions to provide copies of the final version, when available, in response to requests for information about the new order. Copies of the order and the final version of the guidance notes were issued to them in February 1996.

Sheep

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for what reason his Department's officials at Dover prevented consignments of sheep from being loaded on to the MV Cap Afrique on 3 July. [39196]

Mrs. Browning: The proposed sailing of the Cap Afrique on 3 July was postponed by the operator when he established that not all sheep in booked consignments were identified in the manner required by the Sheep and Goats (Records, Identification and Movement) Order 1996.

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about transmissible spongiform encephalopathies in sheep. [40046]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I refer to the statement I made to the House this afternoon.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food in which EU-approved abattoirs sheep exported to Spain for further fattening will be slaughtered; and if his Department is informed in advance of which EU-approved future consignments of sheep exported for further fattening are destined. [38410]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 22 July 1996]: There are no routine mechanisms in place for establishing or notifying in which abattoirs sheep may be slaughtered after they have been transported to Spain for further fattening.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if ovines destined for further fattening unloaded from separate vehicles at Dover Port and re-loaded on to the MV Caroline, on 8 July all originated from the same holding and are being sent to the same consignee. [38415]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 22 July 1996]: Four consignments of sheep for further fattening were loaded on to the MV Caroline on 8 July, originating from three holdings and consigned to three different destinations. The sheep were grouped according to their final destinations.

Agriculture Council

Sir Sydney Chapman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the outcome of the Agriculture Council held in Brussels on 22 to 23 July; and if he will make a statement. [40044]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: I represented the United Kingdom at this Council. Unanimous agreement was reached on measures to reform the EU fruit and vegetable regime, and on agricultural prices and related measures for 1996–97. The Council also discussed recent developments on BSE.

Agreement on the reform of the fruit and vegetable regime after 18 months of negotiation represented a significant further step in the reform of the EU common agricultural policy. The outcome is consistent with the objectives of the United Kingdom in as much as the reformed regime will reduce significantly the role of withdrawal and destruction of produce as instruments of market support. United Kingdom fruit and vegetable producers will stand to benefit from the reform measures in so far as they provide funds to promote the better marketing and processing of horticultural produce, and protect the future of specialised producer groups which are characteristic of the United Kingdom market.

The 1996–97 agricultural price proposals were also agreed on a basis satisfactory to the United Kingdom. In the arable sector, the Council agreed to fix the 1997–98 rate of set-aside at 5 per cent., and to lift the possibility of penalty set-aside during that year. Set-aside arrangements are to be simplified through a merger of rotational and non-rotational set-aside at a uniform rate of 17.5 per cent. Separately, I obtained assurances from the Agriculture Commissioner that steps will be taken to permit the non-lucrative use of set-aside land by non-profit-making organisations such as charities. I welcome this as a sensible rationalisation of the set-aside rules which responds to public concerns.

The Council also agreed that monthly increments for cereals going into intervention should be cut, as well as sugar storage refunds. Aid rates in the flax sector are to be cut by 7.5 per cent. for 1996–97 and a detailed examination carried out of future support arrangements for this sector on a non-discriminatory basis. An extension of the deadline for carryover of C sugar was agreed for the United Kingdom, a change which had been actively sought by the British sugar industry in order to reflect the longer processing campaign in the UK.

In the livestock sector, the Council placed particular emphasis on the need for urgent measures to help support the EU beef market this autumn because of continued difficulties in the wake of the BSE crisis; there will also be wider-ranging measures later in the year to reduce excess beef production and help producers adapt to changed market circumstances. The Council also committed itself to a reform of the milk regime with a review of the full range of options taking place in 1997. Mindful of the particular problems facing United Kingdom diary producers faced with the accelerated cattle slaughter scheme as part of the BSE eradication programme, the Commission gave welcome assurances on the flexible operation of milk quota leasing up to the end of the milk quota year at 31 March 1997.

The Agriculture Commissioner confirmed that the costs of the prices package could be met within the agricultural guideline for 1996–97.

Linked to the agreement on prices, the Council agreed upon revised income aid rates for hops, a limited extension of transport subsidies for Greece, and an increase in Portugal's sugar quota. The Council also adopted by qualified majority—Spain abstaining—arrangements for implementing agreements under GATT article XXIII and XXIV.6 in the rice sector. I was able to support these proposals. In addition, I obtained assurances from the Commission that early proposals would be made in respect of charges for pesticide evaluation and of uniform principles for authorising plant protection products.

The Council also discussed the latest information regarding BSE. I have reported separately to the House on measures which I am taking in relation to sheep in the light of advice received from the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee. I reported my intention in this regard to the Agriculture Council. The French Minister similarly informed the Council of certain health protection measures taken in France as a result of advice received from their equivalent scientific committee. The Council unanimously endorsed the Commission's view that the right way forward was to put all available scientific information before the appropriate specialist committee with a view to establishing common EU rules for the removal of certain tissues of ruminant animals from the human and animal food chain. I welcomed this approach.

Spongiform Encephalopathies

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list for each publicly supported committee, sub-committee or other body whose responsibilities include spongiform encephalopathies (i) the remit, (ii) the members, with details of their expertise and the date of their appointment and (iii) for each body each research project that has been recommended by such a body for Government funding, together with the amount of money allocated. [20889]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 18 March 1996]: There are a number of publicly supported committees on spongiform encephalopathies. I am placing in the Library of the House details of the committees which are listed by the organisation or Department responsible.

Beef Consumption

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the level of beef consumption in (a) the United Kingdom, (b) France, (c) Germany, (d) Italy, (e) Belgium and (f) Holland in each of the last six weeks. [25921]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 22 April 1996]: According to a consumer survey conducted on behalf of the Meat and Livestock Commission, overall beef consumption in the UK in the four weeks to 7 April was down 20 per cent. on the same period last year; down 26 per cent. in the four weeks to 5 May; down 27 per cent. in the four weeks to 2 June; and down 24 per cent. in the four weeks to 30 June, the latest available figure.

For other member states, precise information on beef consumption is not held centrally and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, anecdotal evidence suggests that beef consumption in France, Germany, Italy, Belgium and Holland, and across the EU, is well below normal levels.

Quarantine Kennels

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 26 March, Official Report, column 528, what progress he has made in respect of a standard of animal care in quarantine kennels; and if he will make a statement. [32809]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 17 June 1996]: I held a meeting on 13 May with representatives of the Quarantine Kennels Owners Association and the Quarantine Kennels Professional Association. A follow-up meeting between the associations and my officials was held on 13 June. We agreed that I would write to authorised quarantine kennels inviting those running them to undertake to abide by the Agriculture Departments of Great Britain's voluntary code of practice on the welfare of dogs and cats in quarantine premises. State veterinary service staff would check compliance with the code during their regular visits. Premises in respect of which an undertaking is given to comply with the code, and where we are satisfied that they are doing so will be identified as such in the Government's literature for potential importers.

Computerised Cattle Database

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what discussions he has had with National Milk Records about the development of a national computerised cattle database as part of the bovine sponiform encephalopathy eradication programme. [32935]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 17 June 1996]: My officials are in regular contact with representatives of National Milk Records concerning animal identification and traceability. National Milk Records is also represented on the joint industry/Government working group on animal identification and this group is being involved in plans for the introduction of a national cattle movement database.

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what studies he has made of computerised cattle databases in other European Union member states. [32940]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 17 June 1996]: In developing plans for the introduction of a national cattle movement database in Great Britain, we are looking at the databases in Northern Ireland, Belgium and the Netherlands.

Cattle Disposal

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received about the distortion of the market caused by the discrepancy between liveweight and deadweight arrangements under the cattle disposal scheme. [28870]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 10 May 1996]: We have received a number of representations about the effect on marketing patterns of the coefficient for converting payments from liveweight to a deadweight basis under this scheme. Any change to the rate is a matter for the European Commission.

Contaminated Feed

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when his Department last received representation from the French authority about continued export of contaminated feed to that country. [35669]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 4 July 1996]: The UK told the Commission and other member states of the steps it was taking to prohibit the use of ruminant MBM in ruminant feed in 1988, but it was for other member states to introduce similar domestic restrictions on the use of a material in free circulation and for the Commission to regulate intra-Community trade in this material. At that time MBM could legitimately be exported to other member states as under single market rules it was in free circulation for use in pig and poultry feed.

Organophosphates

Mr. Garnier: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into links between bovine spongiform encephalopathy and the use of organophosphates in cattle; and what conclusions have been reached. [35776]

Mrs. Browning: I refer to the answer given to the hon. Member for Chingford (Mr. Duncan Smith) on 23 July 1996, Official Report, column 262.

Rabies

Mr. Gale: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he is able to certify the United Kingdom as a rabies-free country. [36877]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 15 July 1996]: Yes. The recent isolated case of European bat lyssavirus 2 does not affect our international status as a rabies-free country. The international zoosanitary code of the office international des epizooties—OIE—defines a rabies free country as one in which

"no case of indigenously acquired rabies has been confirmed in man or any other species during the past two years; however this status would not be affected by the isolation of European Bat Lyssavirus (EBL1 or EBL2)."

Although following the bat rabies case it was not possible to sign official veterinary certification for exports for dogs and cats and some other rabies susceptible animals to some countries, this was because the official certification they required contained health assurances on rabies which, because of their specific wording, could no longer be met. All these countries have now been contacted and trade has resumed with those countries to which we export significant numbers of such animals. We are continuing to press those countries which have so far failed to respond.

Environmental Management

Sir Peter Emery: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what programmes his Department has introduced to promote good environmental management by farmers; and how many similar programmes were in existence in 1979. [37634]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 18 July 1996]: The Department has numerous programmes in place to promote good environmental management.

These include: free one-to-one advice and publications on pollution and conservation; voluntary incentive schemes to promote environmentally friendly farming and public enjoyment of the countryside; measures to supplement statutory controls on pesticides, including an advisory pesticides forum on responsible pesticide use and a pesticides minimisation initiative; and capital grants for certain works to benefit the environment.

The Department also has an extensive research and development programme to underpin these programmes.

Further details are given in chapters 2, 3 and 7 of MAFF's 1996 departmental report, which is available in the Library of the House.

The Department has greatly expanded its environmental programmes since 1979, in particular through the introduction of voluntary incentive schemes which date from the mid-1980. Voluntary schemes to ensure the safety and efficacy of pesticides were replaced by statutory arrangements in the mid-1980s.

Live Animal Exports

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what United Kingdom authority has responsibility for statutory regulations governing live cargo while at sea; and at what point that responsibility ceases when animals are transported across the North sea. [38413]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 22 July 1996]: A considerable number of provisions, including EU regulations cover controls on the transport of animals, their welfare, and the responsibility for enforcement. Some requirements are placed on the member state of departure, which may be extended if the vessel or aircraft concerned is owned by nationals of that member state, and some on the receiving member state. Within each member state it may be a matter for national government, in one form or another, or a local authority to enforce. All these factors would have to be considered, as would the nature of any breach, when deciding respective responsibilities on journey across the North sea.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will list all export health certificates used for trade between the United Kingdom,

Northern Ireland and EU member states between 1991 and 1996 until the implementation of the beef export ban for cattle exported (a) for further fattening and (b) for slaughter; [38417]

(2) what certification is required in respect of cattle exported from (a) Great Britain and (b) Northern Ireland for immediate slaughter. [38418]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 22 July 1996]: The certificates used for exports between 1991 and 1996 specifically for (a) production cattle (further fattening) and (b) slaughter cattle from Great Britain to another member state were certificates EC 56 and EC 57 respectively. These and the equivalent certificates for exports from Northern Ireland were based on the model certificates laid down in directive 64/432. As a result of the export ban no cattle are currently exported from the United Kingdom.

Cattle (Export Health Certificates)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he took to ensure that animals exported with further fattening export health certificates would be slaughtered in EU-approved abattoirs. [38409]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 22 July 1996]: Responsibility for ensuring that animals exported for further fattening are slaughtered in EC slaughterhouses rests with the member state of destination.

Chinchillas

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what plans he has to review the welfare of chinchillas which are bred for fur; and if he will make a statement; [38791]

(2) which legislation regulates the commercial breeding of chinchillas for fur. [38790]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 23 July 1996]: As far as I am aware, there are no enterprises breeding chinchillas for fur in this country. If there were, the welfare of the animals concerned would be protected by the general provisions of part I of the Agriculture (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1968, which make it an offence to cause unnecessary pain or unnecessary distress, and relevant subordinate legislation. The Council of Europe recommendation on the welfare of fur animals, which contains specific provisions relating to the welfare of chinchillas, is to be reviewed shortly. My officials will be participating in this process but I expect those delegations from countries with first-hand experience of breeding chinchillas for fur to have the major input into that particular part of the review.

Food Infectivity

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what recent research his Department has evaluated into changes in infectivity of food over time. [36936]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 23 July 1996]: The Department supports research which will lead to an increased understanding of the contamination, growth and survival of food poisoning organisms in foods. In addition, the Department funds surveillance studies to provide a greater understanding of the incidence and types of food poisoning organisms found in foods.

Food Chain Regulations

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made on the extent to which his Department's regulations relating to the food chain are currently enforced; and what assessment he has made of related risk factors over a five-year period. [36935]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 23 July 1996]: Local authorities have the main responsibility for enforcing regulations on food and are required to make regular returns to central Government giving details of their food law enforcement activity. MAFF, through its agencies, the Meat Hygiene Service and ADAS, has direct enforcement responsibilities for enforcement of hygiene requirements in licensed fresh meat plants and on-farm milk production. Enforcement action under these arrangements is carefully monitored and where queries arise appropriate follow-up action is taken.

Risk assessment is the responsibility of the relevant enforcement officers. Guidance on this is given in Food Safety Act codes of practice and other guidance issued by the Government. The relevant enforcement officers conduct these risk assessments and use the results in drawing up their inspection programmes of food premises. In addition, the Government are funding a major study into the causes of infectious intestinal disease. This includes the identification of a wide range of factors associated with foodborne infection.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Gambia (Aid)

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the United Kingdom budget per annum in each year since 1979 committed to bilateral aid programmes in Gambia. [39600]

Dr. Liam Fox: United Kingdom gross bilateral aid to the Gambia since 1979 was as follows:

1979–80—£2.00 million
1980–81—£2.32 million
1981–82—£2.48 million
1982–83—£2.40 million
1983–84—£3.64 million
1984–85—£3.61 million
1985–86—£9.90 million
1986–87—£7.20 million
1987–88—£6.53 million
1988–89—£5.10 million
1989–90—£6.37 million
1990–91—£5.75 million
1991–92—£4.88 million
1992–93—£4.39 million
1993–94—£2.76 million
1994–95—£2.23 million.

Estimated spending in 1995–96 was £1.97 million.

Miss Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the United Kingdom budget per annum currently committed to on-going bilateral aid programmes in Gambia. [39562]

Dr. Fox: Spending on on-going bilateral aid programmes in the Gambia is estimated at £1.2 million in 1996–97.

Miss Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the United Kingdom budget for 1994–95 and 1995–96 committed to aid programmes in Gambia through the European Union; and what is the amount allotted for use in voter registration projects in that country. [39575]

Dr. Fox: The European Union committed 2.5 mecu to the Gambia from 1994 to 1996. The United Kingdom share is estimated at £0.29 million.

The United Kingdom and the European Commission jointly provided about £0.9 million this year to fund a voter registration project in the Gambia.

Miss Nicholson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will set out the conditions to be met before Her Majesty's Government will lift the United Kingdom aid embargo on Gambia; and what plans he has to review that embargo. [39599]

Dr. Fox: The United Kingdom, along with other members of the European Union, will not consider making new aid commitments in the Gambia until there is a return to a democratically elected civilian Government.

We have, however, jointly with the European Commission, provided help to prepare a voter register. We have made it clear that no further assistance for the elections will be given until the ban on political parties is lifted, political detainees are released or charged, and harassment of the press ceases.

The situation is under constant review.

Southern Rhodesia Public Service

Sir Anthony Durant: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received from former officers of the Southern Rhodesia public service recruited and now living in the United Kingdom about the payment of their pensions; what response he has given; and if he will make a statement. [39588]

Dr. Liam Fox: In recent years, representations have been received from many former members of the public service in Southern Rhodesia about the decline in the sterling value of their pensions. Southern Rhodesia was an independent self-governing colony from 1923; recruitment to its public service was made directly by that Government, and staff served on local as opposed to expatriate terms of service.

The Government of Zimbabwe is responsible for the payment of pensions to former Southern Rhodesia civil servants. Our responsibility is limited to those who were recruited by, or on behalf of, the Secretary of State for the Colonies, and who were employed on expatriate terms in the central Government of a colony. There are large numbers of overseas pensioners whose pensions are being eroded by falling exchange rates and, indeed, many who receive no payment at all.

The Government could not justify helping Zimbabwe pensioners in isolation; the financial consequences of assisting all overseas pensioners who find themselves in this position would be prohibitive.

Sir Anthony Durant: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what would be the cost, including the saving in state benefits, of honouring the undertaking by the Minister of State in 1979 in respect of safeguards under the Zimbabwean constitution for the pensions of former officers of the Southern Rhodesia public service; and if he will bring their pensions within the aegis of the Overseas Pension Act 1973. [39587]

Dr. Fox: The Government of Zimbabwe have honoured their obligation under the constitution by continuing to pay the pensions of those former officers who were employed in the public service in Southern Rhodesia, although the sterling value of these pensions has been eroded through the effects of inflation and adverse exchange rates.

The Government have no plans to bring Southern Rhodesian public service pensions within the scope of the Overseas Pensions Act 1973. The cost of doing so would necessarily be very substantial and would expose Her Majesty's Government to similar pressures from pensioners who served on local terms elsewhere.

Reproductive Health and Family Planning

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many applications from non-governmental organisations have been received for funding for reproductive health and family planning projects from the seedcorn fund for the financial year 1996–97; and in how many and which countries these non-governmental organisations are based. [39644]

Dr. Liam Fox: The seedcorn fund has received 27 eligible applications from 17 non-governmental organisations for the financial year 1996–97. All applying organisations are based within the United Kingdom.

Mr. Clifton-Brown: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 13 December, Official Report, columns 664–66, on allocations from the seedcorn fund for family planning and reproductive health projects, how many and which non-governmental organisations, additional to those listed in the reply, have received funding for reproductive health and family planning projects for each of the financial years 1995–96 and 1996–97; in which countries the NGOs receiving the grants are based; in which countries the funded projects are based; what are these projects; and what is the amount of funding granted and for what length of time. [39779]

Dr. Fox: The following table summarises seedcorn fund grants that have been provided since 13 December. In addition to these, three new projects have been approved in this period. Currently, only UK-based organisations are eligible to apply to the seedcorn fund.

Organisation	Title	Country	Budget (£000)	Duration
Marie Stopes International	To Ascertain the Practicalities and Economics of Initiating a Social Publishing Programme in Almaty	Russia	6	1 month
Marie Stopes International	Feasibility Study to Expand Depo-Provera through Nurse Aid Training	Uganda	21	6 months
International Family Health	Community-Based Social Marketing: Testing and Piloting a new Health Production and Information Delivery Strategy	India	297	2 years

Hong Kong Public Service

Sir Anthony Durant: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what figure would be used under part II of the schedule to the Hong Kong (Overseas Public Servants) (Pension Supplements) Order 1996 to calculate the notional pension if it were based on a median average rather than a mean average of comparable Hong Kong and United Kingdom civil service grades; what would be the maximum potential cost to the United Kingdom Government if the sterling pension safeguard scheme were based on that figure; and if he will review the scheme in the event that the value of the Hong Kong dollar falls significantly after 30 June 1997. [39682]

Dr. Liam Fox: The notional pension under part II of the schedule to the Hong Kong (Overseas Public Servants) (Pension Supplements) Order 1996, based on the mean salary differentials between comparable grades in the Hong Kong and United Kingdom public service, is calculated at the rate of HK$21 to £1. If median as opposed to mean salary differentials were used this would not affect the rate. The hypothetical maximum liability to Her Majesty's Government would therefore remain unchanged at £130 million over the lifetime of pensions. The scheme was introduced on 1 July 1996 and is designed to provide a fair and reasonable level of pension protection in the event that there is a significant fall in the value of the Hong Kong dollar. The Government have no plans to make any changes to it.

Burundi

Mr. Tony Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what assessment he has made of the current situation in Burundi; [40089]

(2) if he will make a statement about the current situation in Burundi. [40091]

Dr. Liam Fox: We are deeply concerned about the situation in Burundi and are in close contact with regional leaders and partners. We support efforts by ex-President Nyerere to negotiate a political settlement and welcomed the outcome of the Arusha settlement. We continue to support contingency planning at the UN and within the region for possible international intervention.

Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has received and what discussions he has had about the possibility of intervention in Burundi by the Organisation of African Unity. [40090]

Dr. Fox: The Organisation of African Unity Summit in Yaoundé endorsed the outcome of the Arusha summit. We welcome the decision by the OAU central organ to extend the mandate of the OAU observers and to sent a mission to Burundi.

Mr. Lloyd: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what assistance the British Government have provided and are prepared to offer to Burundi in respect of the current internal conflict; [40092]

(2) what reports he has received about forced repatriation of refugees from Burundi to Rwanda. [40094]

Dr. Fox: United Nations High Commission for Refugees estimates that 17,000 Rwandan refugees have been forcibly repatriated in the current conflict. UNHCR and UN human rights monitors are monitoring the condition of the returnees. Britain has made representations to the Governments of Burundi and Rwanda calling on them to ensure the safety of refugees in their care and that all repatriation is on a voluntary basis. Discussions are also taking place in the UN Security Council.

Britain has provided £2.6 million bilaterally and through the EU to Burundi since January 1996. My right hon. and noble Friend Baroness Chalker intends to visit the region early next month. She will assess further needs.

Tropical Timber

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of the meeting on tropical timber held in Geneva from 13 September. [40286]

Dr. Liam Fox: The International Tropical Timber Organisation met in Geneva on 13 September. It was decided that the new international tropical timber agreement, which has now been ratified or provisionally applied by 38 countries including the United Kingdom, should enter into force on 1 January 1997. The new agreement provides an important basis for continued efforts by the international community to improve the management of tropical forests and promote trade in sustainably produced tropical timber.

PRIME MINISTER

Departmental Salaries

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Prime Minister how many persons working in (i) No. 10 Downing street and (ii) the Cabinet Office are paid more than £43,000 per annum. [40220]

The Prime Minister: The number of payees whose national salary is more than £43,000 per annum in No. 10 Downing street, the Cabinet Office, including the Office of Public Service and its agencies, is as follows:

No. 10: 12

Cabinet Office (including the Office of Public Service and agencies): 116.

Oman University

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Prime Minister (1) what reports he has received regarding the involvement by Mr. Mark Thatcher, in respect of companies in receipt of export credit guarantees from the ECGD, in the construction of a university in Oman; and if he will make a statement; [40277]

(2) what reports he has received that part of the university of Oman has been used for the storage of military equipment or for other military purposes; if these purposes were known to Her Majesty's Government when export credit guarantees were given by the ECGD in relation to the construction of the university; and if he will make a statement. [40215]

The Prime Minister: As far as my office is aware, none.

Parliamentary Recall

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his letter to the right hon. Member for Chesterfield (Mr. Benn) and the hon. Member for Linlithgow of 9 September, if he will state the conditions in which he believes the public interest requires Parliament to be recalled, with particular reference to the involvement of British personnel on active service. [40365]

The Prime Minister: A decision to recall Parliament depends upon the prevailing situation. It is made after consultation with colleagues and through the usual channels.

Academy of Sports

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Prime Minister what advice he sought from voluntary coaches and administrators in (a) athletics, (b) rowing, (c) canoeing, (d) swimming and (e) cycling (i) prior to and (ii) since his original announcements concerning his proposed academy of sports. [40404]

The Prime Minister: Details of the Government's proposals for the British Academy of Sport were included in the sports policy statement, "Sport: Raising the Game", which was published on 14 July 1995. The policy statement invited the Sports Council to bring forward proposals on what the structure and content of the academy might be, and to consult widely with the sports world on the ideas that might emerge. On 6 December 1995, the Sports Council published a consultation paper on the academy and comments were invited by the end of January. The Sports Council also held a series of consultation meetings with groups of administrators, coaches, performers and specialists from all sports, including representatives of the sports listed.

A prospectus inviting bids to establish the academy was published jointly by the Department of National Heritage and the Sports Council on 24 July. A summary of the consultation was published with it. Bidders have until 31 October to submit their bids.

British Legion

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Prime Minster what further correspondence has been received in his office from the Royal British Legion in relation to its call for the setting up of an ex-service affairs unit; what reply has been sent; what action he will be taking; and if he will make a statement. [40374]

The Prime Minister: I have received one recent letter directed from the Royal British Legion regarding the setting up of an ex-service affairs unit. A reply has been sent. The position remains as I detailed in my answer to the hon. Member on 11 March, Official Report, columns 434–35.

Poverty Resources

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Prime Minister what policies Her Majesty's Government have established in support of the 1996 United Nations Year for the Eradication of Poverty: and what additional resources have been committed in support of these policies. [40491]

The Prime Minister: The United Kingdom has extensive social protection and assistance arrangements, among the most comprehensive in the world. It is by working to maintain and improve living standards through economic and social policies that we will fulfil the aspirations of the United Nations Year for the Eradication of Poverty, and in a way relevant to our society. The most effective way of eradicating poverty is to promote flexible labour markets since this reduces the level of unemployment. Claimant unemployment has already fallen by over 125,000 so far this year. The UK has more of its people in work and a lower unemployment rate than any other major EU country.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Ethnic Minorities

Ms. Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many women from ethnic minorities are employed by his Department and its agencies; at what grade; and what measures he has taken to encourage the (a) recruitment, (b) employment and (c) promotion of women from ethnic minorities within his Department and its agencies. [39898]

Mr. Hanley: Our records, based on voluntary declaration, show that this Department and its agencies employ the following numbers of ethnic minority women:

higher executive officer and above: 8

Executive officer: 19

Administrative officer: 95

Administrative assistant: 27.

We are committed to encouraging the career development of all staff, irrespective of gender or ethnic origin. We have comprehensive programmes in place to ensure equality of access to recruitment, training, career development and promotion for all staff. We monitor all our procedures to ensure implementation.

We actively encourage ethnic minority applicants through our recruitment literature and campaigns and work closely with the Windsor Fellowship. We are also active members of Opportunity 2000.

Hong Kong (US Bombs)

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the recent discovery by Customs at Hong Kong airport of US-made bombs in transit from China to Israel. [40072]

Mr. Hanley: A consignment of inert military ordnance was discovered by the Hong Kong Customs and Excise Department during a routine inspection on 24 May 1996. Charges were laid against the carrier, Hong Kong Dragon Airlines Ltd., for importing prohibited articles without a licence and failing to retain possession of the articles until a valid licence was produced. The airline pleaded guilty and was fined HK$80,000 or £6,600.

Former Yugoslavia

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his estimate of the numbers of soldiers and civilians killed (i) in the attack by Bosnian troops on Serbian troops to the north and north west of Srebrenica and (ii) in the counter-attack by Serbian troops; how many soldiers were hiding their military identity by dressing in civilian clothing; and in what ways such casualties can be distinguished from Bosnians who it is alleged were illegally executed by Serbian troops. [40219]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The International Criminal Tribunal for former Yugoslavia—ICTY—is still investigating the fall of Srebrenica last July. We await details. So far, ICTY teams have exhumed 400 to 500 bodies from four sites around Srebrenica.The United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees estimates that there are 6,000 missing people from the area.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs for what reasons international warrants have not been issued against (a) President Tudjman of Croatia and (b) the leaders of the Bosnian Muslims. [40216]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: it is for the International Criminal Tribunal for the Former Yugoslavia to decide whom it should indict. We provide significant support for the tribunal's activities, and it has our full confidence.

Western Sahara

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he plans to take to ensure the UN-sponsored referendum on the future of the Western Sahara takes place. [40285]

Mr. Hanley: We are active both in New York and bilaterally in urging Morocco and Polisario to co-operate fully with the UN and MINURSO—in the referendum mission—in order that the identification process can be restarted and lead to the referendum.

I also took the opportunity during my visit to Morocco in June to make our views clear.

Nuclear Co-operation

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his policy in respect of nuclear co-operation with Russia and China. [40248]

Dr. Liam Fox: In September we signed a bilateral agreement with the Russian Federation on co-operation in the peaceful uses of nuclear energy. The agreement provides a framework within which firms can pursue business and expert exchanges. With our G8 colleagues, we attended the Moscow summit on nuclear safety and security. The summit underlined the close co-operation between Russia and the G7 in solving nuclear safety problems in eastern Europe and in the former Soviet Union. It also identified further action to be pursued. Russia has now ratified the international convention on nuclear safety, and signed the Vienna convention on nuclear liability.

China is becoming increasingly important in the civil nuclear power section. We are actively seeking to strengthen our civil nuclear co-operation with them at both official and industry levels. We welcome China's decision to attend the conference on nuclear safety in Asia, to be held in Tokyo on 5 and 6 November, which the United Kingdom will also attend.

Human Rights

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if his Department has a system for grading the human rights performances of individual countries. [40162]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: We do not maintain any league table of human rights violators, though we receive detailed information from our embassies and high commissions as well as from outside bodies, including non-governmental organisations, on the human rights performance of various countries.

Burma

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will estimate the value of the contribution made by British businesses to the economy in 1996 of Burma with particular reference to tourism; and if he will make a statement. [40136]

Mr. Hanley: The value of United Kingdom trade with Burma and of UK investment there is low. We are aware of only two UK companies which have made direct investment in the tourism industry in Burma. The amount of tourism-related goods and services exported from the UK is also small. More may be channelled through third countries, but it is difficult to estimate their value.

Entry Clearance

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list for the last year for which figures are available (a) the total number of persons who applied for entry clearance as a visitor to the United Kingdom, (b) the total number of refusals and (c) the countries of origin of those who were refused giving the numbers against each. [40196]

Dr. Liam Fox: The total number of applications for entry clearance to visit the UK in 1995 was 1,167,295.

The total number of refusals for entry clearance to visit the UK in 1995 was 72,626.

The countries of origin of those refused are not currently available. Details will shortly be available from the Home Office's Control of Immigration: Statistics United Kingdom 1995.

Galapagos

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 21 May, Official Report, column 103, what contribution has been made by Her Majesty's ambassador in Quito towards the goat eradication scheme on the Galapagos. [40367]

Dr. Fox: The British Ambassador in Quito donated £5,000 for the purchase of equipment required for the goat eradication programme. A contribution of £25,000 from an FCO fund for small environmental projects has also been approved to establish a base station for the programme and to protect threatened plant species, which form an important part of the tortoises' diet.

Russia

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his letter of 13 May, in what ways he has kept up constructive pressure on Russia in relation to radioactive waste management. [40366]

Dr. Fox: Meetings of the International Atomic Energy Agency's contact expert group provide regular opportunities to discuss radioactive waste management issues. Both the UK and Russia are full members. The group, which also co-ordinates and monitors aid for nuclear waste management projects in Russia, met last on 10 and 11 September 1996.

Lake Kojanovskoe

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his letter of 3 April, what action he has taken with the European Commission to counter contamination of Lake Kojanovskoe. [40370]

Dr. Fox: We have yet to decide with our EU partners what concrete assistance might be made available to counter contamination of Lake Kojanovskoe pending consideration of the conclusions of the EU-financed study of contamination levels.

Commission for the Restitution of Monetary Gold

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a formal request to the UK partners on the tripartite gold commission to produce annual reports regarding meetings and expenses. [40650]

Mr. David Davis: We will make a request. I shall write to the hon. Member with the results.

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs on what date and in what form he last reported to Parliament on the work of the tripartite commission for the restitution of monetary gold; and if he will make a statement. [40649]

Mr. Davis: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given by the hon. Member for Morecambe and Lunesdale, the then Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, on 12 March 1991, Official Report, column 433.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Probate Service

30. Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the future of the probate service. [37957]

Mr. Streeter: Public consultation on proposed changes to the structure of the probate service has now been concluded. The Lord Chancellor is considering the proposals and an announcement will be made as soon as a decision has been reached.

Legal Aid

32. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will make a statement on the review of legal aid. [37959]

Mr. Streeter: The Lord Chancellor published a White Paper on 2 July, setting out the Government's plans for reforming the legal aid scheme in England and Wales. Since then, work has been proceeding on implementing the reforms.

The Legal Aid Board published its plans for expanding block contracting of advice and assistance in the not-for-profit sector in August. It intends to publish proposals for piloting legal aid for family mediation in November, and on advice and assistance contracts with solicitors' firms in early 1997.

33. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what representations he has recently received about the cost of the legal aid scheme. [37960]

Mr. Streeter: I frequently receive representations on this matter. As my hon. Friend knows, the Government's proposals for a radical reform of the legal aid scheme were announced by the Lord Chancellor on 2 July, and are contained in the White Paper, "Striking the Balance". These proposals will, among other things, improve control over the cost of legal aid and ensure that the taxpayer obtains good value for the money spent.

Mediation

34. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will take steps to promote the concept of mediation in the civil and family law systems in the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [37961]

Mr. Streeter: In England and Wales my Department has developed a number of initiatives to encourage the use of mediation where it is appropriate. In January of this year, my Department published the guide, "Resolving Disputes Without Going to Court". It contains information on a range of alternatives to litigation and is available free from county courts. A pilot scheme has been introduced at the Central London county court to help people settle a wide range of disputes through mediation.

The Family Law Act 1996 contains measures designed to promote the use of family mediation as an alternative to litigation. The reforms of the legal aid scheme that the Lord Chancellor announced in July would allow new types of service to be provided under legal aid. Family mediation will be an early priority and, in time, the scheme could be extended to allow civil mediation services to be provided to people who qualify for legal aid.

Public Record Office Papers

35. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department which are the oldest papers in the Public Record Office which have not been placed in the public domain. [37962]

Mr. Streeter: The oldest papers in the Public Record Office which have not yet been placed in the public domain are some papers from Dublin castle records in a ledger dated 1853–1920, Public Record Office reference CO 904/6. These papers have now been cleared for release and will be available shortly.

Magistrates Courts

36. Mr. Ainger: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many magistrates courts there were in Wales in 1978; and how many are operating in 1996. [37963]

Mr. Streeter: There are at present 63 magistrates courts in Wales. No accurate record exists for the number of magistrates courts in Wales in 1978.

Sheriffs

37. Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what steps he is taking to increase the public accountability of sheriffs and under-sheriffs. [37964]

Mr. Streeter: On 2 April my hon. Friend the Member for Brecon and Radnor (Mr. Evans) announced to the House, Official Report, column 87, the work currently planned in connection with the Lord Chancellor's review of civil enforcement agents. No decision has yet been made on the issue of the accountability of high sheriffs, under sheriffs and sheriff's officers.

Children Act 1989

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department, pursuant to his answer of 22 July, Official Report, columns 18–19, if he will make arrangements for all guidance on the provisions of and procedures under the Children Act 1989 for court staff and judiciary to be placed in the Library. [39929]

Mr. Streeter: Yes. The following will be placed in the Library:

Children Act 1989—Court Staff Handbook

Children Act 1989—Judicial Information Booklet

Children Act 1989—Guidance to Listing Officers

Children Act 1989—Court User Guide.

Domestic Violence

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the report, "Domestic Violence and Child Contact Arrangements in England and Denmark" by Marianne Hester and Lorraine Radford, Policy Press 1996, a copy of which has been sent to him; and if he will make a statement. [39930]

Mr. Streeter: The findings of this report will be considered carefully in connection with the implementation of the Family Law Act 1996. Where conflict occurs in connection with child contact arrangements, remedies are available within the Act and elsewhere to deal with it in order to ensure that both children and adults are properly protected against domestic violence.

Legal Profession

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the reasons for the growth in both branches of the legal profession since 1970; and what assessment he has made of their optimum size. [37950]

Mr. Streeter: None. The legal profession is independent of Government and self-regulating. Its size is determined by the demand for legal services.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prisoner Statistics

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the latest estimate of the numbers of prisoners in United Kingdom (a) open and (b) closed prisons; and what were the corresponding figures for 1991. [40053]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from A. J. Pearson to Mr. Barry Jones, dated 14 October 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your Parliamentary Question about the latest estimate of the numbers of prisoners in United Kingdom open and closed prisons; and the corresponding figures for 1991.

On 31 July 1996, there were 4,650 prisoners in open prisons and 51,500 persons in closed prisons in England and Wales. These figures include prisoners held in young offender institutions.

Information for 30 June 1991 is published in "Prison statistics, England and Wales", table 1.7 of the 1991 edition, column 2157; annual average population figures are given in table 1.6. A copy of "Prison statistics" is available in the Library.

Information for Scotland and Northern Ireland is the responsibility of the Secretaries of State for Scotland and Northern Ireland.

Ethnic Minorities

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many women from ethnic minorities are employed by his Department and its agencies; at what grade; and what measures he has taken to encourage the (a) recruitment, (b) employment and (c) promotion of women from ethic minorities with his Department and its agencies. [39897]

Mr. Howard: The Home Office and its agencies employ a total of 1,252 women known to be from ethnic minorities. Details of their grades are given in the following tables. The Directors General of the Prison Service and of the Forensic Science Service, and the chief executives of the UK Passport Agency and the Fire Service College have provided the figures for their agencies.

The Home Office follows the Cabinet Office's programmes for action to achieve equality of opportunity in the civil service for people of ethnic minority origin and for women. Recruitment advertisements, which encourage applications from people regardless of background—including ethnic origin or gender—are placed in the ethnic minority press. A number of measures are being taken to foster links with those from ethnic minorities, including substantial involvement with the Windsor Fellowship and the National Mentoring Consortium and links with community relations councils. In the Prison Service, governors have also been encouraged to make particular efforts to attract applications from women and from those of ethnic minority origin.

The Department has widely publicised procedures for combating harassment and discrimination.

Steps are being taken to encourage more ethnic minority staff to train as members of recruitment and promotion boards with the aim that boards include one member of ethnic minority origin wherever possible. All advertisements for promotion boards carry a statement which makes it clear that the Department is committed to a policy of equal opportunity for all staff regardless of factors such as ethnicity or gender.

The Department monitors the progress of staff according to ethnicity and gender, including aspects such as recruitment, grade level, promotion and staff report markings.

Nigerian Citizens

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many Nigerian citizens have been compulsorily returned to Nigeria since November 1995, and what reports he has received of their present situation. [40283]

Mr. Kirkhope: The statistics available relate to the total number of Nigerian citizens removed from the United Kingdom to all countries. Some 350 Nigerians were refused leave to enter and removed from the United Kingdom in the period November 1995 to July 1996. In addition, 290 Nigerians were removed as illegal entrants or persons subject to deportation action; this figure includes persons who departed voluntarily after enforcement action had been initiated. I have received no reports of their present situation.

Casinos

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many registered casinos there are in England and Wales; and if he will list them. [40117]

Internet

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what measures his Department is taking to outlaw the downloading and publication of obscene material from the Internet which would be illegal if produced in printed form. [40548]

Mr. Sackville: I will write to the hon. Member.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Millennium Exhibition

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister if he will list the companies which have so far stated their intention to contribute to the millennium site. [40198]

The Deputy Prime Minister: The companies which have so far publicly stated their intention to contribute to sponsorship of the millennium exhibition are Abbey National, Amec, BAA, Barclays bank, British Aerospace, British Airways, British Telecommunications, BSkyB, British Petroleum, General Electric Company, Hanson Energy, Lloyds bank, London Electricity, Marks and Spencer, Midland bank, National Westminster bank, Reuters and Siemens. The Corporation of London has also pledged support.

Ministerial Accommodation

Mr. Allen: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what nursery accommodation is available to Her Majesty's Ministers in their Departments. [40265]

The Deputy Prime Minister: Departments and agencies have delegated responsibility to establish nursery and childcare schemes for children of civil servants. Departments wishing to establish a workplace nursery must be able to justify it in terms of value for money and contain the cost within existing running costs. Parents wishing to use any of these schemes are normally required to make a contribution to the costs, comparable to private sector schemes.

Ministers of the Crown are able to make use of a departmental nursery on the same basis as civil servants.

Nationally, 53 civil service nurseries have been established and 120 holiday play schemes run during school holidays. In addition, the civil service is in partnership with other organisations in 23 nurseries and buys places in 16 others.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Publicity

Ms Hodge: To ask the Attorney-General what is his Department's budget in 1996–97 for consultants to assist with information, publicity, press and media, specifying separately the Solicitor-General's staff. [39347]

The Attorney-General: No separate budget is held for this purpose.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Attorney-General (1) what is the cost budgeted for staff employed full time or part time to provide information and publicity in 1996–97 in his Department and that of the Solicitor-General; [39446]

(2) how many staff are assumed in his Department's budget, employed (i) full time and (ii) part time, (a) to work on press and media and (b) to provide information and publicity in 1996–97; [39336]

(3) what was the cost of staff employed full time or part time (a) to provide information and publicity and (b) to work on the press and media in (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1994–95, and (iii) 1993–94, showing separately staff of the Solicitor-General; [39409]

(4) how many staff were employed full time or part time (a) to provide information and publicity and (b) on press and media in (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1994–95 and (iii) 1993–94; [39421]

(5) what is the cost assumed in the budget of people employed full time or part time to work on the press and the media in 1996–97. [39982]

The Attorney-General: The information is shown in the table.

Crown Prosecution Service	Not available (7+1 part-time)	£283,800 (10+1 part-time)	£288,800 (11+1 part-time)	£277,700 (11+1 part-time)
Serious Fraud Office	£69,000 (3)	£79,500 (4+2 part-time)	£80,000 (4+1 part-time)	£93,000 (4)
Legal Secretariat to the Law Officers[4] Treasury Solicitor's Department	—	—	—	£14,800 (1)
Government Property Lawyers	—	—	—	—

Figures before the brackets indicate the costs[1] of staff engaged in providing information, publicity, press and media services.[2] Figures in brackets indicate the numbers of staff so engaged.[3]

[1] These figures comprise salary, superannuation (estimated where precise figure is unknown), ERNIC payments and allowances. CPS costs for 1993–94 are not available.
[2] It is not possible to distinguish between these categories of services since in practice they overlap and are provided by the same staff.
[3] These figures do not include staff providing these services incidentally to, or inseparably from, other functions.
[4] No separate costs are incurred in relation to the Solicitor-General.

ISC-Ferranti

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Attorney-General if he will make a statement in respect of the removal by an agency of Her Majesty's Government of (a) files and (b) other evidence from the offices of ISC in west London, following the announcement by Sir Derek Alun Jones in respect of fraud at the company; what was the nature of such material; what steps were taken by his office to ensure that it was properly preserved and examined by investigating authorities; and what action was taken as a result of such an examination. [40209]

The Attorney-General: My answer relates only to the Serious Fraud Office for which I have ministerial responsibility. On 12 September 1989 an announcement was made by Sir Derek Alun Jones to the effect that the company was carrying out an internal investigation into some of its overseas contracts and that the annual general meeting of the company would be adjourned until 10 October 1989. Shortly thereafter the Serious Fraud Office commenced its preliminary investigation. Neither the Serious Fraud Office nor police officers working with it at any time removed files or other evidence from the offices of ISC in west London. Certain documentation originating from the offices of ISC (London) plc and ISC (Technologies) Ltd. was however produced to the SFO by Ferranti's solicitors. Where copies were taken by the SFO, they were analysed and preserved in the normal way. The investigation was carried out in close co-operation with the United States' prosecuting authorities. Seventeen individuals and three corporations were subsequently indicted in the United States on charges of fraud in respect of which I refer the hon. Member to my previous answers to him of 24 July 1996, Official Report, columns 459–60.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Tourism

15. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will estimate how many tourists will visit Britain in 1996. [37938]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The British Tourist Authority currently estimates that there will be 25.8 million overseas visitors to the UK this year, up 7 per cent. on 1995, with expenditure at over £13 billion, an 8 per cent. increase on last year.

22. Mr. Robert Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what representations she has received on the impact on the tourism industry of a minimum wage. [37946]

Mrs. Bottomley: Tourism industry leaders, including the main trade body, the British Hospitality Association, have expressed their concern about the introduction of a national minimum wage. A minimum wage would cause job losses and restrict the creation of new jobs. The impact on more vulnerable young and unskilled workers would be particularly damaging.

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on the level of investment in tourism projects in the North-west region. [39992]

Mr. Sproat: The North West tourist board receives funding from the English tourist board to develop the quality of the tourism product in north-west England. The ETB subvention to the NWTB was £414,000 in 1995–96. The NWTB raised a further £1.42 million in income from commercial activities and local authority and commercial members' subscriptions. Tourism in the region also benefits from the single regeneration budget, and from Objective 1 status for Merseyside and objective 2 status for Greater Manchester, Lancashire and Cumbria under the European regional development fund. Twenty-eight mecu is allocated to tourism and cultural projects within the 1994 to 1999 objective 1 programme in Merseyside, and 24 mecu within the 1994 to 1996 objective 2 programme in Greater Manchester, Lancashire and Cumbria.

National Lottery

16. Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what discussions her Department has had with (a) the Arts Council and (b) the Sports Council on the subject of directing lottery funds to assist young talented individuals. [37939]

Mr. Sproat: My right hon. Friend announced today that lottery money, joined with funds from central Government, will be used to finance a three-year scheme to assist students of dance and drama to take up places at accredited training institutions in England. The scheme will be administered by the Arts Council of England.

23. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on the criteria by which lottery proceeds are distributed to specific projects. [37947]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: The proceeds set aside from the national lottery for the five good causes are distributed by 11 bodies.

Each of these bodies to set application criteria taking account of the directions issued to them under section 26 of the National Lottery etc. Act 1993. Decisions on applications are made independently of the Government.

Yorkshire County Cricket Club

17. Mr. William O'Brien: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on the representations made to her Department on the relocation of the Yorkshire county cricket club. [37941]

Mr. Sproat: My right hon. Friend and I have received a small number of representations about the relocation of the Yorkshire county cricket club away from Headingley, its current headquarters. Yorkshire county cricket club announced on 7 October that it intended to relocate to Wakefield. This is entirely a matter for the club.

Film Industry

18. Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what recent consultations she has had with representatives of the film industry. [37942]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: I have regular consultations with representatives of the film industry on a wide range of film-related issues. Specifically this summer I visited the United States of America where I met leading figures from the American film industry including representatives from MCA, Warner Bros. and the Motion Picture Association of America.

More recently, I attended the Edinburgh film festival, and visited Shepperton studios and the Warner Bros. feature animation studio in central London.

National Museums Day

19. Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what representations she has received regarding National Museums Day. [37943]

Mr. Sproat: I understand that Museums Week was a tremendous success and my right hon. Friend is looking forward to the meeting she shall be having, on 17 October, with Mr. Loyd Grossman, chairman of the Campaign for Museums, who has been responsible for the campaign. Six hundred and ninety-nine museums took part in the Week, and over 300 Members of Parliament visited their local museums, many on National Museums Day.

Arts Policy

20. Mr. Merchant: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on arts policy. [37944]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: On 30 July 1996 I published "Setting the Scene: the Arts and Young People", the first major Government policy statement on the arts for many years.

Minority Sports

21. Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what plans he has to encourage minority British sports. [37945]

Mr. Sproat: The Government encourage the development of all lawful sports throughout the country. A wide range of high-quality services and support are made available by the Sports Council to all recognised sporting activities.

Arts Group Tours

24. Sir Michael Neubert: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what measures she is considering to encourage touring by arts groups. [37948]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: On 1 April 1996 I announced a new direction to the Arts Council of England under the National Lottery etc. Act 1993 requiring it to take into account the desirability of facilitating access to and participation in the arts. I believe that enabling touring companies to travel to new venues and communities in isolated areas is an important priority in increasing access.

Public Libraries

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on the future of public library services. [37921]

Mr. Sproat: Work on the public library review is well advanced, and I expect to make an announcement about its conclusions in the near future.

Ethnic Minorities

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many women from ethnic minorities are employed by her Department and its agencies; at what grade; and what measures she has taken to encourage the (a) recruitment, (b) employment and (c) promotion of women from ethnic minorities within her Department and its agencies. [39893]

Mr. Sproat: The numbers of women from ethnic minorities employed by Department of National Heritage and its agencies, by grade, are listed in the table. The following measures are taken by DNH and its agencies to encourage the recruitment, employment and promotion of women from ethnic minorities.

The Department and its agencies are equal opportunities employers and state this when advertising all vacancies. When recruiting externally, normally through the Recruitment and Assessment Services Agency, vacancies are advertised in papers aimed at ethnic minorities.

Two thirds of the Royal Parks agency staff are police officers and we always ensure that police vacancies are advertised in the ethnic press. The agency are also considering the recommendations of Her Majesty's inspectorate of constabulary contained in its report "Developing diversity in the Police Service".

The Department has an equal opportunities statement and policy and an equal opportunities officer. Every possible step is taken to ensure that decisions on recruitment, selection, training and promotion are based solely on objective and job-related criteria.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Business Links

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many personal business advisers are currently employed by business links. [39855]

Mr. Page: It is estimated that there are currently around 530 personal business advisers working for business links.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) if he will list the target group of growth businesses used by each business link, by number of employees; [39854]

(2) what proportion of business links use (a) 10 to 200 employees, (b) five to 200 employees and (c) some other definition as their target group. [39852]

Mr. Page: The definition of target groups is a matter for each business link. Information is not held centrally.

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what proportion of (a) personal business advisers, (b) export development councillors and (c) innovation and technology advisers at (i) each business link and (ii) in total have been appointed by business links without reference to his Department's personnel. [39853]

Mr. Page: Business links recruit personal business advisers, export development counsellors and innovation and technology counsellors against a background of criteria and guidance agreed by the national business link partners including my Department.

Each business link is an independent private sector organisation and decisions on whom it employs are a matter for it. However, where requested by the business link, officials of my Department, or the relevant regional government office, have occasionally been involved by participating in the selection process for personal business advisers and innovation and technology counsellors; and have regularly been involved in the selection process for export development counsellors.

Small Firms

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what research his Department has recently undertaken into barriers to growth for small firms; and what his Department has identified as the main barriers. [39859]

Mr. Page: The Department has undertaken and published a number of studies which examine particular barriers to growth for small firms:

'Management Training for Growth SMEs' (1995) looked at linkages between small and medium enterprises investment in management training and business growth. It also identified factors that are likely to limit the ability of the firm to maximise the benefits of external management training.

'Globalisation of SMEs' (1994) discusses the factors affecting the globlisation process and the resource and organisational difficulties encountered by SMEs.

'Small Firms in the Inner City' (1993) was involved in identifying the different opportunities for growth as well as the constraints on the development of firms in different types of location.

The Department is due to publish shortly two other reports that relate to barriers to growth for small firms:

'Growth Constraints on SMEs' explores barriers to growth of SMEs in internationally tradeable sectors. It will identify the main barriers and assess how companies identify and manage constraints.

'Franchising' examines the role of business format franchising as a strategy to facilitate small firm growth.

Large Firm Outsourcing

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what evidence his Department has evaluated regarding the proportion of large firm outsourcing which goes to (a) large firms, (b) small firms and (c) self-employed people. [39860]

Mr. Page: The information requested is not available.

Company Sizes

Mrs. Roche: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what percentage of the work force in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) European Union countries were in enterprises with (i) one to nine, (ii) 10 to 49, (iii) 50 to 249 and (iv) over 250 employees in the last year for which figures are available. [39858]

Mr. Nelson: Estimates of the percentage of the workforce by size class for non-government enterprises are given in the table. There are no figures available that include central and local government.

Work-force by size distribution of UK and EUR 15 enterprises[1]

Number of employees	Percentages
	UK	EUR 15
1–9	17.4	23.1
10-49	16.4	18.8
50-249	12.9	14.9
250+	40.3	33.8

Aggregates

Sir Peter Hordern: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was (a) the value and (b) the volume of (i) exports and (ii) imports of aggregates from and to the United Kingdom in each of the last five years. [39621]

Mr. Nelson: The information is published by Her Majesty's Customs and Excise in the "Overseas Trade Statistics of the United Kingdom", which is available in the Library of the House. Aggregates are classified to heading 273.4 of the standard international trade classification.

Channel 35

Dr. John Cunningham: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans his Department has for the allocation of the Channel 35 frequency for analogue or digital use. [39742]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The Government announced on 16 September the arrangements for the future of frequency Channel 35. Channel 5 Broadcasting will have access to the frequency for five years to enhance the population coverage of its service. As the market for advanced digital services develops, channel 35 will be redeployed to facilitate the new broadcasting opportunities. The arrangements oblige Channel 5 Broadcasting to inform viewers in areas using Channel 35, at the point of their VCR retuning campaign, that access to the channel is time limited and that Channel 5 will need to consider other options for reception at the end of the five-year period.

Ethnic Minorities

Ms Abbott: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many women from ethnic minorities are employed by his Department and its agencies; at what grade; and what measures he has taken to encourage the (a) recruitment, (b) employment and (c) promotion of women from ethnic minorities within his Department and its agencies. [39896]

Mr. John M. Taylor: On 19 July 1996 the DTI, excluding its executive agencies, employed 454 female staff of ethnic minority origin in the following grade levels:

Grade level	Number
Senior Civil Service	0
SEO-G6 level	8
HEO level	19
EO level	64
AO level	223
AA level	140

Recruitment levels are very low at the moment. However, where we run recruitment campaigns, vacancies are usually advertised in the ethnic minority press. We also, where appropriate, use positive action statements to encourage applications from the ethnic minority community.

Since September 1994, line managers have been responsible for selecting staff for internal transfers and promotions to posts up to and including G7 level.

All staff involved in recruitment and promotion decisions are trained in selection techniques and in avoiding discrimination. Equal opportunities awareness training also forms an integral part of the Department's induction and managerial courses. Ethnic minority women may also apply to undertake positive action training.

I have asked the chief executives of the DTI's executive agencies to respond direct to the hon. Member.

Letter from Jim Norton to Ms Diane Abbott, dated 14 October 1996:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply on behalf of the Radiocommunications Agency to your Parliamentary Question.

The Radiocommunications Agency employs 16 women from ethnic minorities. All are in the Administration and Secretarial Groups which cover typists and secretaries, administration and executive staff.

The Radiocommunications Agency's Equal Opportunities Policy Statement and Programme of Action underpin our commitment as an Equal Opportunities employer. As such, all advertised posts are open to applicants from the ethnic minorities. The managers involved in the selection and promotion procedures are fully trained in equal opportunities to ensure fairness and impartiality. Indeed, at present, all of our staff are receiving training in equal opportunities.

As part of the Agency's Training and Development Strategy, appropriate training is provided to help staff develop and prepare for career opportunities. Such training is available to all staff in the Agency.

Letter from John S. Holden to Ms Dianne Abbott, dated 14 October 1996:

You recently tabled a Parliamentary Question for the President of the Board of Trade on ethnic minority women employed within DTI and its agencies. I am responding as Chief Executive of Companies House.

30 women members of staff have identified themselves as being of ethnic minority origin. Their grades are as follows:

Grade	Number
EO	1
AO	8
AA	9
SGB2	11
Total	30

Companies House is fully committed to the principles of equal opportunity and to recruiting and promoting on merit.

We are training all staff, including managers, on the anti-discrimination legislation and Companies House policy in this area.

The Agency monitors the recruitment, development and promotion of ethnic minority staff, men and women, to enhance awareness and equality of treatment.

Letter from Peter Joyce to Ms Diane Abbott, dated 14 October 1996:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply to your question about the employment of women from ethnic minorities in The Insolvency Service.

At 19 July 1996, The Insolvency Service employed on a permanent basis 86 female staff recorded as of ethnic minority origin in the following grade levels:

Senior Civil Service: 0

SEO-Grade 6 level: 2

HEO level: 6

EO level: 12

AA level: 43

Staff within The Service responsible for recruitment exercises are trained and certificated in selection procedures and techniques. Equal opportunities awareness, including best practice in the avoidance of unfair discrimination, forms an integral part of staff recruitment and promotion panel training.

The Service is also responsible for internal promotions of staff up to Grade 6 level and each panel includes a member of staff from The Service's Personnel Section.

To encourage the employment and career development of women of all ethnic origins, The Service offers a career break scheme, part-time working, flexible working hours and job-sharing where it is possible to do so.

Letter from J. C. Octon to Ms Diane Abbott, dated 14 October 1996:

In the absence of the Chief Executive I am replying for the Patent Office to your Parliamentary Question to the President of the Board of Trade about the employment of women from ethnic minorities.

The Patent Office currently employs fewer than five women of ethnic minorities. I therefore regret that I cannot disclose the precise number or their grades for to do so would risk identification of the individuals concerned and thereby contravene the Code of Practice governing the use of data on ethnic origin.

The Patent Office has been reducing in numbers for some years and in consequence has carried out very little recruitment. However, we take our responsibilities in this field seriously. Our recruitment advertisements all state that we are an equal opportunities employer and that we welcome applications from men and women of all backgrounds and ethnic groups, including those with disabilities.

Promotion opportunities have also been rather limited in recent years but our aim is to ensure that the best candidate is selected. Our training procedures for promotion boards reflect the need to keep bias out of the selection and promotion processes and to ensure that equal opportunities legislation is respected.

Letter from Seton Bennett to Ms Diane Abbott, dated 14 October 1996:

The President of the Board of Trade has asked me to reply on behalf of the National Weights and Measures Laboratory to your question about the employment of women from ethnic minorities.

This Agency employs less than five people in the group specified in your question. I am therefore not able to provide a detailed response as to do so would contravene the Code of Practice on the use of ethnic origin data. The Code prescribes that data should not be disclosed in a form that would allow individuals to be identified.

With regard to the second part of your question, NWML follows the guidance given by the "Positive Action" initiative. In this respect, we advertise vacant posts to ensure that all those eligible to apply have the opportunity to do so, including ethnic minority women. The same policy applies to promotion opportunities.

Company Ownership

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what percentage of (a) manufacturing, (b) industrial production and (c) gross domestic product is produced by foreign-owned United Kingdom companies; and what are the equivalent figures for (a) other G7 countries and (b) other EU member states. [40247]

Mr. Lang: According to the annual census of production, 23 per cent. of UK manufacturing gross value added at factor cost was attributed to foreign-owned enterprises in 1992, the latest year for which data are available. Similar data are not available for industrial production or GDP for the UK. There are no similar international data for manufacturing, industrial production or GDP.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will place in the Library a list of all United Kingdom-registered companies which are owned or majority-owned by foreign individuals or businesses; and if he will specify the type of industry of each company so controlled. [40246]

Mr. Lang: Disclosure of individual shareholder nationality is not a requirement of the Companies Act and therefore Companies House has no knowledge of the nationality of individual shareholders. If the company is a subsidiary, the directors are obliged to disclose its ultimate parent company, its name and country of incorporation. This information could only be obtained from Companies House at disproportionate cost.

Low Pay

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he is taking to increase wage levels in respect of low-paid workers. [39999]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Dundee, East (Mr. McAllion) on 24 July 1996, Official Report, column 482.

Mobile Telephone Services (Contracts)

Mr. Dowd: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to eliminate unfair contracts between mobile telephone service providers and consumers; and if he will make a statement. [40195]

Mr. Ian Taylor: From 1 July 1995, the Unfair Terms in Consumer Contracts Regulations 1994 introduced a general concept of fairness into consumer contract law in the United Kingdom. Companies, including service providers in the mobile telecommunications industry, who deal with consumers and use standard form contracts must ensure that they do not use unfair terms. An unfair term is defined as one which, contrary to the requirement of good faith, causes a significant imbalance in the parties' rights and obligations under the contract to the detriment of the consumer. A consumer is not bound by a standard term if that term is unfair. Subject to this, service providers and dealers in the mobile phone industry are free to set their own contract conditions in competition with the many other companies in the mobile telephone market. Consumers are also free to shop around to find the best possible package which suits their mobile phone needs and requirements. The Federation of Communication Services, the mobile phone industry's main representative body, has also introduced a quality initiative "FCSQ" which provides significant safeguards for the consumer. Those in the industry who are members of this scheme display a "Q" quality mark, and consumers may wish to look for this mark when taking out a mobile phone contract.

Sasea Finance Ltd. and Sasea Intertrade

Mr. Gapes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what examination his inspectors have made of liquidators' reports on Finance Ltd. and Sasea Intertrade; what action his Department (a) has taken and (b) proposes to take as a result; and if he will make a statement [40169]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Sasea Finance Ltd. went into liquidation on 14 October 1992. The joint liquidators Messrs D. J. Pallen and S. G. Franklin lodged their report under the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986—CDDA—on 5 May 1994. The liquidators reported that the company's accounting records were maintained abroad and had been impounded by the Swiss authorities for the purpose of other inquiries. All the directors were foreign nationals resident abroad.

Sasea Intertrade Company Ltd. went into liquidation on 16 June 1994. Mr. Pallen was again appointed liquidator and he reported under the CDDA on 15 September 1994. Again the company's directors were all foreign nationals resident abroad and the company's records remained impounded by the Swiss authorities for other inquiries.

The reports were considered by the Department's disqualification unit, but in the absence of the companies' directors and of the companies' records the unit was not in a position further to investigate the conduct of the directors or able to form a view as to whether disqualification proceedings were appropriate in the public interest. As a result, no proceedings were instigated.

Mr. Gapes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what records have been examined by inspectors of his Department relating to the movement of the assets of Sasea Finance Ltd. and Sasea Intertrade immediately prior to their liquidation; what action his Department proposes to take as a result of its examination; and if he will make a statement. [40168]

Mr. Taylor: It is not my Department's policy to comment on individual companies.

Mr. Gapes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what claims and of what amounts were made by (a) Sasea Finance Ltd. and (b) Sasea Intertrade from the Export Credits Guarantee Department between 1985 and 1991. [40167]

Mr. Nelson: None. The ECGD has no record of having issued a guarantee to either Sasea Finance Ltd. or Sasea Intertrade 1985 and 1991.

Mr. Gapes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what claims and of what amounts were made by companies associated with directors of (a) Sasea Finance Ltd. and (b) Sasea Intertrade from the Export Credits Guarantee Department between 1985 and 1991. [40166]

Mr. Nelson: None. ECGD has no record of having issued a guarantee to any company associated with the directors of Sasea Finance Ltd. or Sasea Intertrade between 1985 and 1991.

Mr. Grapes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total deficiency at (a) Sasea Finance Ltd. and (b) Sasea Intertrade reported to his Department by the liquidators; and if he will list the principle creditors for each company. [40165]

Mr Taylor: Detailed statements of affairs of the companies were not submitted by the directors but the liquidators estimate that the total deficiency of Sasea Finance Ltd. was £184.9 million.

The main liabilities were to Sasea Holding and connected companies £70.7 million; trade and expense creditors £109 million and shareholders £5 million.

The estimated total deficiency of Sasea Intertrade Company Ltd. was £93.04 million. The main liabilities were to Sasea Holding £34.95 million, Sasea Trading Ltd. £45.86 million, non-group creditors £10.23 million and shareholders £2 million.

Hot Rolled Coil

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the latest figures by (a) cash value and (b) tonnage relating to the import and export of hot rolled coil. [40054]

Mr. Page: The information for 1995 is given in the following table:

	Imports	Exports
Value[1]	105.9	296.2
Volume[2]	276.2	982.3

Notes:
[1] £ million.
[2] Thousand tonnes.

Military and Civil Aircraft

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are the latest figures concerning the value of (a) military and (b) civil aircraft imported into and exported from the United Kingdom in the last available period. [40055]

Mr. Nelson: The information for 1995 is given in the following table:

UK aircraft imports and exports

£ million

	Imports	Exports
Civil	804	961
Other	38	183

Source:
DTI analysis of overseas trade statistics of the United Kingdom.

Export Credits (Oman)

Mr. Meacher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on what dates and for what amounts export credit guarantees given by the Export Credits Guarantee Department were drawn upon in relation to the construction of a university in Oman. [40164]

Mr. Nelson: The ECGD supported buyer credit loans are administered by the relevant agent bank which holds full details of advances made. While the ECGD has data about aggregate amounts which the bank declares as having been advanced and repaid, only part of the record for this particular case is available on the ECGD's current database. Research into the full information held by the ECGD could not be done, except at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade on what dates, and for what amounts export credit guarantees were given by the Export Credits Guarantee Department in relation to the construction of a university in Oman. [40172]

Mr. Nelson: The ECGD gave its guarantee for a US$235.19 million loan on 30 July 1982 for the construction of the University. The scope of this credit facility was extended to allow the financing of a teaching hospital which was within the terms of a contract variation order. A further loan of US$20.69 million was signed on 14 July 1988 for that purpose.

Electricity Market (Liberalisation)

Mr. Meacher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the implications for potential investors in, and users of, electricity generated by renewable technologies of the European Union decision to liberalise the electricity market. [40343]

Mr. Page: The introduction of competition in the European Union electricity market will offer opportunities for all investors in the electricity industry and produce benefits for consumers. The text agreed by Energy Ministers allows member states to give preferential treatment to generating installations using renewable energy sources.

Factory Closures

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many factories have closed in the United Kingdom since October 1989. [40272]

Mr. Nelson: The information requested is not available.

Banana Audio Terminals

Mr. Spellar: To ask the President to the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the regulation of the use of banana terminals with audio speakers. [40290]

Mr. Ian Taylor: It is not clear to which regulation the hon. Member refers. If he provides me with detailed information, my Department will look into the matter.

Air Quality Strategy Document

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when his Department intends to publish the air quality strategy document. [40058]

Mr. Page: A public consultation draft of the United Kingdom national air quality strategy was published by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment on 21 August.

Radio Spectrum

Mr. Timms: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the outcome of the Government's view of the mechanism which provides independent oversight of spectrum management. [40317]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The Government announced in their White Paper "Spectrum Management: into the 21st Century", Cm 3252, that, in the light of public consultation, they did not intended to set up a standing advisory committee on spectrum management issues at present. This position also reflects the views of the stage 3 spectrum review, conducted by Sir Colin Fielding CB, that such a committee would add little to the series of spectrum reviews, which the Government have agreed in principle to continue. The Radiocommunication Agency will keep under review the effectiveness of its consultative arrangements.

Coal Investments (Liabilities)

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement in respect of liabilities reverting to the Coal Authority following the collapse of Coal Investments and give the costs so far incurred in meeting those liabilities. [40335]

Mr. Page: This is a matter for the Coal Authority.

JET Fusion Project

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade (1) what expenditure the United Kingdom has made via UKAEA—AEA Technology for (a) the JET fusion project and (b) other fusion projects (i) in the last year and (ii) since the beginning of the European fusion programme; [40324]

(2) what expenditure the United Kingdom has made via Euratom for (a) the JET fusion project and (b) other fusion projects (i) in the last year and (ii) since the beginning of the European fusion programme. [40323]

Mr. Page: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave her on 13 June, Official Report, column 265.

Subsidence Claims

Ms Walley: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list for each year since June 1990 (a) the total number of subsidence claims lodged with British Coal and the Coal Authority; (b) the number currently outstanding and (c) the total amount paid in respect of such claims. [40334]

Mr. Page: The information requested is summarised in the following table. Figures are provided for financial years commencing from April 1990.

The data have been extracted from the annual reports on coal mining subsidence damage submitted to the Secretary of State by the Coal Authority—previously by British Coal—which are available in the Library of the House.

Questions	Years
	1990–91	1991–92	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95	1995–96
(a) Number of subsidence claims made in year	8,315	7,868	9,532	10,458	10,582	9,259
(b) Number of claims outstanding at year end	16,512	14,573	13,269	12,845	13,582	11,511
(c) Total amount paid in respect of such claims (£)	38,424,522	41,502,787	49,907,814	47,501,244	36,773,381	30,850,816

Departmental Press Office

Ms Hodge: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the cost assumed in the budget, of people employed full-time or part-time, to work on press and media in 1996–97.

Mr. John M. Taylor: For 1996–97, the pay budget for staff employed in the Press Office is £891,000.

TRANSPORT

Fishing Vessels

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what investigations his Department made into the registration of each of the fishing vessels Mar Azul and Mar Blanco owned by Messrs. Hooktowe of Ayr in respect of their (a) original builders and use, (b) previous owners, (c) previous registrations and (d) information relating to any de-commissioning grant authorised under the common fisheries policy. [39670]

Mr. Bowis: I have asked the chief executive of the Marine Safety Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from R. M. Bradley to Mr. Nigel Spearing, dated 24 July 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your question enquiring what investigations were made into the registration of the fishing vessels "Mar Azul" and "Mar Blanco" in respect of their (a) original builders and use, (b) previous owners, (c) previous registrations and (d) any information relating to any decommissioning grant authorised under the Common Fisheries Policy.

The following information was supplied on application for registration:

MAR AZUL

(a) Original Builder & Use

Astilleros De Santander SA, Spain.

Information on usage not required by the regulations and not known by the MSA.

(b) and (c) Previous Owners and Registrations

Vessel previously owned by Pesquerias Mar Azul SA and registered in Panama.

Vessel transferred to UK register on 27 October 1992 as owned by Benno Ltd of 292 Upper Street, Islington, London.

Vessel currently owned by Benno Ltd of Unit 1, Havens Head Business Park, The Docks, Milford Haven.

(d) Information on Decommissioning Grant

This information is not held by this Agency but by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

MAR BLANCO

(a) Original Builders and Use

Astilleros Del Atlanticos SA, Spain.

Information on usage not required by the regulations and not know by the MSA.

(b) and (c) Previous Owners and Registrations

Vessel previously owned by Pesquerios Mar Azul SA and registered in Panama.

Vessel transferred to UK register on 27 October 1992 as owned by Berga Ltd of 292 Upper Street, Islington, London.

Vessel currently owned by Berga Ltd of Unit 1, Havens Head Business Park, The Docks, Milford Haven.

(d) Information on Decommissioning Grant

This information is not held by this Agency but by the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

North London Line

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he next plans to visit the north London line. [40110]

Mr. Bowis: My right hon. Friend has no current plans to do so.

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what statutory responsibilities he has in relation to plans to (a) modernise, (b) otherwise develop and (c) extend the use of the north London line by Railtrack. [40109]

Mr. Bowis: There are currently no plans to develop the north London line, following the recent completion of the electrification works to enable Eurostar services to run north of London. In the event of any future proposal to extend the infrastructure, the Secretary of State would be called upon to consider whether powers should be granted under the Transport and Works Act 1992 to enable the development to proceed.

In addition, under the Railway and Other Transport Systems (Approval of Works, Plant and Equipment) Regulations 1994, the Health and Safety Executive, acting for the Secretary of State, is required to approve any proposal to bring into use any new or altered railway works.

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many applications he has received for consents by Railtrack with regard to the north London line. [40108]

Mr. Bowis: None. Railtrack's electrification work on the north London line, to enable Eurostar services to run north of London, was carried out under contractual arrangements between the company and the works contractors. That work is now complete.

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he next plans to meet the board of Railtrack or its representatives in relation to the north London line. [40106]

Mr. Bowis: There are no current plans for such a meeting.

Railtrack

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what statutory responsibilities he has for the environmental impact of the activities of Railtrack. [40107]

Mr. Watts: Railtrack has, as required under the terms of its network licence, provided the Rail Regulator with a statement of its policy for protecting the environment from the effects of its licensed activities, together with operational objectives and management arrangements for giving effect to the policy. The policy, operational objectives and management arrangements are subject to review as appropriate.

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he last received a report on the consultative mechanisms utilised by Railtrack in furtherance of its statutory powers. [40111]

Mr. Watts: Railtrack's network licence requires it to comply with arrangements involving consultative committees. Oversight of these arrangements is the responsibility of the Rail Regulator.

Mr. Boateng: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to review the definition of track maintenance in relation to the activities of Railtrack. [40112]

Mr. Watts: None.

Road Building

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport in respect of which roads in the national roads programme his Department has completed a review of possible alternatives to road building. [40061]

Mr. Watts: Before entering the national roads programme, every scheme is assessed to ensure both that it is the most practical and cost-effective method of dealing with the identified problem, and that it would be consistent with current policies. Once in the programme, schemes are subject to public scrutiny both at a public consultation and later before an independent inspector at a public inquiry. At both these stages, alternatives to road building can be suggested and will be objectively assessed.

Electronic Retuning Equipment

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the potential environmental impact of the use of electronic retuning equipment to achieve maximum power from cars; and if he will make a statement. [40348]

Mr. Bowis: Electronic engine management chips containing a revised engine calibration to maximise power output are available. This practice is known as "hot-chipping". We have no data on how hot-chipping may affect engine emissions.

However, it is an offence under regulation 61 of the Road Vehicles (Construction and Use) Regulations 1986 to use or cause or permit a motor vehicle to be used on a road if, as a result of an alteration to the propulsion unit or exhaust system of the vehicle, it fails to meet any of the specific emission standards in that regulation to which the vehicle was originally built.

Test Stations

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many MOT stations are registered with the vehicle inspectorate; and what has been the figure in each of the last five years; [40353]

(2) how many inspections of MOT stations were conducted in each of the last five years; [40355]

(3) how many prosecutions there have been in each of the last five years against MOT stations for illegally issuing MOT certificates; [40350]

(4) how many vehicle inspectorate staff are employed to check that MOT stations comply with the requirements of the test; and what has been the figure in each of the last five years; [40354]

(5) what is his policy for dealing with MOT stations which are found to have passed unfit vehicles; and if he will make a statement; [40356]

(6) what estimate he has made of the number of vehicles used on the road (a) without an MOT certificate and (b) with an illegal MOT certificate. [40352]

Mr. Bowis: I have asked the chief executive of the Vehicle Inspectorate Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ron Oliver to Mr. David Chidgey, dated 14 October 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your questions on:

(i) the number of MOT stations registered with the Vehicle Inspectorate (VI) for the last 5 years;

(ii) the number of inspections of MOT stations conducted in the last 5 years;

(iii) the number of prosecutions against MOT stations for illegally issuing MOT certificates;

(iv) the number of Vehicle Inspectorate staff employed by VI to check that MOT stations comply with the requirements of the test for the last 5 years;

(v) an estimate of the number of vehicles used on the road a) without an MOT certificate and b) with an illegal MOT certificate; and

vi) the policy for dealing with MOT stations which have passed unfit vehicles.

Details of the number of MOT stations authorised, the number of MOT station standards control inspections for the last 5 years, and the number of VI examiners employed to check that MOT stations comply with testing requirements over the past 2 years, are provided in the attached tables. The numbers of VI examiners employed on MOT supervisory activities before 1994/95 can only be provided at disproportionate cost.

There are no precise figures on MOT evasion or the use of vehicles with an illegal MOT certificate. It is likely that the level of MOT evasion is similar to the level of VED evasion since a valid MOT test certificate must be produced at the time of VED relicensing.

Procedures for dealing with MOT stations which fail to comply with MOT standards are outlined in the "MOT Testing Guide" available from HMSO bookshops. Depending on the severity of the case and the past history of the test station, action can range from advice and formal warnings through to the removal of the authorisation to test vehicles for up to 5 years. These sanctions are effective, and it is therefore seldom necessary to bring prosecution proceedings.

Number of authorised examiners

	Private garages	Others
1991–92	17,081	470
1992–93	17,460	463
1993–94	17,362	451
1994–95	18,421	453
1995–96	18,456	438

"Others" includes test stations operated by post offices, designated local authorities, the Crown, and some police authorities.

Number of vehicle inspectorate enforcement vehicle examiners (average staff in post) employed on MOT standards control activity

These figures exclude overtime and any training or project work that may have been undertaken directly connected to the MOT Scheme.

1995–96: 97.2

1994–95: 97.6

Number of inspections conducted on MOT stations

1991–92: 40,976

1992–93: 38,827

1993–94: 42,446

1994–95: 43,785

Electrically Assisted Pedal Cycles

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he authorised the publication of his Department's proposals to extend the definition of electrically assisted pedal cycles which are exempt from the definition of motor vehicle found in the Road Traffic Acts; if he will list (a) the names of the members of the working group of the vehicle standards and engineering division of his Department and the names of the organisations which they represent and (b) the nature and number of the bodies or persons to whom the letter of 21 August, which set out options for such extension, was distributed. [40446]

Mr. Bowis: The Government have made no such proposals. They have, however, sought views in this area. I authorised publication of this consultation document on 19 August. The working group was not an internal departmental working group. Representatives attended from the following outside organisations: the Electric Vehicle Association, the Motorcycle Industry Association, W. R. Pashley Ltd., Sinclair Research Ltd., Citibike Manufacturing Company Ltd. and TGA Electric Leisure. In addition, there were officials from the Department's vehicle standards and engineering division; road safety division; transport policy unit; deregulation unit; local transport policy division; and driver and vehicle licensing policy division; and from the Department of Trade and Industry's vehicle division and deregulation division.

Approximately 450 organisations and individuals were sent a copy of the consultation document. They included road safety organisations, local authorities, associations, bodies representing the motor vehicle and pedal cycle industries, user groups, the police and transport consultants. They also included all the people who attended the forum on cycling policy organised by the Department on 10 July.

Rail Services (North-East)

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what the Government's timetable is for franchising British Rail's Regional Railways' north-east passenger services. [40240]

Mr. Watts: The Franchising Director issued an information memorandum for the Regional Railways North East franchise on 23 September on which pre-qualifiers for the franchise can base their indicative, non-binding bids. The deadline to lodge indicative bids is 24 October. Formal invitations to tender will be issued later on in the franchising process. The Franchising Director expects to award the franchise in spring 1997.

Bidders have been asked in their indications of interest to consider the options for older rolling stock which is nearing life expiry, and are invited to bring forward self-financing proposals for upgrading the trans-Pennine express services.

Coach and Bus Accidents

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) deaths (b) serious injuries and (c) minor injuries were caused to coach and bus passengers in each of the last 10 years excluding motorway accidents; and what percentage of the passengers in each category were standing. [40308]

Mr. Bowis: The numbers of bus and coach passenger casualties in non-motorway accidents in Great Britain are as follows for each of the last 10 years, together with the proportion who were standing in each injury category.

Year	Death	Percentage standing	Serious injuries	Percentage standing	Minor injuries	Percentage standing
1986	22	36	757	31	8,128	35
1987	12	42	727	33	7,600	32
1988	14	36	793	34	7,996	32
1989	18	11	757	33	8,627	31
1990	16	19	682	31	8,361	32

1993	22	18	610	30	7,845	28
1994	19	16	703	29	8,395	25
1995	21	24	699	26	7,643	27

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many (a) deaths, (b) serious injuries and (c) minor injuries were caused to coach and bus passengers in motorway accidents in each of the last 10 years; and what percentage of the passengers in each category were standing. [40470]

Mr. Bowis: The numbers of bus and coach passenger casualties in motorway accidents in Great Britain are as follows for each of the last 10 years, together with the proportion who were standing in each injury category.

Year	Deaths	Percentage standing	Serious	Percentage standing	Minor	Percentage standing
1986	1	100	24	13	92	4
1987	3	0	30	3	187	2
1988	0	0	26	0	101	5

Bus and Coach Safety

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated regarding the safety of standing passengers on buses and coaches; and if he will make a statement. [40309]

Mr. Bowis: The Department has commissioned research to examine the safety implications of EU proposals for harmonised bus construction. Safety of standing passengers will form one element of this work. The programme is planned to conclude in mid 1997.

Routemaster Buses

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement regarding the future of Routemaster buses. [40300]

Mr. Bowis: As long as Routemaster buses remain mechanically sound and meet the appropriate standards which apply to all public service vehicles, there is no reason why operators should not continue to keep them in service.

Motorists (Mobile Telephones)

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many motorists have been (a) reported, (b) prosecuted and (c) convicted for using a hand-held mobile telephone while driving; and if he will make a statement. [39931]

Mr. Bowis: Using a hand-held mobile telephone while driving is not an offence, but a driver doing so may well be prosecuted for careless or inconsiderate driving or for failing to exercise proper control of a vehicle. Information on how many cases relate to the use of hand-held mobile telephones could be obtained only from original court records and only at disproportionate cost.

East London Line

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what plans he has to ensure that a co-ordinator is appointed to supervise the necessary preparatory work on the proposals for the southern extensions of the east London line; [40184]

(2) how many companies have expressed an interest in bidding for construction of the east London line extensions; and if he will name them; [40186]

(3) what is the potential number of passengers that his Department estimates could transfer from the roads to a southern extension of the east London underground line to East Croydon, travelling (a) northwards and (b) southwards; [40193]

(4) what percentage of the east London line extensions costs he expects to be from public funds; [40187]

(5) what discussions he has had with the Deputy Prime Minister regarding the significance of the possible southern extension of the east London line with regard to access to the Millennium site at Greenwich, including access from Gatwick airport. [40197]

Mr. Bowis: Extensions to the east London line are a matter for London Underground Ltd., which is examining the possibilities of a scheme under the private finance initiative for northern and southern extensions. This work includes assessing demand for, and costs of, the possible routes of a southern extension, and consultations with the private sector on the scope for private finance. Some 40 companies have responded to those consultations, expressing interest in the project. I understand, however, that so far it seems likely that a significant proportion of the costs of any such scheme might need to be met from public fund; LUL will need to consider any proposals alongside their other spending priorities.

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects the east London line to reopen. [40185]

Mr. Bowis: I understand that London Underground is planning to reopen the east London line next summer.

Traffic Increases (Millennium Site)

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what increase in road traffic in terms of passenger numbers, car journeys and road freight through the trunk routes of south-east London his Department estimates will occur (a) during the construction of the Millennium site at Greenwich and (b) following its opening; [40192]

(2) what increase in rail and road traffic in terms of (a) passenger numbers and (b) car journeys from Gatwick airport his Department estimates will result from the Millennium site at Greenwich once it is opened; [40190]

(3) what increase in rail and road traffic in terms of (a) passenger numbers and (b) car journeys from Waterloo station his Department estimates will result from the construction of the Millennium site at Greenwich. [40191]

Mr. Bowis: The Department of Transport does not have this information. Forecasts of construction and visitor traffic levels for the exhibition are being prepared by consultants on behalf of the Millennium Commission.

Disabled People

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what plans he has to improve transport facilities for the disabled. [39964]

Mr. Bowis: The transport provisions of the Disability Discrimination Act will enable us to make regulations to require new buses, trains and taxis to be fully accessible to disabled people, including wheelchair users. Discussions on the shape of those regulations are already underway with the transport industries and the disabled persons transport advisory committee. Full public consultation will also take place.

The Department's mobility unit has recently published its annual overview which sets out in more detail the work which is going on in this area. As in previous years copies have been sent to hon. Members.

School Buses

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he plans to take to ensure that school buses are clearly recognisable. [39962]

Mr. Bowis: School buses are already required by the road vehicles lighting regulations to display a "school bus" sign on journeys to and from school. The Department has no evidence to suggest that these measures are not effective.

London Commuter Services

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport by how much investment in London commuter services is planned to increase over the next year. [39966]

Mr. Bowis: I cannot anticipate the outcome of this year's Budget, which will be a factor in determining the funds available for investment by public sector operators, including London Transport. Substantial investment is planned by private companies now running trains in the former Network SouthEast area: Prism intends to replace two thirds of the London, Tilbury and Southend rolling stock by 1999; South Eastern plans to spend £400 million on a modern fleet for its Kent services, London and South Coast plans a major refurbishment of its rolling stock and the newly-franchised Chiltern line has already placed an order for new rolling stock.

Motor Vehicles

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the current number of licensed motor vehicles on the roads; and what was the number in 1986. [39961]

Mr. Bowis: The information is as follows:

	Thousands
	1986	1995
Cars	7,388	21,395
Taxis[1]	26	33
Motor cycles	1,176	702
Three wheelers	60	31
Light goods	1,670	1,949
Goods	634	556
and coaches	149	153
Agricultural vehicles[2]	340	282
Other vehicles[3]	256	268
Total	21,699	25,369

[1] These include mainly custom-built "black cab" design vehicles.
[2] Includes various types of harvesters, work trucks and mowing machines etc.
[3] Examples include ambulances, hire engines, road rollers, road construction vehicles, street cleaning.

Rail Safety

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much Government money is allocated to improving safety on the rail network over the planning period. [39965]

Mr. Watts: Since April 1994, Government support for the railway takes the form of grants paid by the Franchising Director. These grants enable the railway operators to meet their expenditure requirements, including those with safety benefits. Safety expenditure by the railway has not been separately identified since 1992–93, because the finance and resources to manage safety have been fully integrated with other management decisions and most investment includes a safety element.

Rail Privatisation (York)

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the date of privatisation of all the York-based British Rail businesses which have been privatised to date, the number of employees in the business at the time of privatisation and the amount of money received for the business; and if he will specify which further York-based British Rail businesses are in the programme for privatisation, the number of employees in each of these businesses, the expected date for disposal and the expected cash receipt from the disposal. [40241]

Mr. Watts: The following British Rail businesses, whose headquarters were based in York, have been sold or franchised as at 1 October 1996.

Business sold or franchised	Date sale completed or franchise awarded	Gross proceeds (£ million)	Employees in whole business at date of sale/franchise award
Civil Engineering Design Group York	15 September 1995	3	159
Eastern Track Renewals Company Ltd.	15 March 1996	11	604
InterCity East Coast Franchise	28 March 1996	[1]—	2,900
Northern Infrastructure Maintenance Company Ltd.	18 June 1996	9	520

[1] Franchises are awarded as contracts to run passenger train services in return for the payment of support, where necessary, and may not generate receipts. Support for the InterCity east coast franchise will reduce to nil by the final year of the seven-year franchise period.

The Franchising Director aims to award the Regional Railways North East franchise in spring 1997. The number of staff was 2,981 at 31 March 1996.

Leicester A46–A47 Link

Mr. Vaz: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport which office of his Department will analyse the additional evidence on induced traffic for the Leicester A46–A47 link from Leicestershire county council. [40127]

Mr. Watts: Additional information received from Leicestershire county council in relation to induced traffic on the proposed Leicester A46–A47 link, will be evaluated initially by officials, acting on my behalf, in the local authority orders section, Newcastle upon Tyne. They have in turn sought expert advice, from within the Department, as required.

Train Operators

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much has been paid to each train operator by the franchising director in order to allow them to meet supplementary access charges. [39934]

Mr. Watts: Supplementary access charges determined by the Rail Regulator and payable by train operators to Railtrack in 1995–96 and 1996–97 are detailed in the table. The Franchising Director has effectively funded all these either through support to passenger rail services paid to British Rail or to franchisees. Where the supplements were known before the final bids they are a component of the franchise payment. Where the supplements were not known they are paid as a pass-through supplement in addition to the franchise payment.

M66

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list when each contract for the M66 Denton to Middleton motorway (a) was and (b) is expected to be let, the cost of each contract, when each contract is planned to be completed, when the completed road will open and what steps he is taking to ensure contract does not delay the opening of the road. [40372]

Mr. Watts: The M66 Manchester outer ring road scheme is split into four main contracts. There was also an advance work contract to construct a rail bridge.

Contract 1 is a three year contract which was let in March 1996. The tender sum was £101,878,528. The contract is currently expected to be finished by its target completion date of spring 1999.

Contract 2 is a two-year contract which was let in August 1994. The tender sum was £48,930,425. Problems have occurred during construction which have resulted in delays. Completion is now anticipated late in 1997.

Contract 3 tenders have not yet been invited for this two year contract. The tender estimate is £80,000,000. The timing of this contract is under consideration but the aim, subject to availability of funds, is to have the whole scheme completed in 1999.

Contract 4 was a two year contract let in May 1993. The tender sum was £18,229,262. It was completed in February 1996 and is now open to traffic.

The advance works contract was for a rail bridge. It was let in March 1993. The tender sum was £2,044,174 and the contract was completed autumn 1994.

BREL (Asbestos-related Disease)

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many former employees of British Rail Engineering Ltd., York carriageworks, have submitted claims for compensation for contracting an asbestos-related disease; and, of these, how many have (a) died and (b) had their claims settled; what is the average length of time these claims have taken to settle; and what action British Rail is taking to speed up the settlement of such claims. [40234]

Mr. Watts: Forty-seven former employees submitted claims and 27 have been settled. Information on the number of people who have died since submitting claims is not available, as some may have died after their claims were settled. The average time to settle claims is 2.1 years. The time taken to settle claims is, to a large extent, beyond the control of Railway Claims Ltd. as claims can be processed only when all the relevant information is received from the claimant's solicitor.

Railtrack (Oasis Concert)

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will instruct the health and safety inspectorate to investigate the safety implications of Railtrack's decision in respect of the running of trains through Stevenage station during the weekend of the Oasis concert at Knebworth; and if he will make a statement. [40349]

Mr. Watts: The Health and Safety Executive's railway inspectorate is already investigating incidents which occurred at Stevenage railway station on 10 and 11 August 1996. The investigation will consider, among other issues, whether there have been any breaches of relevant legislation.

Office of Passenger Rail Franchising

Mr. Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport by how much the grant to the Office of Passenger Rail Franchising has changed since the figure published in the Government's expenditure plans for transport in March 1996. [39933]

Mr. Watts: Parliament voted the Office of Passenger Rail Franchising £1,651,588k in the supply estimates for class V, vote 7 passenger rail services which is the figure set out in table 1 of the transport report. Any changes in funding will be through the normal parliamentary supply procedures.

Road and Rail Freight

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what studies his Department has undertaken to estimate the comparative environmental cost of transporting freight by (a) road and (b) rail. [39950]

Mr. Watts: As part of the Government's commitment to ensuring that transport users pay their full costs, the Department is at the forefront of research trying to place monetary values on the environmental impact of transport. The economics of environmental valuation is still in its infancy and the complexities involved mean that it is not yet possible to derive robust values. However, the Department does take into account the environmental impacts of policies and projects. The Department makes use of freight facilities grants and track access grants to encourage the transport of freight by rail rather than road, which amongst other things recognises the environmental benefits of rail versus road in particular circumstances.

European Airlines

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what information he collects regarding European airlines with special reference to the percentage share of slots each airline has at its principal base or hub. [40155]

Mr. Bowis: None. This is a matter for the slot co-ordinator at each of the airports concerned.

Driving Test

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what steps his Department is taking to ensure that theory test venues are within a readily accessible distance from driving test centres; [40262]

(2) what criteria his Department uses to determine whether a driving test centre has its own theory test venue. [40263]

Mr. Bowis: Theory test centres have been located balancing costs, travelling distances for candidates and the frequency of test sessions.

Tests are available:

within five miles in districts (usually town or cities) with a population density of greater than equal to 1,250 persons per square kilometre;

within 40 miles in sparsely populated districts with a population density of less than 100 persons per square kilometre; within 20 miles in other districts where the population density lies between these limits.

While it is desirable that theory test centres are readily accessible by public transport, the quality of test routes is important for driving test centres. Therefore, we have no policy of co-locating theory test centres with driving test centres, although population centres often have both.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations his Department has received concerning the establishment of a venue in Huddersfield for the theory test element of the driving test. [40201]

Mr. Bowis: We have received two letters on this issue, one from my hon. Friend the Member for Colne Valley (Mr. Riddick) and one from a member of the public.

Airports (Baggage Screening)

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what percentage of aircraft passengers' hold baggage is not screened by security at (a) Gatwick airport, (b) Heathrow airport and (c) Stansted airport. [39932]

Mr. Bowis : None.

Oil Pollution(Braer Incident)

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the implications for environmental protection policy for coastal waters of the decision of the Court of Session, announced on 16 September, on compensation claims made by Shetland islanders for oil pollution contamination arising from the Braer tanker accident of January 1993. [40393]

Mr Bowis: No decision was announced by the Court of Session on 16 September in relation to compensation claims arising out of the Braer incident.

Statutory Instruments

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what environmental benefits he expects to accrue from the coming into force of Statutory Instrument No. 1946, the Harbour Works (Assessment of Environmental Effects) (Amendment) Regulations 1996. [40476]

Mr. Bowis: These regulations simply clarify the existing procedures following discussions with the European Commission.

Drink Driving

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport in how many fatal motor accidents in each of the last three years the driver responsible has been found to have between 50mg and 80mg of alcohol in his blood. [40297]

Mr. Bowis: The numbers of vehicle drivers and riders killed, and found to have from 50mg to 80mg of alcohol in their blood are as follows for the three most recent years for which statistics are available: 32 in 1992, 23 in 1993 and 25 in 1994.

Statistics for blood alcohol levels are available only for fatal casualties and hence no data is available for fatal accidents in which the driver or rider was not killed. No information is available relating to whether the deceased driver was responsible for the accident.

Vehicle Tax Evasion

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many cases of vehicle tax evasion were detected in the last three years; and how many (a) prosecutions and (b) convictions resulted. [40295]

Mr. Bowis: The number of vehicle excise duty offence reports received by the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency in the last three years was 5.2 million. These led to 657,000 evaders being successfully prosecuted, with a further 753,000 paying penalties out of court. Many of the remaining reports were duplication for the same vehicle. In other cases, it turned out that an offence had not been committed, or that enforcement action had encouraged relicensing, making any further action unnecessary.

Cyclists (Pavements)

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he intends to take to prevent adult cyclists from riding their bicycles on pavements in central London. [39957]

Mr. Bowis: It is an offence to cycle on the footway—the pavement adjacent to the carriageway—in London. As elsewhere in the country, enforcement in London is a matter for the Metropolitan police.

London Underground (Safety)

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much money is allocated in the current financial year to improving safety standards on the London Underground. [39960]

Mr. Bowis: Decisions on investment priorities are a matter for London Underground Ltd. It is impossible to estimate how much money is spent each year on improving safety standards because very many projects include some element of safety-related work.

London Underground (Congestion)

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on his plans to relieve current levels of congestion on London Underground. [39963]

Mr. Bowis: London Underground has in hand a range of measures which will help to relieve congestion, including increases in train frequencies and station improvements. Implementation of these plans is an operational matter for London Underground. Longer term improvements will come from major investments in new lines when current projects such as the Jubilee line extension and the Heathrow progress are completed.

Ethnic Minorities

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many women from ethnic minorities are employed by his Department and its agencies; at what grade; and what measures he has taken to encourage the (a) recruitment, (b) employment and (c) promotion of women from ethnic minorities within his Department and its agencies. [39905]

Mr. Bowis: Two hundred and eighty, as at 8 October 1996.

The information requested by grade cannot be provided without identifying individual members of staff which would be in breach of good confidentiality procedure. Staff are recruited on the basis of ability and irrespective of sex or race. The Department advertises all internal vacancies, open competitions and promotion on an equal opportunity basis.

River Transport (London)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has received concerning public river transport on the Thames in central London as an integral part of London's existing public transport system; and what consequent action he is planning. [39677]

Mr. Bowis: I recently met the hon. Member and my hon. Friend the Member for Romford (Sir M. Neubert) with representatives of the group, Transport on Water.

Earlier this year, London First published "The Business Case for a Passenger Transport Service on the River Thames". Building on this report, the cross river partnership is examining the potential for a public transport service on the Thames and possible requirement for new piers. I look forward to the results of the cross river integrated public transport study in the new year.

I support the concept of passenger services on the Thames, but it is for the private sector to develop and operate these services. The Port of London Authority recently granted access to some of its piers to three companies that have expressed an interest in starting new passenger services on the Thames. This announcement is encouraging.

Drug and Alcohol Screening

Mr. Dykes: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what statutory requirements exist for compulsory drug and alcohol screening for employees of transport companies; and what steps he is taking to encourage drug and alcohol screening amongst employees engaged in safety critical work. [39878]

Mr. Bowis: There is no statutory requirement for drug and alcohol screening of employees of transport companies. It is a criminal offence to drive or be in charge of a motor vehicle or work on the railways in a safety-related capacity while under the influence of drink or drugs or above the permitted alcohol limit. It is also an offence to act as a member of the crew of an aircraft, an aircraft maintenance engineer or an air traffic controller while impaired through the influence of drink or drugs.

Railway operators may also be found guilty, where an employee has misused alcohol or drugs, if they fail to exercise "due diligence", which, in the Government's view, requires them to undertake some form of screening. A railway group standard sets out the rules and procedures for the screening of safety critical staff where there is suspicion that drug or alcohol may have been a factor in an accident, near miss, or in making an employee unfit for work.

Constituency Visits

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many visits (i) he and (ii) his Ministers made to (a) the Newbury constituency and (b) other constituencies in the last 12 months. [39869]

Sir George Young: In the 12 months to July 1996, Transport Ministers have visited some 476 constituencies on official business. None of these were to Newbury.

War Memorials

Mr. Cash: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his policy with respect to the removal of or change of site of war memorials (a) throughout the country and (b) in the district local authority area of Stafford district council on the grounds of (i) planning and (ii) movement of traffic around the war memorial. [40007]

Mr. Bowis: The removal or change of site of war memorials is essentially a matter for the local planning authority concerned. Before reaching their decision on whether to give planning permission, they are required to consider any representations received and to consult the local traffic authority, where this is a different authority, if the removal or re-siting of a memorial is likely to have traffic implications for the area. Where a war memorial is a listed building, listed building consent would also be required from the Secretary of State for the Environment. The Secretary of State for Transport has no role to play in the process.

SCOTLAND

Multiple Births

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many sets of (a) twins, (b) triplets, (c) quadruplets, (d) quintuplets and (e) sextuplets were born in Scotland in each year since 1990; how many maternities there were in each year; and how many multiple births in each category were conceived as a result of (i) in vitro fertilisation, (ii) gamete intra-fallopian transfer and (iii) other forms of assisted conception. [39971]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information is as follows:

Type of birth	1990	1991	1992	1993	1994	1995
Twins:
2 live	711	682	790	751	762	780
1 live, 1 stillbirth	15	22	11	25	13	31
2 stillbirth	5	5	6	4	3	5
Triplets:
3 live	14	18	15	10	16	27
2 live, 1 stillbirth	2	4	—	—	—	1
1 live, 2 stillbirth	—	2	—	—	—	1
Quadruplets:
4 live	1	1	—	—	—	1
3 live, 1 stillbirth	—	1	—	—	1	—
Quintuplets:
Sextuplets	—	—	—	—	—	—
Number of maternities	65,556	66,630	65,307	62,946	61,224	59,271

Information on the number of multiple births in Scotland attributed to assisted conception is not available. Some information on these matters is published in the annual reports of the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority, copies of which are available in the Library.

Criminal Cases

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many criminal cases were dealt with by the procurators fiscal in each of the last 10 years; how many were marked no proceedings in each of these years; and if he will make a statement. [40176]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The number of criminal reports received by procurators fiscal, and the number of reports marked "no proceedings", are as follows:

	Criminal reports received	Cases marked no proceedings
1985	339,317	65,580
1986	343,488	71,228
1987	338,739	59,019
1988	335,304	52,497
1989	358,960	45,092
1990	357,704	40,096
1991	375,298	35,434
1992	353,776	34,345
1993	283,145	41,120
1994	268,722	40,614
1995	259,680	37,553

Blind People

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will introduce a Scottish-wide free travel concession scheme for registered blind people; and if he will make a statement. [40032]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: In the light of representations made by organisations for the blind and disabled, my right hon. Friend last year sought the views of the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities about the possibility of COSLA either organising a national scheme for the blind and disabled, or alternatively a scheme which was restricted in scope to blind people only. COSLA has now established a task group to investigate the practicalities and costs of introducing a national scheme for the blind in the first instance. The task group has undertaken to inform the Scottish Office of its findings and we await its conclusions.

Court Waiting Times

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the average length of time in criminal cases between the charging of a suspect and the subsequent bringing of the case before (a) district courts, (b) sheriff courts and (c) high courts in the last year for which figures are available. [40174]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The information requested is not readily available. In summary cases, the average period between the police charging a suspect and the case calling in court will depend on the time taken by the police to submit a report to the procurator fiscal, the time taken by the procurator fiscal to serve a complaint on the accused and the availability of a court diet. If the police detain the accused, he must be brought before the court on the next lawful day. If the accused is released for report, the time taken to submit the report will vary according to the complexity of the case and other factors. The Association of Chief Police Officers in Scotland has calculated that between 50 and 75 per cent. of such reports are submitted within 28 days. My noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate informs me that, between June 1995 and June 1996, the average period between receipt of a report by the procurator fiscal and service of a complaint was 5.1 weeks in the sheriff court and five weeks in the district court. In custody cases, the complaint will be served on the accused on the same day as the report is received by the procurator fiscal. The information requested is not available for solemn cases prosecuted in the sheriff or High Courts.

Procurator Fiscal Service

Ms Roseanna Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total budget for procurator fiscal offices in each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [40202]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Expenditure on salaries and running costs for the procurator fiscal service in each of the last 10 years was as follows:

Year	Amount £000
1986–87	12,589
1987–88	13,678
1988–89	14,947
1989–90	16,536

Year	Amount £000
1990–91	18,403
1991–92	20,821
1992–93	22,119
1993–94	25,138
1994–95	25,607
1995–96	27,799

Ms Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total spending on staff salaries in procurators fiscal offices in each of the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [40175]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Total spending on staff salaries in the procurator fiscal service in each of the last 10 years was as follows:

Year	Amount £000
1986–87	9,331
1987–88	10,046
1988–89	11,202
1989–90	12,461
1990–91	14,365
1991–92	15,727
1992–93	16,888
1993–94	19,842
1994–95	20,332
1995–96	21,089

Ms Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many (i) procurators fiscal and (ii) deputy procurators fiscal have been employed in each district in each year since 1985; and if he will make a statement. [40203]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The total number of procurators fiscal, assistant procurators fiscal, senior deputes and deputes employed in each district since 1985 is as follows:

	1985	1986	1987	1988	1989	1990	1991	1992	1993	1994	1995	1996

There is a procurator fiscal for each of the districts listed. However in Dornoch, Kirkwall, Tain, Duns, Peebles, Rothesay, Lochmaddy and Kirkcudbright the procurator fiscal also has responsibility for a neighbouring district.

Small Claims Procedure

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will increase the maximum sum in respect of which claims can be taken to the sheriff court under the small claims procedure to bring it into line with English practice; and if he will make a statement. [40235]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Fixing the small claims limit in Scotland is a matter for the Lord Advocate. Although the Lord Advocate has no plans at present to increase the small claims limit, he does keep the matter under review constantly.

TREASURY

Ecological Sustainability

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will request from his officials a paper setting out the implications for the Treasury of a long-term shift in Government policy towards greater prominence to ecological sustainability. [40060]

Mr. Oppenheim: The Government are already fully committed to achieving sustainable development. This means ensuring that policy decisions take appropriate account of the environment alongside economic and other considerations. Our 1994 sustainable development strategy assessed the many challenges facing the UK over the next 20 years if we are to achieve that goal. Progress to date is reported in the annual Environment White Papers, which are available in the House of Commons Library.

Climate Change

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what mechanisms and procedures he has set up within the Treasury to assess the implications of the Department of the Environment's review of the potential effects of climate change in the United Kingdom. [40069]

Mr. Oppenheim: The degree of future climate change that is now inevitable will have implications for a broad range of policies across government. My officials are fully involved in inter-departmental discussions on climate change.

Abortions

Mr. Merchant: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give a breakdown by gestation according to technique of the number of abortions performed in the NHS South Thames region in the latest year for which figures are available. [40093]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Abortion data by technique are not available.

Multiple Births

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many sets of (a) twins, (b) triplets, (c) quadruplets, (d) quintuplets and (e) sextuplets were born in England and Wales in each year since 1990; how many maternities there were in each year; and how many multiple births in each category were conceived as a result of (i) in vitro fertilisation, (ii) gamete intra-fallopian transfer and (iii) other forms of assisted conception. [39969]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The information on multiple maternities and all maternities is given in the table.

Number of maternities in England and Wales

	1990	1991	1992	1993	1994	1995
Twins	7,934	8,160	8,314	8,302	8,451	8,749
Triplets	201	208	202	234	260	282
Quadruplets	10	10	8	12	8	7
Quintuplets	—	2	1	—	—	—
Sextuplets	—	—	—	1	—	—
Total number of maternities with multiple births	8,145	8,380	8,525	8,549	8,719	9,038
All maternities	701,030	693,857	683,854	668,511	659,545	642,404

The Office for National Statistics does not collect information about assisted conceptions when births are registered. Some information about multiple births following these treatments is contained in annual reports made by the Human Fertilisation and Embryology Authority to the Secretary of State for Health, copies of which are in the Library.

Paymaster Agency

Mr. Andrew Smith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the effect of the privatisation of the Paymaster agency on the Treasury's access to information needed to monitor and control public expenditure; and if he will make a statement. [39909]

Mr. Oppenheim: The Paymaster General announced on 15 July, Official Report, column 372, that he had accepted the recommendations of the recently concluded prior options review of Paymaster, and the agency would be privatised. A copy of the report is in the Library. It concluded that, to retain control over public expenditure and information on Exchequer balances, such work should continue to be carried out within the public sector.

Statistics

Mr. Trimble: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the monthly figures for (a) M4, (b) M3, (c) inflation, (d) growth and (e) interest rates for the period 1979 to 1995. [39907]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The data requested are published in the relevant tables in "Financial Statistics and Economic Trends" for the latest data, and in the "Economic Trends Annual Supplement" for historical data. M3 data are not available after July 1989, and monthly M4 data are not available before 1982. All these publications are available from the House Library.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish for each month in the last three years (a) the rate of inflation and (b) the increase in the money supply for the month two years previously. [40218]

Mrs. Knight: The data requested are published in table 3.1 of "Economic Trends" and table 3.1D of "Financial Statistics", both of which are available in the House Library.

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to his answer of 11 July, Official Report, columns 299–300, how many claims for unemployment benefit there have been in total; and how many people have made one or more new claims for unemployment benefit at each employment service jobcentre in the country since April 1992. [40271]

Mrs. Angela Knight: This information could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Earnings

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact on inflation curbs of the trends in earnings of (a) blue collar and (b) white collar workers. [40212]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Statistical data do not generally refer to employment as either blue or white collar work. Instead, this distinction is usually made with reference to manual or non-manual work. Data from the 1996 "New Earnings Survey" is given below for manual and non-manual workers. This survey covers a random 1 per cent. of all employees and, because of its sample size, is the most reliable official source of detailed information on earnings.

1995–96	Earnings growth	Percentage of all employees
Manual	4.2	35.1
Non-Manual	4.2	64.9

If we make the stylised assumption that employment costs comprise two thirds of final output costs, this suggests that growth in manual workers' earnings contributed approximately one percentage point to retail costs, while earnings growth of non-manual workers contributed about 1.8 percentage points.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the impact of changes in the real earnings of blue collar workers since 1979 on the competitive position of UK manufacturers in home and overseas markets. [40214]

Mrs. Knight: Since 1979, strong productivity performance and affordable real wage growth have helped enhance the competitive position of UK manufacturers. Relative unit labour costs in the UK manufacturing sector improved by around 10 per cent. between 1979 and 1995.

Mr. Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the real terms change in the earnings of (a) postal workers and (b) white collar workers since 1979. [40213]

Mrs. Knight: Average gross earnings for postal workers and non-manual workers are shown in tables 1 and X3 of the "New Earnings Survey Report" each April from 1979 to date. Prior to 1984, male and female earnings were shown separately in tables 8 and 9. This report is available in the House of Commons Library. Real terms changes can be calculated using the retail prices index for April of each year.

Public Bodies

Mr. Miller: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what restrictions exist in relation to non-departmental public bodies in terms of their approach to (a) the allocation of budgets within each organisation as a result of the implementation of local pay delegation and (b) the effect of any additional external finance derived by each organisation both in terms of supplementing existing internal budgets and in terms of any future overall budget allocation. [40134]

Mr. Waldegrave: The delegation of pay and grading to Departments on 1 April 1996 applied to home civil servants outside the senior civil service. It did not directly affect non-departmental public bodies, which do not generally employ civil servants, nor did it change the administrative arrangements affecting NDPBs. Where additional external receipts are generated by an NDPB, the use of such receipts will usually be governed by an appropriate provision in the body's financial memorandum. If no such provision exists, a proposal to finance extra expenditure by the body without any offset to the grant in aid would be subject to the approval of the sponsor Department and the Treasury. Special arrangements exist for dealing with the proceeds from the disposal of Exchequer financed assets by NDPBs. The details are set out in paragraph 39 of dear accounting officer letter 3/89, a copy of which is being placed in the House of Commons Library.

Mr. Miller: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if salary commitments entered into by non-departmental public bodies operating within their budget allocations require Treasury approval. [40135]

Mr. Waldegrave: Many, but not all, non-departmental public bodies have a statutory framework which requires the Treasury to consent to or approve the pay and conditions of staff or board members.

Value Added Tax (Hot Water)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much money will be collected annually in respect of recent legislation applying VAT to hot water supplied to (a) hospitals, (b) universities, (c) hospices and (d) colleges. [40115]

Mr. Oppenheim: The point of this legislation was not to collect money, but to nip a tax avoidance scheme in the bud. Hospitals and universities are funded on the assumption that they incur VAT on fuel and power, but in fact some of these bodies have been among those who benefited from this avoidance scheme. The cost of the scheme, across all sectors and if left unchecked, could have reached £170 million or so. This figure represents tax at risk not tax raised.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on recent legislation applying VAT to hot water supplied to hospitals, universities, hospices and colleges. [40116]

Mr. Oppenheim: The VAT (Anti-avoidance)(Heating) Order—SI 1996, No. 1661—excludes heating water from the zero rate in group 2 schedule 8 of the VAT Act 1994. This ended a VAT avoidance scheme by which some organisations, otherwise unable to recover VAT, had been able to avoid VAT on fuel and power by exploiting the zero rate for supplies of water. Hospitals and universities are funded on the assumption that they incur VAT on fuel and power, but in fact some of these bodies have been among those who benefited from the scheme.

The effect of the order is to ensure the correct VAT treatment of fuel and power. It taxes heated water because it is, in reality, either a means of distributing heat or is supplied for use as hot water, the value of which lies in the fact that it has been heated.

It is expected that the artificial schemes will now collapse and users will revert to the normal practice of purchasing zero-rated cold water, and when heating it will use tax-paid fuel.

Inflation

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the current rate of inflation; and what was the forecast of inflation for July 1996 made by the Governor of the Bank of England (a) one and (b) two years ago. [40217]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The current rate of inflation of the retail prices index excluding mortgage interest payments—RPI ex MIPs—was 2.8 per cent. for the year to August 1996. The Bank of England publishes quarterly, not monthly, forecasts of RPI ex MIPs, but does not publish RPI all items forecasts. The Bank of England's forecast of RPI ex MIPs inflation for Q3 1996, made in August 1995, was 3.7 per cent. The Bank of England did not make forecasts two years ahead in August 1994.

National Debt

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what estimate he has made of the cost of servicing the national debt in each of the next five years. [40211]

Mrs. Angela Knight: In the 1995 "Financial Statement and Budget Report", central Government gross debt interest payments were forecast as follows:

1996–97: £26.5 billion

1997–98: £28.0 billion

1998–99: £27.9 billion

1999–2000[1]: £28 billion

2000–2001[1]: £27 billion

[1]As in the Red Book, these forecasts are rounded to the nearest £ billion.

In the 1996 "Summer Economic Forecast", central Government gross debt interest payments for 1996–97 and 1997–98 were revised to £26.7 billion and £29.4 billion respectively.

Food Retail Employees

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total number of people, using full-time equivalents, employed in the food retail sector in the years (a) 1970, (b) 1975, (c) 1980, (d) 1985, (e) 1990, (f) 1995 and (g) 1996; for each year what was the proportion of people working in companies employing (1) one to 10, (2) 11 to 24, (3) 25 to 49, (4) 50 to 99, (5) 100 to 199, (6) 200 to 499 and (7) 500 and above; and if he will make a statement. [40130]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Information on a full-time equivalent basis cannot be provided for all years. The tables provide total employees for each year and full-time/part-time where available. The earliest available information comparable with later years is at 1971.

Information on workplace size is available from the census of employment and can be accessed through the NOMIS database by the House of Commons Library.

Employment Statistics

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people there were (a) in employment and (b) self-employed in each parliamentary constituency in the United Kingdom at the latest date for which figures are available. [40237]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Information on total employment and the self-employed by local authority district at spring 1996 is available from the labour force survey. Information on employees in employment by parliamentary constituency at September 1993 is available from the census of employment. Both series can be accessed through the NOMIS database in the House of Commons Library.

Inward Investment

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a sectoral breakdown of inward investment to Britain from (a) the US and (b) Japan. [40289]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The latest available information relates to direct investment by US and Japanese businesses in Britain in 1994. This is contained in table 2.7 of "Business Monitor MA4 (1994 Overseas Direct Investment)" published by the Central Statistical Office. A copy is in the House of Commons Library.

Debt Reduction

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the debt reduction initiative proposed by the World bank. [40337]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The Government have been pressing hard for a resolution to the debt problems of the poorest, most indebted countries. We therefore very much welcome the successful launch of the heavily indebted poor country initiative, which is based on UK proposals. We fully support its objective of ensuring that, having demonstrated a track record of sustained strong economic policy performance, these countries are able to achieve overall external debt sustainability. The Government welcome the participation in the initiative of all major creditors—the International Monetary Fund, the World bank, and the Paris club of official bilateral creditors—which have agreed to act in a co-ordinated manner, sharing the costs of the initiative equitably. We also welcome the decision to implement the initiative flexibly, on a case by case basis, and with full participation by debtor Governments. Implementation for the first potentially eligible countries is expected to begin before the end of the year.

Prostate Cancer

Sir Julian Critchley: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people have died in each year of the last 10 years from prostate cancer. [40471]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The number of deaths from prostate cancer—ICD[1] 185—in England and Wales was published in "Mortality Statistics: Cause", series DH2 No. 13, 1986; No. 14, 1987; No. 15, 1988; No. 16, 1989; No. 17, 1990; No. 18, 1991; No. 19, 1992; No. 21, 1993–94; in "Office for National Statistics, Monitor" DH2 96/2–1995. Copies of these publications are available in the House of Commons Library.

Fuel Duty Rebate

Sir Peter Fry: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to increase fuel duty rebate for scheduled coach services to bring it into line with passenger rail services. [39889]

Mr. Bowis: I have been asked to reply.

None.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

Child Care Facilities

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to encourage the provision of child care facilities in the workplace. [39997]

Mrs. Gillan: Employers can claim a deduction for all expenditure on child care provision for employees when calculating their business profits for tax purposes. Since April 1990 employees have been exempt from paying income tax on the benefit in kind of workplace nurseries provided by their employer.

On 28 August I published a consultation paper, "Work and Family: Ideas and Options for Child care", which seeks views on how policy might develop to encourage the development of good-quality child care, including by employers.

Skill Shortages

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the major areas of employment where there will be skill shortage in the remainder of the 1990s; and what assessment she has made of the impact these shortages will have on manufacturing industry. [39995]

Mr. Paice: The Department commissions an annual survey of employers assessing the extent of hard-to-fill vacancies currently and in 12 months' time. Rapidly changing technology, international competition and customer needs mean skills shortages cannot be predicted too far ahead. It is for local training and enterprise councils to monitor labour market needs in their own areas. Government programmes such as training for work, national traineeships and modern apprenticeships provide the basis of provision for the identified needs.

Unemployment

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement about the current level of unemployment in the north-west region. [39998]

Mr. Paice: Unadjusted unemployment in the north-west standard region fell by over 15,000 in the 12 months to August, from 256,550—9 per cent.—in August 1995 to 241,219—8.5 per cent.—in August 1996, the last month for which figures are available.

Ethnic Minorities

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many women from ethnic minorities are employed by her Department and its agencies; at what grade; and what measures she has taken to encourage the (a) recruitment, (b) employment and (c) promotion of women from ethnic minorities within her Department and its agencies [39903]

Mrs. Gillan: The following table shows the number of women from ethnic minorities who are employed by the Department for Education and Employment and its agencies, broken down by grade.

Women of ethnic minority origin employed by the DfEE, ES and TPA at 1 July 1996

	Black	Asian	Other	Total
AA	93	84	6	183
AO	645	793	74	1,512
EO	169	207	31	407
HEO	15	16	10	41
SEO	1	4	0	5
G7	0	0	1	1
Total	923	1,104	122	2,149

DFEE and its agencies are committed to equal opportunities and, have established a number of initiatives to encourage the recruitment, employment and promotion both of ethnic minority staff and of women. For example:

Advertising of external posts is targeted and the Department's equal opportunity committments appear in advertisements.

Most departmental vacancies are filled from within. The internal vacancy bulletin explains the Department's comittment to equal opportunity and that applicants are considered on merit regardless of age, disability, gender, race religion, marital status or sexual orientation.

The gender and ethnic origin of all applicants are monitored during the recruitment process to ensure that advertising is effective and the recruitment procedure fair.

Recruitment is based on competence rather than on subjective criteria.

The Employment Service has a mentoring programme for staff of ethnic minority origin and DFEE is setting up a similar scheme.

DFEE is a member of the National Mentoring Consortium and the Windsor Fellowship, providing support for ethnic minority undergraduates with the aim of encouraging them to consider a civil service career.

DFEE has a development programme for staff from ethnic minorities of AA grade and above, called "Equal Chance" to help develop the skills and competences required for career progression within the Department.

The Department has a commitment to flexible working including part-time, job sharing and remote working and is taking measures to encourage and extend opportunities for working this way.

The Department has participated in double disadvantage focus groups as part of a Cabinet Office study to consider the double disadvantage which might be experienced by women of ethnic minority origin.

It is of concern to the Department that staff of ethnic minority origin remain under-represented at senior levels. The Department's equal opportunities strategy has key priorities for action. These include ensuring that people from ethnic minority backgrounds have the same opportunities as everyone else to develop and progress and looking at strategies to enable women to progress on merit to senior posts. A research project has been mounted to identify barriers to progress for all ethnic minority staff. The findings from this research will inform future initiatives.

Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when she expects to receive the 1996–97 corporate plan of the office of Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools. [39922]

Mr. Robin Squire: This is a matter for Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools, who heads the Office for Standards in Education. That said, I understand that the corporate plan was published on Friday 27 September 1996, and a copy has been placed in the Library.

Older Workers

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate she has made of the proportion of the population aged 55 years and over which will remain economically active during the next 10 years; and what plans she has to combat discrimination by employers on the ground of age. [39996]

Mrs. Gillan: Labour force projections of economic activity, broken down by age, were published in the May 1996 edition of "Labour Market Trends", which is available in the Library.

Government policy is to continue to tackle age discrimination in employment through this Department's campaign for older workers. The campaign aims to persuade employers of the business benefits in recruiting, retraining and retaining workers on merit; raise awareness of the importance of older workers to the economy; and encourage older workers to remain active in the labour market.

The campaign's message, that age has no bearing on the ability to do a good job, is being carried forward and disseminated through a series of booklets—publications have been issued for employers, older workers themselves, recruitment agencies and the recruitment advertising industry—and regional ministerial presentations.

The campaign is currently being evaluated and the results should be available next spring.

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on her Department's policy on the employment of older workers. [40288]

Mrs. Gillan: The Government's policy is to persuade employers to recruit, train and retain workers on merit, regardless of age. This is promoted through this Department's campaign for older workers.

Primary School Pupils

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the number and percentage of pupils in maintained primary school classes of 31 or more in each year from 1991 and what figures are available for 1996 showing the percentage change between 1995 and 1996 (a) by each local education authority in England, (b) by region and (c) in total. [40148]

Physical Education

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the effect of the measures contained in the Nursery Education and Grant Maintained Schools Act 1996 on the provision of PE facilities. [37940]

Mrs. Gillan: The Nursery Education and Grant Maintained Schools Act 1996 has no effect on the premises requirements for maintained schools or for other institutions offering nursery education. The Act allows grant-maintained schools to borrow commercially, which will allow such schools to invest more in their facilities for physical education.

The Education (School Premises) Regulation 1996 recently revised many of the premises requirements for maintained schools. The requirements for PE facilities were, however, unaffected.

Sheltered Workshops

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the number of blind and disabled people and the number of able-bodied people employed in each sheltered workshop in Scotland indicating the cost of each category in each workshop; and if she will make a statement. [40034]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Mike Fogden to Mr. David Marshall, dated 14 October 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your question about the number of people employed in Supported Workshops in Scotland. This is something which falls within the responsibilities delegated to me as Chief Executive of the Agency.

Information on the number of people in Scottish workshops supported by the Employment Service (ES) under its Supported Employment Programme is provided at Annex 1. The Programme is provided under contracts between the workshop owners (who are local authorities or voluntary bodies) and the ES and covers placements with employers as well as workshop places.

Information on the costs of workshop employees in the requested categories (blind people, other disabilities and non-disabled people) is not available. It is not required for management purposes by the ES; no figures are therefore obtained or kept.

Information on the per capita costs of disabled employees supported by the ES is gathered by the ES from voluntary body and local authority contractors as it is a requirement for funding. Contractors provide this information to the ES on a confidential basis as it is commercially sensitive and so individual workshop figures are not publicly available from the ES. However the average cost per disabled employee in Scottish workshops, in 1994/95, the latest year for which figures are available, was £10,695. In that year costs ranged from a loss of £18,783 per worker in one workshop to a loss of £4,421 per worker in another.

I hope this is helpful.

Schools (Staff Misconduct)

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) on how many occasions and on what dates since 1982 the proprietor of Bedales junior school has notified her Department of cases of dismissal of or resignation by members of staff on the grounds of misconduct as required under the Education (Particulars of Independent Schools) Regulations of 1982, 1991 and 1994; [40414]

(2) how many proprietors of independent schools have reported cases of dismissal of or resignations by members of staff on the grounds of misconduct as required under the Education (Particulars of Independent Schools) Regulations of 1982, 1991 and 1994; and if she will list the schools and the dates of each report. [40415]

Mrs. Gillan: The Department's record are not kept in a form which would provide this information.

Nursery Vouchers

Ms Estelle Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) Office for Standards in Education how many inspections of providers under phase 1 of the nursery voucher scheme took place in September; [40391]

(2) what estimate she has made of how long it will take to complete Ofsted inspection of all the participating providers the Government predict will take part in phase 2 of the nursery voucher scheme at the current rate of inspection; [40387]

(3) how many Ofsted inspections of providers under phase 1 of the nursery voucher scheme Ofsted plans to undertake (a) between October and the end of December and (b) between the end of December and the end of March 1997; [40382]

(4) What estimate she has made of how many providers will require follow-up inspection based on completed Ofsted inspections of providers under phase 1 of the nursery voucher scheme and what is the planned timetable for follow-up inspections; [40392]

(5) how many Ofsted inspectors have been trained to carry out inspection of providers under phase 1 of the nursery voucher scheme; and how many of these were previously primary inspectors; [40384]

(6) what are the minimum qualifications required for Ofsted inspectors of providers under the nursery voucher scheme; and what training is given to qualify Ofsted inspectors to undertake inspection of providers under the nursery voucher scheme. [40388]

Mr. Robin Squire: These are matters for Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools, who heads the Office for Standards in Education. I have asked Mr. Chris Woodhead to write to the hon. Member.

City and Guilds Courses

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what course replaced City and Guilds course 7790 in media techniques after its equivalent status was withdraw in December 1995. [40413]

Mr. Paice: A number of national vocational qualifications in the same occupational area as City and Guilds 7790 in media techniques (journalism and radio) have been accredited by NCVQ. The NVQ titles are broadcast journalism; newspaper journalism (graphics journalism); newspaper journalism (production journalism); newspaper journalism (writing); periodical journalism (subbing); periodical journalism (writing); periodical production; advertisement production. These NVQs are the approved outcomes for trainees now entering youth programmes and training for work following the change of status of City and Guilds 7790 on 31 December 1995.

Assisted Places

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the (a) actual spending and (b) budgeted provision on the assisted places scheme in the academic year 1995–96; how many schools participated; how many assisted places were available; how many were taken up; and what percentage of the pupils in the schools involved were on assisted places. [40544]

Mrs. Gillan: Expenditure information is not available on an academic year basis. In the last financial year 1995–96, actual spending on the assisted places scheme in England was £104.762 million. Provision in the original Supply estimates was £104.413 million. There were 293 participating schools offering 33,906 assisted places, fo which 29,917 were taken up. Just over 14 per cent. of all pupils in the participating schools held assisted places in academic year 1995–96.

GCSE Scores

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the average GCSE point score, where A*=7, for English language and mathematics for (a) girls and (b) boys in the maintained sector in (i) 1994, (ii) 1995 and (iii) 1996. [40546]

Mr. Paice: The average GCSE point scores for English and mathematics in the maintained sector in England where A*=7 are as follows:

	1994		1995
	Girls	Boys	Girls	Boys
English	4.4	3.7	4.4	3.6
Mathematics	3.6	3.5	3.5	3.4

The figures for 1996 are not yet available.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many and what percentage of total school leavers in the maintained sector failed to attain five GCSEs at grades A to C in 1996 (a) in total and (b) broken down according to gender. [40547]

Mr. Paice: This information is not available.

School Ballots

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many (a) schools, (b) primary schools and (c) secondary schools there were in 1995–96 in England and Wales and in each country; how many schools (i) held ballots to decide whether or not to opt out of local education authority control and (ii) decided to opt out of local education authority control in 1995–96; and if she will calculate (i) and (ii) as a percentage of (a), (b) and (c) for each country and for England and Wales. [40592]

Mr. Forth: Information on the number of primary and secondary schools in England and the proportion whose governing bodies have given parents an opportunity to vote in a ballot on grant-maintained status is given in the following table.

School Overcrowding

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what legal safeguards exist against overcrowding in schools. [40583]

Mrs. Gillan: The legal safeguards are those set out in my reply of 19 March, Official Report, column 121. Regulation 17(3) of the Education (School Premises) Regulations 1996 requires that every part of a school building shall be such that the health, safety and welfare of occupants shall be reasonably assured. Regulation 7 requires that the buildings provided for a school shall be adequate to permit the safe and convenient passage of persons and movement of goods within the buildings.

CHURCH COMMISSIONERS

Women's Ordination (Compensation)

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, representing the Church Commissioners, how many clergy who have resigned over the ordination of women have not claimed compensation to which they are entitled. [39262]

Mr. Alison: The commissioners' records relate only to clergy who have claimed assistance in accordance with the Ordination of Women (Financial Provisions) Measure. They have no way of estimating how many other clergy eligible for financial provision have resigned as a result of the ordination of women.

However, I understand from the Advisory Board of Ministry that, as at 31 December 1995, figures received from dioceses show no significant difference between the total number of stipendiary clergy who have resigned over the ordination of women and the number of those who have claimed assistance under the financial provisions Measure.

Mr. Field: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, representing the Church Commissioners, if he will publish the estimates of the purported cost of the compensation scheme for clergy resigning over women's ordination which the commissioners have undertaken for the latest period for which such calculations have been made. [39264]

Mr. Alison: A total of 314 clergy have resigned to date and an additional 29 have expressed their intention to resign. It is difficult to predict the final number of resignations. However, actual expenditure, including housing costs, in 1994 and 1995 and estimated costings based on an illustrative total of 400 resignations are set out in the table.

1. The number of resignations shown (400) is a broad estimate, and the final costs could vary substantially.
2. Actual costs are show for 1994 and 1995 based on resignations totalling 232 and 67 respectively in those years, including housing subsidy. A similar pattern of costs has been assumed for future years.
3. The figures make allowance for future increases in house prices and stipends.
4. The net figures take account of such variables as stipends savings (assuming at least a temporary reduction in the payroll), allowance for retirement housing provision which would otherwise have arisen on retirement, and the possibility of some people redeeming loans or leaving rented accommodation once they have obtained alternative employment.

Mr. Field: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, representing the Church Commissioners, how many clergy resigned over women priests and gained payment from the compensation scheme in each year since its first payments were made broken down by age of the clergy grouped in convenient decades; and what was the size of the payments made. [39263]

Mr. Alison: A breakdown of this information in respect of the 314 clergy who have resigned to date is shown in the following table.

Turnbull Report

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, representing the Church Commissioners, if the Church Commissioners have considered how many of the Turnbull report recommendations can be implemented without seeking parliamentary approval; and if he will place a copy of their considerations in the Library. [39672]

Mr. Alison: The Church Commissioners have consulted the Standing Committee of the General Synod and the synod's legal advisor has been asked to provide, in conjunction with the official solicitor of the Church Commissioners, an assessment of what could be done without legislation. The results will be considered by the archbishops' advisory group, the standing committee and the Church Commissioners with a view to a response to the recommendation then being made.

Pensions Report

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the right hon. Member for Selby, representing the Church Commissioners, when he expects the Church Commissioners to be able to respond fully to each of the main recommendations and requests for further information contained in the fifth report of the Social Security Committee of 1995–96, on Church of England pensions, HC 340. [39606]

Mr. Alison: The Church Commissioners have consulted the Standing Committee of the General Synod and careful consideration is being given to each of the main recommendations of the Social Security Committee. We hope to provide a full response as soon as possible in the autumn.

WALES

Trunk Roads

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to integrate trunk road planning into the process of land use planning. [40063]

Mr. Hague: "Planning Guidance (Wales) Planning Policy" published in May this year includes an outline of the Government's transport planning aims and indicates how development plans can contribute towards integrating transport and land use planning.

Any further consideration of linkages between transport and land use planning will be set out in my transport policy statement in due course.

GP Pharmacies

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many dispensing general practices there are in Wales. [40048]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Eighty-nine.

M4 Relief Road

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what investigations have been carried out into possible alternatives to road building in the case of the M4 relief road; and if he will publish the terms of reference of those investigations. [40062]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: The development of proposals for the M4 relief road will include an assessment of alternative transport modes. My right hon. Friend and I have no plans to publish the terms of reference.

Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, pursuant to his answer of 23 July, Official Report, column 274, what factors underlay his judgment that release of the breakdown of cases of CJD in the form requested would compromise confidentiality. [40131]

Mr. Gwilym Jones: Some CJD patients' friends and family have been very distressed following identification in the press. Details on the number of CJD cases in Wales have already been given and geographic distribution of cases is given in the fourth annual report from the CJD unit. In view of the low numbers involved I do not propose to provide further information which might lead to the possible identification of patients.

I appreciate the present interest in the disease and the need to put statistics in the public domain more frequently. For this reason, Sir Kenneth Calman, Chief Medical Officer at the Department of Health announced on 26 July that CJD statistics will be published on a regular basis. This will provide statistical information only on the number of cases and deaths and will not be specific to individual authority areas.

Birds (Pembrokeshire)

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent assessment he has made of the effects on the bird population of the Sea Empress accident off Pembrokeshire in February. [40397]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The daily counts of dead and oiled birds made in the wake of the accident have ceased. The Countryside Council for Wales is undertaking a range of research projects commissioned by the Sea Empress Environmental Evaluation Committee to establish what impact there has been on both breeding and wintering bird populations.

Initial results suggest that Auk colonies on St. Margaret's island and the Castlemartin coast have been severely affected while the internationally important seabird concentrations on Skokholm, Skomer and Grassholm have been relatively unaffected. The impact on the Common Scoter is difficult to assess due to considerable variations in estimated numbers prior to the accident. In all cases longer term data are required.

All results will be reported to Government by SEEEC in its final report due in autumn 1997.

Prescribing costs

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Welsh Health Common Services Authority regarding the late supply of information on prescribing costs to health authorities by the Prescription Pricing Authority. [40674]

Mr. Hague: The Prescription Pricing Authority does not operate in Wales. My officials have written to the Chief Executive of the Welsh Health Common Services Authority about the late supply of information by his prescription information and pricing services division. He has replied with an assurance that the division will be completely up to date by the beginning of March 1997. I am monitoring the situation and have asked for monthly progress reports.

NHS Trusts

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has to initiate discussions on reviewing the number of trusts in the Welsh national health service; and if he will make a statement. [40673]

Mr. Hague: None. However, I am prepared to consider proposals put forward by the service.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what arrangements he has made for ensuring the financial viability of NHS trusts; what part he has assigned to health authorities for ensuring such viability; and if he will make a statement. [40661]

Mr. Hague: In order to attain trust status an application containing detailed financial projections for the first three years of operation is submitted for approval. These projections are analysed by both of my officials and independent external consultants. Only if the outcome of the analysis is positive is trust status approved.

Once established, a trust is required to report its current and projected financial performance at regular intervals to my officials. Should the financial performance of a trust be unsatisfactory they would have to produce plans for recovery against which they would be monitored.

The health authorities in Wales have no specific role assigned to them in this monitoring process but are involved in the agreement of recovery plans.

University Hospital of Wales Healthcare NHS Trust

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he expects to publish his decision letter on the application for public funding for the new accident and emergency unit at the University hospital of Wales, Heath, Cardiff. [40670]

Mr. Hague: The University Hospital of Wales Healthcare NHS trust is currently preparing a full business case for the development; only when this is completed and approved will a decision on public funding be made.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairman of the University Hospital of Wales Healthcare NHS Trust concerning the application for inclusion in the current public expenditure survey of (a) the flyover connecting the hospital to the A48 and (b) its proposed new accident and emergency unit. [40671]

Mr. Hague: None.

Drugs Budget

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is his current estimate for the aggregate drugs budget overspend for the year 1995–96 and the year 1996–97. [40667]

Mr. Hague: The overspend in 1995–96 expressed in terms of the net ingredient cost was £3.4 million against a total allocation of £267.4 million. At this stage of the year it is impossible accurately to forecast the likely outturn in 1996–97 but the cost of all drugs prescribed will continue to be met.

NHS Computer Software

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairmen of the Welsh health authorities concerning the performance of LK Global and Amsys 20 computer software for general practice fundholders and its impact on management information on prescribing expenditure relative to budget. [40666]

Mr. Hague: None. This is a matter for the parties concerned.

Road and Rail Construction

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what (a) subsidies have been made available for road construction and (b) investment has been made in railway track construction in Wales in each year since 1979. [40510]

Mr. Hague: Since 1979, total spending by central Government on the roads programme in Wales is nearly £3 billion, including £510 million in transport grants to local authorities. In addition there are a number of other grant programmes which may support road construction but which have wider overall objectives. Details of the extent to which these funds have been allocated to road construction over the period requested could only be obtained at disproportionate cost. Figures for expenditure on railway track construction are not available on a Wales only basis. However, details of investment in railway infrastructure in Great Britain are produced by the Department of Transport and published annually by Her Majesty's Stationery Office as "Transport Statistics, Great Britain".

Extra-contractual Referrals

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, if he will list those making representations concerning the contents of the departmental letters of 12 and 20 June concerning extra-contractual referral administration. [39715]

Mr. Hague [pursuant to his reply, 24 July 1996, c.379]: I regret that three NHS organisations were inadvertently omitted from the answer. The complete list of extra-contractual referrals received is therefore as follows:

Clwydian Community Care NHS Trust

Derwen NHS Trust

Rhondda NHS Trust

Carmarthen and District NHS Trust

Nevill Hall and District NHS Trust

Cardiff Community Healthcare NHS Trust

Gwent NHS Trust

North Wales NHS Trust

Powys Healthcare NHS Trust.

School Exclusions and Expulsions

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales, if he will publish for the last available three years for each county and for Wales as a whole, the number of school exclusions or expulsions recorded for (a) primary schools, (b) secondary schools and (c) all schools, indicating the percentage of such exclusions or expulsions as a proportion of overall pupil numbers in each case. [38944]

Mr. Jonathan Evans [pursuant to his reply, 23 July 1996, c.276]: I regret that the table provided was incorrect. The correct table is as follows:

Permanent exclusions during 1994–95 academic year from:

LEA	Primary schools		Secondary schools		Total primary and secondary schools
	Number	Exclusions as percentage of roll	Number	Exclusions as percentage of roll	Number	Exclusions as percentage of roll
Clwyd	17	0.04	61	0.23	78	0.11
Dyfed	2	0.01	34	0.14	36	0.06
Gwent	9	0.02	89	0.29	98	0.13
Gwynedd	2	0.01	25	0.16	27	0.07

All figures are provisional.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Ethnic Minorities

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many women from ethnic minorities are employed by his Department and its agencies; at what grade; and what measures he has taken to encourage the (a) recruitment, (b) employment and (c) promotion of women from ethnic minorities within his Department and its agencies. [39894]

Sir John Wheeler: Staff of the Northern Ireland Office (London) are monitored through the provision of information is voluntary.

Responses show that the following women from ethnic minorities are currently employed:

Grade 7: One

Executive Officer: Five

Administrative Officer: Two

Personal Secretary: One

Typist: Four

Administrative Assistant: Two.

The Northern Ireland Office has an equal opportunities policy of non-discrimination in recruitment and promotion on the grounds of race, sex, disability or political/religious beliefs.

Equal opportunities awareness training is given to all staff.

It is not possible to provide the information requested in respect of the Northern Ireland civil service. The Race Relations Act 1976 does not apply to Northern Ireland and the Northern Ireland civil service does not undertake ethnic monitoring of staff. However, the NICS equal opportunities policy embraces all staff and applicants for employment, including those who are members of ethnic minority groups.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will investigate all community representatives' complaints about the conduct of the RUC in recent weeks. [39951]

Sir John Wheeler: Any complaints made by community representatives to my right hon. and learned Friend about the alleged conduct of the RUC are carefully examined and treated by the most appropriate method, according to the nature of the complaints. Those alleging misconduct by individual officers are referred to the RUC complaints and discipline branch for investigation under the oversight of the Independent Commission for Police Complaints. Those which concern police operational policies are referred to the Chief Constable of the RUC for advice. In all cases, a reply is issued from Government.

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what intimations of resignation from the RUC he has been informed about in recent weeks because of policy on the control of marches; and what action has been taken. [39968]

Sir John Wheeler: The Royal Ulster Constabulary's personnel branch is not aware of any resignations, or intimations of same, as a result of policy on the control of marches.

Cookstown Blockade

Dr. Hendron: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the Police Authority for Northern Ireland's investigations into the involvement of one of its members in a blockade at Cookstown in the period 5 to 11 July. [39906]

Sir John Wheeler: This is a matter for the Police Authority for Northern Ireland. I am advised that the authority held a special meeting on 30 July at the request of a member against whom allegations had appeared in the press. A report was presented to the authority and the member concerned gave an account of his actions. The authority accepted his account of the events at issue and agreed that no further action was necessary. The authority now regards the matter as being closed.

Multiple Births

Mr. Wigley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many sets of (a) twins, (b) triplets, (c) quadruplets, (d) quintuplets and (e) sextuplets were born in Northern Ireland in each year since 1990; how many maternities there were in each year; and how many multiple births in each category were conceived as a result of (i) in vitro fertilisation, (ii) gamete intra-fallopian transfer and (iii) other forms of assisted conception. [39970]

Mr. Moss: The information requested is set out in the table.

Type	1990	1991	1992	1993	1994	[1]1995
Set of:
(a) twins	267	315	258	308	303	324
(b) triplets	5	6	8	9	6	7

[2] These figures are as result of IVF by year of conception.
[3] Gamete intra-fallopian transfer (GIFT) was available in Northern Ireland only in 1986 and 1987.
n/a = not available.

Mr. Lindsay Robb

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to his answer of 23 July, Official Report, column 254, what payments have been made by the RUC to Mr. Lindsay Robb other than those made under the witness protection scheme; and on what dates. [40140]

Sir John Wheeler: No payment has been made to Lindsay Robb out of RUC expenditure, but as stated in my answer of 23 July, he received taxpayer-funded financial assistance under the witness protection scheme.

Criminal Cases Review Commission

Rev. Ian Paisley: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if he will make a statement on the eligibility of people from Northern Ireland to be members of the Northern Ireland Criminal Cases Review Commission; [40307]

(2) if he will make a statement on progress towards the establishment of a Northern Ireland Criminal Cases Review Commission; [40305]

(3) what will be the (a) functions and (b) powers and remit of a Criminal Cases Review Commission in Northern Ireland. [40306]

Sir John Wheeler: A Criminal Cases Review Commission is being established to investigate alleged miscarriages of justice and, if necessary, to refer cases back to the Court of Appeal. Its remit will cover England, Wales and Northern Ireland. The Home Secretary and Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, who are currently responsible for considering such cases, will cease to do so once the commission is established.

The commission is a statutory body whose functions, powers and remit are set out in the Criminal Appeal Act 1995. It will comprise a chairman and a minimum of 10 board members. At least one third of the members must be legally qualified, whilst at least two thirds must have previous experience of the criminal justice system. One member, at least, must have knowledge or experience of the Northern Ireland criminal justice system. Subject to these provisions, selection is through open competition and is in accordance with the recommendations of the Nolan Committee on Standards in Public Life. Accordingly, advertisements for the recruitment of members appeared in the press in May, including the three Northern Ireland daily newspapers.

The selection process is under way and it is expected that the commission will begin work early in 1997.

341 and 342 Rathfriland Road, Dromera

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of state for Northern Ireland what was (a) the original distance between the entrances to 341 and 342 Rathfriland road, Dromara submitted to and passed by the Department of the Environment in 1988, (b) the distance inthe amended plan accepted by the Department and (c) the actual distance now the work has been completed and passed by the Department. [40380]

Sir John Wheeler: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Planning Service under its chief executive, Mr Wesley Steward. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from W. D. Glass to Rev. Martin Smyth, dated 14 October 1996:

Mr Moss has asked me to reply, in the absence on annual leave of Mr. T W Stewart, Chief Executive of the Planning Service, to your Question about the approved and actual distances between the entrances to Nos. 341 Rathfriland Road, Dromara.

I would respond to the three specific points raised in your Question as follows:

(a) The distance between the entrances of 341 and 342 Rathfriland Road, Dromara, as submitted and approved under planning application Q/88/0208 in 19988 was 16 metres.

(b) The distance between the entrances as approved in the amended application Q/89/013 was 4 metres.

(c) The actual distance between the entrances as constructed is 10.5 metres.

All of the above dimensions are measured between the centre-line of the two accesses.

High-risk Prisoners

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what is his policy in relation to periods of temporary release of unescorted high-risk prisoners from top security gaols; when the policy was last reviewed; and if he will make a statement; [40542]

(2) what policy is followed when an unescorted high-risk prisoner is given temporary release in relation to procedures for informing airports to be used by the prisoner and the police force in the area into which he will be travelling; and if he will make a statement. [40543]

Sir John Wheeler: This is a matter for the Prison Service under its chief executive, Mr. Alan Shannon. I have asked him to reply.

Letter from Alan Shannon to Mr. Alfred Morris, dated 14 October 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to the two Parliamentary Questions you tabled about the policy in relation to periods of temporary release of unescorted high risk prisoners.

There are two schemes under which high risk prisoners are regularly considered for short periods of temporary release. These are:

the compassionate temporary release scheme which allows prisoners to visit immediate relatives who are very seriously ill or to attend their funerals;

the home visit scheme which allows prisoners who have served at least 6 years to visit immediate relatives who are non-ambulant and have been unable to visit the prisoner for a period of at least 18 months in the first instance.

High risk prisoners may also be considered for leaves which are available to prisoners nearing the end of sentence. These are the pre-release home leave scheme, the seven day allowance scheme for prisoners who served in excess of 11 years and the Christmas home leave scheme which is available to prisoners who have served in excess of 11 years or are in their final year of sentence.

Prison Service Headquarters is responsible for approving all applications under the compassionate leave scheme and home visit scheme. In addition Prison Service Headquarters is responsible for approving the first instance of leave under the other schemes. These applications are considered very carefully and will be refused if it is felt there is a significant risk of absconding or danger to the prisoner or the public.

The last major change in procedures was in 1983 when the compassionate release scheme was suspended for 6 months after two paramilitary prisoners failed to return from a period of leave. Since then, until the recent abscond, no high risk prisoner has failed to return to prison from leave or has been charged with criminal offences arising out of behaviour while on leave.

It is standard practice to inform the Royal Ulster Constabulary of the temporary release of all prisoners.

HEALTH

Climate Change

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the studies (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated by his Department into the impact of climate changes on the health of the United Kingdom population. [40071]

Mr. Horam: The Department has not commissioned any research which is directly related to the impact of climate change on health. However, we are considering the findings of the climate change impacts review group which identified some possible health effects. In the light of the outcome of this consideration and on-going research we will review our programmes and research requirements.

NHS Expenditure

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the average expenditure per head in (a) each health authority and (b) nationally in the last financial year. [39921]

Mr. Horam: The average per capita expenditure figures for 1996–97 will not be available centrally until the annual accounts process has been completed in early December 1996.

The figures will be placed in the Library as soon as they are available.

Beta Interferon

Mr. Jim Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will make a statement on the prescription of beta interferon; [39926]

(2) what representation his Department has received of guidelines EL(95)97 being disregarded. [39925]

Mr. Horam: Executive letter (95)97 issued to health authorities in November 1995 suggested that, where it is clinically appropriate to prescribe beta interferon to treat multiple sclerosis, treatment should be initiated after assessment by hospital neurologists. The guidance was accompanied by clinical advice from the Standing Medical Advisory Committee. Decisions about prescribing in individual cases are a matter for clinical judgment.

The Department has received some representations about the implementation of EL(95)97. Where appropriate, such representations are followed up with the authorities concerned.

Mr. Cunningham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what funding he has made available for a national trial of beta interferon. [39927]

Mr. Malone: A final decision on funding will be taken once a satisfactory protocol addressing the concerns on outcome measures has been developed.

Ethnic Minorities

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many women from ethnic minorities are employed by his Department and its agencies; at what grade; and what measures he has taken to encourage the (a) recruitment, (b) employment and (c) promotion of women from ethnic minorities within his Department and its agencies. [39902]

Mr. Horam: Information showing the number of women from ethnic minorities, by grade, employed by the Department and its agencies is as follows:

Number of ethnic minority female staff in Department of Health and agencies (excluding regional offices)

Grade	Ethnic minority staff
Senior Civil Servant	4
UG6	3
UG7	12
SEO	9
HEO	24
EO	76
AO	187
AA	65
Total	380

The Department has taken the following measures to encourage women from the ethnic minorities:

Recruitment and employment: The Department and its agencies follow the Cabinet Office guidance and civil service recruitment policies and procedures which incorporate best recruitment practices.

Promotion: Women from the ethnic minorities, like other staff, are encouraged to attend appropriate development training, giving them the opportunity to develop skills that will better prepare them for promotion opportunities.

All personnel policies, practices and procedures are monitored by gender, disability and ethnicity to ensure that they are free of bias and prejudice. The Department and its agencies are committed to following the policies in the Cabinet Office programme for action on race and have actively supported research commissioned by the Cabinet Office into the potential double disadvantage faced by ethnic minority women in the civil service.

In order to improve recruitment, employment and promotion of female staff, the Department has introduced a range of initiatives including flexible working, career breaks and subsidised child care facilities. Also available is positive action training for women from ethnic minorities and staff with disabilities.

The Department participates in the Windsor Fellowship scheme for undergraduates from ethnic minorities and encourages its ethnic minority working group, a staff reference group, which discusses issues affecting staff from the minority ethnic groups.

Psychiatric Patients

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the average length of stay of psychiatric in-patients in each of the last five years broken down to show cases involving (a) voluntary and (b) compulsory admissions. [39993]

Mr. Burns: The information is not available centrally.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many patients, by county of birth were admitted to psychiatric beds in the last year. [40132]

Mr. Burns: Information concerning the place of birth of hospital in-patients is not collected centrally.

Arbitration

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 22 July, Official Report, column 112, if each NHS region uses the same principles in its arbitration process on contract settlements between NHS purchasers and providers; and what measures have been taken by the NHS Executive since March 1991 to ensure that these principles are consistent between regions. [40270]

Mr. Malone: National health service regions are required to resolve disputes as speedily as possible in the best interests of patients and the NHS. The great variety in the circumstances in which disputes arise precludes the imposition of a narrow set of principles for their resolution.

Heartlands and Solihull Hospitals

Mr. Mills: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment he made of the proposals by Birmingham and Solihull hospital trust for ambulance transport to Heartlands hospital from local villages with special reference to Meriden, Hockley Heath, Knowle Dorridge, Hamden in Arden, Cheswick green and Balsam common in the event of a medical emergency when making his recent statement on the provision of 24-hour accident and emergency services at Solihull hospital; and if he will make a statement; [40264]

(2) what assessment he has made of Solihull health authority's proposals for 24-hour accident and emergency services; [40226]

(3) what assessment he made of the provision of bus services from remote villages to Birmingham Heartlands trust when he made his decision to merge Birmingham Heartlands hospital with Solihull hospital; and if he will make a statement. [40233]

Mr. Horam: Provision of accident and emergency services were included in the consultation document, "Difficult Choices", which was considered when making the decision to approve the merger of Birmingham Heartlands hospital and Solihull hospital. Issues surrounding patient access were raised during consultation on the formal merger proposal.

Since the merger took place consultant cover has improved in the Solihull accident and emergency department—from 0.5 whole-time posts to two—and the number of patients treated locally at the Solihull site is increasing with plans to treat an additional 16,000 patients at the hospital in the coming year.

Diabetes

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the mortality rate from diabetes by county of birth in the last year. [40129]

Mr. Horam: The following table shows mortality rates for diabetes per county of residence in 1994 the latest figures available. Data by county of birth is not available centrally.

Health Lines

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many health authorities (a) have a staffed service on their freephone health line and (b) pre-recorded taped advice. [40244]

Mr. Malone: All health authorities have responsibility for securing provision of a staffed freephone health information service for their resident populations.

Some choose to provide the service themselves whilst others place contracts with outside providers. In total, there are currently 23 health information service providers covering all health authorities. Of these, five have a pre-recorded taped advice service, in addition to their staffed service.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 30 November, Official Report, column 868, if he will list the nature, value and location of all private finance initiative projects in the NHS with a project value of £1 million or more which have been approved since November 1995. [40281]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Darlington (Mr. Milburn) on 15 January at column 343. Since then a further 19 schemes with a project value of £1 million or over have been approved.

PRIVATE FINANCE SCHEMES WITH A CAPITAL VALUE OF £1 MILLION OR OVER APPROVED SINCE 15 JANUARY 1996

Northern and Yorkshire Region

1. St. James's and Seacroft University Hospital National Health Service Trust—£50 million—paediatric wing, car park, medipark and private patients unit.

2. United Leeds Teaching Hospitals Trust and Bradford Hospitals Trust—£3 million—reconfiguration of pathology laboratories.

3. Leeds Community and Mental Health Services Teaching Hospitals NHS Trust—£2.5 million—North West community Unit for the Elderly.

4. Leeds Community and Mental Health Services Teaching Hospitals NHS Trust—£2.5 million—West Central Community Unit for the Elderly.

Trent Region

5. Rotherham General Hospitals NHS Trust—£3.4 million—clinical waste incinerator.

6. Rotherham General Hospitals NHS Trust—£1.1 million—concourse development.

7. Nottingham Ambulance NHS Trust—£1.3 million—radio replacement scheme.

Anglia and Oxford Region

8. Royal Berkshire and Battle NHS Trust—£20 million—2 multi-storey car parks, office accommodation, private patient wing, leisure centre and retail outlets.

9. Norfolk and Norwich NHS Trust—£170 million—new District General Hospital.

North Thames Region

10. Chelsea and Westminster Hospital NHS Trust—£5 million—Hospital Information Support System.

11. Central Middlesex NHS Trust—£18 million—Ambulatory Care and Diagnostic Centre

South Thames Region

12. Mayday Healthcare NHS Trust—£5 million—clinical information system.

13. Mayday Healthcare NHS Trust—£6.1 million energy centre.

South and West Region

14. Swindon and Marlborough NHS Trust—£90 million rebuilding scheme at Princess Margaret Hospital.

West Midlands Region

15. City Hospital NHS Trust—£2.9 million—replacement patient administration scheme.

North West Region

16. Warrington Hospitals NHS Trust—£1 million—magnetic resonance imager (MRI).

17. Bolton Community NHS Trust—£1.6 million—Primary Care Resource Centre.

18. Liverpool Women's Hospital NHS Trust—£2.7 million—Hospital Information Support System.

19. Lancashire Ambulance Service NHS Trust— £2.1 million—mobile radio communications system.

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the total value of private finance initiative projects in the NHS with project values of less than £1 million that have been approved in each financial year up to 1995–96 and so far in the current financial year. [40282]

Mr. Horam: The information requested is not available centrally.

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much capital spending has so far been committed by the private sector for the current financial year in respect of health service projects under the private finance initiative. [40338]

Mr. Horam: Information on the amount of capital committed by the private sector is not collected centrally. Capital expenditure incurred in the building and provision of facilities for a health service project occurs before the project becomes operational. The national health service thereafter is committed to the revenue payments for the service provided by the private sector in projects under the private finance initiative.

Mental Health

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) ethnic minority and (b) white patients were admitted to mental health beds in the last available year. [40138]

Mr. Burns: Information concerning the ethnic background of hospital in-patients was collected centrally for the first time in 1995–96. This information is not yet available.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) ethnic minority and (b) white patients were sectioned under the Mental Health Act 1983 in each year since 1983. [40139]

Mr. Burns: This information is not available centrally.

Funding

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research is being carried out with regard to the allocation of funding in NHS health trusts. [40182]

Mr. Horam: Any research into the allocation of funding within national health service trusts is a matter for the individual trust concerned. Trusts are not funded directly by the Department but from contracts with purchasers.

Paediatric Intensive Care Beds

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many paediatric intensive care beds were in use in (a) 1979 and (b) 1996; [40194]

(2) how many paediatric intensive care beds per head of the population there were in (a) West Yorkshire and (b) the rest of England in the last year for which figures are available. [40183]

Mr. Horam: Information on provision of paediatric intensive care is not available for 1979. Children from West Yorkshire needing such care may receive it within Northern and Yorkshire region, or in the adjoining north west region. Information for Northern and Yorkshire and for England is as follows.

Area	Beds open[1] April 1996	Population[2] (0–16 years)	Beds per thousand children
Northern and Yorkshire Region	28	1,467,354	1 : 52
England	196	10,639,921	1 : 54

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what steps his Department is taking to ensure the adequate provision of paediatric intensive care beds in the Yorkshire region. [40205]

Mr. Horam: Health authorities in West Yorkshire have agreed funding for additional paediatric intensive care beds at both United Leeds Teaching Hospitals, national health service trust and St. James's and Seacroft University Hospitals national health service trust. An emergency bed service will also be in place by this winter, providing accurate information on the availability of intensive care beds, including paediatric provision.

Community Health Councils

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what access the Association of Community Health Councils of England and Wales has to his Department's CHC policy and liaison group; and if he will make a statement; [40114]

(2) if he will make it his policy (a) that the relationship existing before 1 July between his Department and individual community health councils and (b) the independence of community health councils will be protected following the setting up of the CHC policy and liaison group. [40119]

Mr. Horam: The role of the community health council policy and liaison group is to advise on policy and operational matters concerning CHCs in general. It has no involvement with individual CHCs, which remain statutorily independent bodies.

The Association of CHCs for England and Wales has been invited to meet with the group twice yearly and the first meeting will take place on 17 October.

Bishop Auckland Hospital

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he expects the contract for the private finance initiative rebuilding of Bishop Auckland hospital to be signed; if he will publish the terms of the contract; what private finance initiative funding will be provided; and if he will make a statement. [40173]

Mr. Horam: The full business case for the private finance initiative scheme at Bishop Auckland hospital is currently with the National Health Service Executive and Her Majesty's Treasury. Ministers are also currently considering the outcome of County Durham health authority's review of acute services in Durham. No decision can be taken on the approval of the PFI scheme at Bishop Auckland hospital until this exercise is complete. It is too early to say what the final capital value of the PFI scheme will be, or when the contract is likely to be signed.

The terms of the contract will be commercial in confidence.

Health Information Service

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what obligations rest on health authorities to make NHS users aware of the freephone health information service; and if he will make a statement on how this obligation is being fulfilled. [40243]

Mr. Malone: Guidance on the provision of the freephone health information service (HSG(95)44—copies of which are available in the Library—requires health authorities to ensure that details concerning the availability of the service, including opening times, are widely publicised. How this is best done is determined locally.

Secure Hospitals

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many (a) violent offences and (b) other offences have been committed by individuals released from secure hospitals under the Government's care in the community programme; and if he will make a statement. [39890]

Mr. Burns: The figures shown in the table include restricted patients discharged from national health service and independent hospitals. Separate figures are not kept on patients discharged from secure hospitals and data on unrestricted patients is not available.

Table showing reconviction of restricted patients

Depression

Mr. Barry Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what studies have been (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into (i) how many working days in the UK each year are lost as a result of and (ii) the cost of depression. [40303]

Mr. Burns: We are not aware of any such studies.

Mr. Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many cases of depression have been diagnosed in the UK in each of the past five years; and if he will make a statement. [40302]

Mr. Burns: This information is not available centrally for England. Questions relating to Wales, Scotland and Northern Ireland are matters for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales and Scotland and my right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland respectively.

Mr. Porter: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimates he has made of the cost of the incidence of depression to the UK economy. [40304]

Mr. Burns: We have made no such studies or estimates.

Blood Products

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospitals have installed equipment to read the new bar code system for blood products; and what estimate he has made of the number of hospitals which require such equipment. [40291]

Mr. Horam: The new bar coding system for blood bags which is currently being introduced by the national blood service is for internal use. It does not require the installation of new equipment by hospitals, as existing bar codes continue in use alongside the new ones.

Emergency Ambulance Services

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will take steps to ensure in the trials he is initiating concerning prioritisation of emergency ambulance calls that (a) those responsible for such judgments have had extensive crew experience and (b) a full report of the initial schemes is (i) made public and (ii) open to comment prior to extensions of the principles elsewhere. [40401]

Mr. Horam: We have accepted the recommendation of the steering group on ambulance performance standards that responses to 999 calls be prioritised according to the seriousness of the patient's clinical need. The principle of call prioritisation was endorsed in the consultation document published in July 1995, copies of which are available in the Library, and the proposed changes were widely supported.

Two call prioritisation systems have been approved. These have been successfully operated in other countries and have already been tested in two United Kingdom ambulance services alongside existing methods of ambulance despatch. A research report on these systems was published in July 1996, copies of which are available in the Library, and found both safe and reliable. Decisions as to the priority of calls can safely be made by control room staff trained to operate these systems.

Four ambulance services plan to implement call prioritisation from 1 April 1997. The Department of Health is commissioning a study of the new systems in operation in these services and will publish this.

Abortions

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many abortions took place under the NHS during each of the past five years; and what the estimated cost was in each year. [40459]

Mr. Horam: The number of national health service abortions performed to residents and non-residents of England and Wales, for the years 1991–94 inclusive can be found in the relevant year's edition of "Abortion Statistics, England and Wales, Series AB numbers 18-21", published by HMSO, copies of which are available in the Library.

The provisional total for the number of abortions which took place under the NHS in 1995 is 108,930.

Information on the cost of an abortion is no longer collected centrally. Therefore no estimate can be made.

Chernobyl

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to the Parliamentary Under Secretary of State's letter—DOH(6)4362/92—of 12 May to the hon. Member for Linlithgow, what is the result of the investigations of chemicals which might contribute to germ-line variation. [40460]

Mr. Horam: Investigations into the germ-line effects pursuant to the findings in children born in Belarus contaminated by the Chernobyl accident are being carried out under the European Union radiation fission safety programme. New studies will attempt to avoid possible confounding factors by using a local control population. These studies are likely to continue for some years before publication of results.

Prostin E2

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the side effects of the labour-inducing drug Prostin E2; and if he will make a statement. [40326]

Mr. Malone: As for all marketed medicines, the side effects of Prostin E2 were assessed at the time of granting of the marketing authorisation and continue to be monitored by the Medicines Control Agency. The recognised side-effects are described in the manufacturer's product information, which is authorised by the licensing authority.

Bed Closures

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the likely level of bed closures in the South Thames and North Thames regions (a) in the remainder of the current financial year and (b) in 1997–98. [40597]

Mr. Malone: It is for health authorities to plan an appropriate level of service for local people, and for national health service trusts to determine the bed capacity required to meet those needs.

Measles, Mumps and Rubella Vaccine

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on the consultation undertaken with (a) general practitioners and (b) potential recipients on the second MMR vaccination programme in schools begun on 1 October; and what is the estimated cost of the programme. [40493]

Mr. Horam: The introduction of a second dose of measles, mumps and rubella vaccine into the United Kingdom childhood immunisation programme was recommended by the Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation, an independent expert committee which advises the UK health departments. The JCVI contains a wide range of expert knowledge, including people working in the field of child health, general practice and nursing. The Chief Medical Officer held a consultative meeting with senior representatives of the Royal College of General Practitioners, the general medical services committee of the British Medical Association, the Health Visitors Association, the Royal College of Nursing and the Royal College of Midwives before announcing the introduction of the second dose and received the full endorsement of these professional organisations for this improvement to the childhood immunisation programme. The chairman of the GMSC, along with representatives of the RCGP, HVA, RCN and RCM, attended the press launch of the second dose and gave it his full backing.

The recommendation to offer the second dose was a clinical decision. However, during the 1994 measles-rubella schools immunisation campaign the Department was made very aware of considerable support from parents, whose children were too young for the campaign, for their children to have boosters as well. The uptake of 92 per cent. achieved during the measles-rubella campaign was a clear demonstration of children's and parent's desire to be fully protected against these diseases. Consultation with the parents of potential recipients takes place between doctor and parent on an individual basis. Officials also met representatives of the Association of Parents of Vaccine Damaged Children before the introduction of the second dose.

The annual cost of the routine second dose is about £7 million.

South Thames Medical Directors

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what action he has taken in response to a letter to him from the South Thames medical directors dated 26 February; and if he will place a copy of his reply in the Library. [40598]

Mr. Malone: The Secretary of State asked William Wells, chairman, South Thames region, to consider the medical directors' letter in carrying forward the programme of work on emergency and intensive care that he announced in Parliament on 6 March 1996. A copy of the correspondence will be placed in the Library.

Health Services (London)

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) what assessment he has made of the number of cancellations of elective surgery in London hospitals last winter and the consequent impact upon both (a) patients and (b) the health service; and what action he has taken to prevent a recurrence of such cancellations; [40596]

(2) what assessment he has made of the congestion in accident and emergency departments in London last winter; and what action he has taken to remedy the situation [40595]

Mr. Malone: The Secretary of State assured the House on 6 March 1996, Official report, column 356, that the national health service would learn from the experiences of last winter. Since then, preparing for emergency demand in winter has been a priority, and every health authority working with its trusts has prepared plans. The plans reflect local circumstances and national guidance and good practice. In drawing them up, health authorities and trusts have considered relevant local factors such as trends in activity and emergency admissions, the capacity for providing treatment and the scheduling of non-urgent treatments, the provision of intensive care facilities, bed management within hospitals and arrangements for the admission and discharge of patients, and developments and initiatives in patient care and treatment. The Secretary of State received a report, on those plans from the chief executive of the NHS Executive at the end of September.

Health authorities and NHS trusts across the two Thames regions have produced action plans for improving emergency care services which are being refined and will be monitored throughout the winter. Implementation plans for the co-ordination of accident and emergency services across London are being consulted upon.

Pharmaceutical Price Regulation Scheme

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) when he expects to conclude negotiations on the 1993 annual financial returns for the PPRS; [40357]

(2) what excess profits have been repaid by rebate or price reduction, and by how many pharmaceutical companies, for their 1993 PPRS sales. [40358]

Mr. Malone: Aggregate information on repayments for the 1993 round of annual financial returns will be published next spring in the Department of Health's second report to Parliament on the pharmaceutical price regulation scheme.

Children's Services

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals his Department has made for revising the formula used to calculate the standard spending assessments for children's services to be used in the financial year 1997–98; and what assessment he has made of the effect of those revisions on the annual allocations for the London borough of Newham in (a) cash and (b) percentage terms compared to 1996–97. [40408]

Mr. Burns: All proposals for changes to the calculation of standard spending assessments for 1997–98 are described in the report of the standard spending assessments sub-group of the settlement working group, copies of which are available in the Library.

Research Funding

Sir Julian Critchley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research funding the Government have provided for (a) breast cancer, (b) AIDS and (c) prostate cancer in each of the last five years. [40399]

Mr. Horam: The information is shown in the tables:

(a) Breast cancer

£000s

	1990–91	1991–92	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95
Medical research council	2,700	1,600	3,100	3,100	3,114
Department of Health	381	526	607	725	888
Scottish Office Home and Health Department	138	13	84	123	282

(b) AIDS

£000's

	1990–91	1991–92	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95
Medical research council	13,300	15,900	15,300	16,200	14,900
Department of Health	593	786	789	834	693
Scottish Office Home and Health Department	163	139	97	78	169

(c) Prostate cancer

£000's

	1990–91	1991–92	1992–93	1993–94	1994–95
Medical research council	300	300	300	78	0

Government funding for research takes account of activity in other sectors. The cancer charities spent some £105.6 million on research into cancer in 1994–95. There is very little charity research expenditure on AIDS.

Occupational Ill Health

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what estimate he has made of the average annual costs to the NHS of treating occupational ill health over the last 10 years. [40418]

Mr. Horam: This information is not collected centrally.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Out-of-hours Service

Mr. Hoyle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the demand on the out-of-hours emergency payments service of the Benefits Agency (a) nationally, (b) in the north-west and (c) in Warrington for the financial year 1995–96. [37556]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of Income Support is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Doug Hoyle, dated 19 July 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking if he will make a statement on the demand on the out of hours (emergency payments) service of the Benefits Agency (a) nationally, (b) in the North West and (c) in Warrington for the financial year 1995–96.

The information is not available in the format requested. This is because statistics are collated at Area Directorate (AD) level and not by region. The "North West" region is taken to be the area covered by Cheshire, Greater Manchester, Merseyside and Lancashire. Prior to April 1996, the ADs covering the north west were Merseyside, Greater Manchester and Lancashire and Cumbria.

Below I have, listed the number of referrals to the Out of Hours Service (OOHS) for the year 1 April 1995 to 31 March 1996. The number of referrals for Warrington is included in the total referrals for Greater Manchester (AD).

It should be noted that a referral means a contact by the customer or by a third party on their behalf. Approximately 50 per cent. of the referrals require a visit by the Benefits Agency. There are no figures kept about the success or otherwise of those visits.

1995–96 referrals to OOHS

National: 54,868

Merseyside AD: 4,405

Greater Manchester AD: 2,977

Lancashire and Cumbria AD: 2,648

From April 1996 these ADs have merged into two which are North West Coast and Greater Manchester ADs.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Ethnic Minorities

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many women from ethnic minorities are employed by his Department and its agencies; at what grade; and what measures he has taken to encourage the (a) recruitment, (b) employment and (c) promotion of women from ethnic minorities within his Department and its agencies. [39904]

Mr. Burt: The Department employs 3,179 ethnic minority women. Eight of these are in grades 3 to 7, 552 are in middle management grades and 2,620 are in clerical or other grades.

The Department and its agencies follow the Cabinet Office guidance and civil service recruitment policies and procedures which incorporate best recruitment practices. This includes placing advertisements in the ethnic minority press and with local racial equality councils. The adverts routinely incorporate a welcoming statement to minority groups including ethnic minorities.

Where there are significant ethnic minority populations in the catchment areas, outreach work has been undertaken. Recruitment exercises are monitored to ensure equal treatment for all applicants and recruitment panellists have received equal opportunities awareness training.

The Department and its agencies monitor by gender, disability and ethnicity all its personnel policies, practices and procedures to ensure that they are free of bias and prejudice. They are committed to following the policies in the Cabinet Office programme for action on race and have actively supported research commissioned by the Cabinet Office into the potential double disadvantage faced by ethnic minority women in the civil service.

Staff are encouraged to attend appropriate development training, giving them the opportunity to develop skills that will better prepare them for promotion opportunities. Also available are positive action training courses for women, ethnic minorities and staff with disabilities.

Each step in the promotion process is subjected to equal opportunities monitoring. All promotion board panellists have received appropriate equal opportunities, to ensure staff are promoted on merit.

Family Expenditure Survey

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to his answer of 21 June, Official Report, column 635, if he will list the distribution of income by decile group in each year from 1979 to 1992–93, including the self-employed, as in table A1 in the households below average income report for 1995 (a) unadjusted and (b) adjusted in accordance with the statistical practice of correcting for variations in FES response which he reports to his Department has applied to this series of low income surveys. [40204]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The information is as follows:

Changes in real income by decile group 1979 to 1992–93 including the self-employed

(a) Unadjusted

1. Incomes are £ per week equivalised at March 1995 prices.
2. Estimates in brackets ( ) are particularly uncertain.

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what were the factors taken into account in postponing publication from July to November of the households below average income report. [40152]

Mr. Mitchell: The later publication this year of households below average income—HBAI—is due to several factors. The first is that the family expenditure survey has moved from a calender year to a financial year basis. As a natural consequence, the FES data was available to the Department of Social Security nearly three months later than in the previous year. Last year's HBAI reported on the period ending December 1993; this year's will report on the period ending March 1995. In the current round of HBAI preparation, DSS analysts have undertaken additional tasks: principally, a review of methodology and the preparation of data from the family resources survey on which future editions of HBAI will be based. The processing of the FRS data, which became available in the spring, for HBAI analysis has been a substantial piece of work which is still in progress. The HBAI will be published as soon as the analysis is complete, which we expect to be in mid-November.

Statutory Sick Pay

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what steps his Department is taking to ensure that statutory sick pay is paid to individuals who are made redundant within three days of falling ill; [40200]

(2) what steps his Department is taking to ensure that statutory sick pay is paid to people who fall sick in the period immediately following their employers' liquidation. [40206]

Mr. Heald: Individuals who are made redundant would not normally be eligible for statutory sick pay. Where it can be shown that the employer has brought an individual's contract of service to an end solely or mainly to avoid liability for SSP, the employer will continue to be liable to make a payment in the normal way. For employees whose employer has gone into liquidation but whose contracts have not been terminated, any SSP due in that employment from the date of insolvency becomes the liability of the Secretary of State.

These rules are highlighted in the Contributions Agency's statutory sick pay manual for employers, which is issued to all employers.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when his Department last reviewed the guidelines for payment of statutory sick pay to individuals whose firms have been liquidated. [40208]

Mr. Heald: The practical operation of these rules, as with all rules of the statutory sick pay scheme, is continuously monitored by the Contributions Agency. They were last changed in 1987 in order to make it easier for employees of insolvent employers to receive the SSP due to them.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what representations his Department has received regarding the payment of statutory sick pay for people made redundant due to liquidation of their employer. [40207]

Mr. Heald: None.

Decision Making and Appeals

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will publish an analysis of the responses to his consultation paper on improving decision making and appeals in social security, Cm 3328, in a similar format to the analysis of responses to the consultation on Government measures to tackle discrimination against disabled people published in January 1995; [40224]

(2) if he will publish the comments on his consultation paper on improving decision making and appeals in social security, Cm 3328, from (a) the Social Security Advisory Committee, (b) the Council on Tribunals, (c) the Social Fund Commission, (d) the Chief Adjudication Officer and (e) the President of the Independent Tribunal Service; [40225]

(3) if he will place in the Library a list of those who have responded to his consultation papers on improving decision making and appeals in social security, Cm 3328, and if he will place in the Library copies of their responses except where the respondents have requested that their replies be treated in confidence. [40223]

Mr. Roger Evans: We plan to publish a summary analysis of the responses to the consultation on the Government's proposals for improving decision making and appeals in a format broadly similar to that adopted last year for the responses to the consultation document "Government measures to tackle discrimination against disabled people". This included details of respondents but not copies of individual replies.

Housing Benefit (Ashe Hall)

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many residents of Ashe hall, Derbyshire, are currently in receipt of housing benefit. [40333]

Mr. Roger Evans: The Department of Social Security does not collect or keep information about housing benefit recipients at particular addresses. South Derbyshire district council is responsible for administering housing benefit in the area covering Ashe hall in Etwall, Derbyshire. It advises that housing benefit is currently in payment to 16 residents there.

Consultation Papers

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the consultation papers issued in the form of command papers by his Department since July 1988, with the date of publication and the date by which responses were invited in each case; and if he will give similar information so far as it is available in respect of other consultation papers issued by his Department. [40222]

Mr. Burt: The information is in the tables. Table 1 lists all the consultation papers that have been issued in the form of Command Papers since July 1988. Available information about other consultation papers that have been issued by the Department is in table 2.

Table 1: Command papers

Social Fund

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total expenditure of the social fund for each of the past five financial years; and what the administrative costs were and what proportion they were of expenditure. [40284]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is set out in the table.

As the social fund's business involves both paying money out and recovering the amounts awarded as loans, the most appropriate measure of the cost of operating the fund is a comparison between administration costs and gross expenditure plus recoveries. This information is therefore also given in the table.

Year	Gross benefit expenditure £ million	Administration costs £ million	Administration costs as a percentage of gross benefit expenditure	Administration costs as a percentage of gross benefit expenditure plus recoveries
1990–91	280	132	'47	'32.5
1992–93	402	'208	52	35

Year	Gross benefit expenditure £ million	Administration costs £ million	Administration costs as a percentage of gross benefit expenditure	Administration costs as a percentage of gross benefit expenditure plus recoveries
1993–94	442	[2]270	61	41
1994–95	451	209	46	30.5

[1] Includes one off IT development and capital costs of £17 million.

[2] Includes one off IT development and capital costs of £45 million.

[3] Figures differ slightly from those previously published which did not include any cold weather payments.

[4] 1994–95 is the most recent year for which estimated actual administration costs are available.

Family Resources Survey

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if the new family resources survey report for 1994–95 is intended to serve different functions from the households below average income report. [40153]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The family resources survey is a relatively new and unfamiliar survey which collects a wide variety of information which is expected to be of interest outside the Department of Social Security. Hence, to raise awareness in the wider community, the report summarises survey results for 1994–95, gives details on the background to the survey, describes methods used to collect and process the information and discusses data quality. Gross household income is used, in some tables, to group survey households when reporting characteristics of these households. The FRS report does not seek to transform survey data into estimates of the distribution of income in Great Britain. It therefore serves a different function from the households below average income report. The HBAI seeks to provide an accurate picture of the disposable income distribution. This is achieved by undertaking further work on the survey results, for example, adjusting income for household size and composition, creating a measure of "disposable" income, assessing the impact of housing costs and grossing results to reflect the population as a whole. The next edition will include results based on the FRS.

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the equivalent monetary value in pounds per week at April 1995 prices, for the family resources survey report for 1994–95 following table A2 of the households below average income report for 1992–93, before and after housing costs of the decile means and medians of the two poorest decile groups and the richest decile group and the total population mean of (a) single adults and (b) couples with (i) no children, (ii) one child aged three, (iii) one child aged 16 years, (iv) two children aged three and eight years, (v) three children aged three, eight and 11 years and (vi) three children aged 11, 16 and 17 years. [40163]

Mr. Mitchell: The information is not available as processing of the family resources survey data for 1994–95 to provide analyses of income on the households below average income definition has not yet been completed. However some information on this basis will be available in the next edition of households below average income.

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the disposable income of households in (a) the lowest decile and (b) the highest decile in (1) 1994–95 and (2) 1992, at April 1995 prices, on the basis of the family resources survey, for the households with (i) one adult, one child (ii) one adult, two or more children, (iii) one man, one woman, one child, (iv) one man, one woman, two children, (v) one man, one woman, three children, (vi) two adults, four or more children, (vii) three adults, one or more children and (viii) four adults, one or more children. [40188]

Mr. Mitchell: Processing of the family resources survey data for 1994–95 to provide estimates of disposable income by decile has not yet been completed. Some information on this basis will be available in the next edition of households below average income, which is expected to be published in mid-November. It should then be possible to provide estimates as requested, subject to sample size limitations for some of the smaller groups.

Figures for 1992 based on the FRS are unavailable. The FRS began in October 1992 but did not build to its full fieldwork size until January 1993. The first months were largely intended to test the fieldwork operation of this new complex survey. Results are only partial and have never been validated. The Department does not propose releasing any analyses based on 1992–93 FRS results and the data have not been deposited in the data archive at Essex university.

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security, pursuant to the answer of 19 July 1995, Official Report, column 1264, what was the disposable income of households in the family resources survey of 1994–95 and the family expenditure survey for 1993, at April 1995 prices in (a) the week lowest decile and (b) the highest decile in actual terms per week and as a percentage of the median for (i) the United Kingdom and (ii) Greater London. [40156]

Mr. Mitchell: Figures from the family expenditure survey in 1993 prices were given by my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary in reply to the question of 19 July. It is the normal practice of the Office for National Statistics that FES survey data are available only in the prices of the survey year.

Processing of the family resources survey data for 1994-95 to provide analyses of income on the households below average income definitions has not yet been completed. However some information from both the FES and the FRS will be available in the next edition of the HBAI, which is expected to be published in mid-November. It should then be possible to provide estimates from the HBAI database as requested, subject to sampling size limitations.

Family Credit

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what were the eligibility criteria for family credit in terms of income in 1988 and in each year since then. [40239]

Mr. Roger Evans: The income threshold for eligibility to family credit will vary depending on each family's individual circumstances. For each family size, there is a maximum amount of family credit payable. This consists of an adult credit (the same amount is payable for both couples and lone parents), a child credit for each child (the amount payable depends upon age) and, from July 1995, an additional credit for people who work 30 hours or more a week.

If a family's net income—after allowable disregards—is below an "applicable amount", the maximum amount of family credit is payable. If their income is above the applicable amount, 70p of every £1 of the excess is deducted from the maximum payable.

The level of family credit rates since 1988 are set out in the table.

Family Credit Rates

Reduced Earnings Allowance

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of savings to date from the changes in the reduced earnings allowance; and what estimate he has made of savings over 12 months. [40463]

Mr. Roger Evans: The estimated savings from the changes to reduced earnings allowance introduced with effect from 24 March 1996 are £25 million in 1996–97.

Cold Weather Payments

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the outcome of his review of weather monitoring stations for the purposes of cold weather payments, with specific reference to Tiree and Loch Glascarnoch, Ross-shire. [40660]

Mr. Roger Evans: The review has now been completed. Amending regulations were laid before the House on 11 October.

During last winter, over 7 million payments totalling £62 million were made. A comprehensive review was undertaken, which included commissioning the Meteorological Office to advise on the optimum number of weather stations required to provide national coverage with a reasonable level of local sensitivity. They were also requested to advise on the respective postcode links for each proposed weather station. Representations made by hon. Members were considered by the Meteorological Office in giving its expert advice. I will be writing to each of the hon. Members shortly.

In line with the Meteorological Office expert advice, I propose to increase the total number of weather stations from 55—the number used last winter—to 70. This increased number of weather stations should improve the sensitivity of the scheme throughout the country.

New weather stations at Loch Glascarnoch and Aultbea have been introduced to serve parts of the inland and coastal areas of the hon. Member's constituency. The weather station at Tiree will continue to be used for the Isles of Skye, Tiree, Rhum, Eigg and Muck.

Copies of the Meteorological Office report have been placed in the Library.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the cash and numerical total of cold weather payments made in the last two winters; and if he will make a statement. [40066]

Mr. Evans: The totals for the years 1994–95 and 1995–96 are 10,969 payments worth £76,786 and 7,252,023 payments worth £62,000,000[1] respectively.

The difference in expenditure is not just attributable to the relative severity of each winter; it also reflects the increased value of each payments from £7.00 to £8.50.

[1]Rounded to nearest £1 million.

Compensation Recovery Scheme

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he plans to announce the Government's response to recent consultation exercises on the compensation recovery scheme. [40057]

Mr. Lilley: An announcement of the Government's intention to reform the compensation recovery scheme was made on 9 October. I wrote to the hon. Member at that time.

The Government intend to reform the compensation recovery scheme so that damages for pain and suffering can be paid in full. We therefore propose that compensators should be made liable for all relevant social security benefits paid to the victims of injury or disease. Damages paid to the victim will be adjusted accordingly to ensure that victims are not doubly compensated.

Legislation to reform the compensation recovery scheme will be introduced at the earliest opportunity. We propose that the rules of the reformed scheme will apply to all compensation claims outstanding at the point of change. The implementation date will depend on when parliamentary time can be made available for the necessary amending legislation.

We plan to remove the small payments limit, below which compensation recovery does not take place, at the same time.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many representations he has received from hon. Members concerning complaints and queries of constituents with regard to the Child Support Agency. [40065]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: Information collected on correspondence about the agency's work does not differentiate between complaints and inquiries or requests for information. I am therefore unable to provide specific information relating to the number of complaints received. The table shows the numbers of ministerial correspondence—excluding correspondence principally concerning child support policy issues—received each year since the launch of the Child Support Agency.

	Number
1993–94	[1]6,275
1994–95	1,349
1995–96	1,465
1996–97 (April–August)	688

[1] This is an aggregate figure of chief executive correspondence and ministerial correspondence; separate details for ministerial and chief executive correspondence are not available for 1993–94.

Pensions Ombudsman

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make a statement on the implications of the High Court judgment in the case of Hillsdown Holdings for the powers and procedures of the pensions ombudsman. [39916]

Mr. Heald: I understand that the High Court dismissed the appeal against the pensions ombudsman's determination in the Hillsdown Holdings case. The pensions ombudsman is an independent statutory commissioner. His powers and procedures are set out in the Pension Schemes Act 1993 and in regulations made under that Act. Although these powers are being amended and extended as from April 1997 by the Pensions Act 1995 and consequent regulations, this is not as a result of the Hillsdown Holdings case. We have no plans for any changes following the High Court ruling in that case.

National Insurance

Ms Corston: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what would be total contribution income for national insurance for 1995–96, 2000–01, 2010–11, 2020–21 and 2030–31, assuming (a) present contribution rates, (b) upper and lower earnings levels linked with earnings and (c) upper and lower earnings levels linked with earnings and the upper earnings level raised to 200 per cent. of average earnings, relative to current estimates of expenditure on benefits in those years. [38543].

Mr. Burt [pursuant to the reply, 24 July 1996, c. 562-63]: The information given regarding the estimated contribution income from national insurance in table C was incorrect. The correct information is as follows.

The available information is in the tables.

Table (a): National Insurance Fund—Estimated contribution income [£ billion at 1994–prices] at present contribution rates for 1994–95, 2000–01, 2010—11, 2020–21 and 2030–31 as a percentage of estimated benefit expenditure [£ billion at 1994–95 prices] for those years.

Expenditure	39.9	42.2	50.8	56.4	63.8
Income as a percentage of expenditure	94	110	112	118	116

1.The information given in the tables has been derived from the Government Actuary's Reports on the Third Quinquennial Review under section 137 of the Social Security Act 1975 (HC 160) and on the Financial Provisions of the Pensions Bill 1994 (Cm 2714) by—adjusting the entries in tables E3 and E4 of HC 160 so that the projected contribution income is based on a continuation of the 1994–95 combined Class 1 contribution rate (18.25 per cent.). Hence, the tables give information for 1994–95 rather than 1995–96; adjusting contribution income for the years 2020–21 and 2030–31 to allow for the increased number of contributors expected as a result adjusting the amounts of contracted-out rebate to allow for the difference between rebate rates assumed in HC 160 and those now expected.

2.For table (c), a further adjustment has been made to allow for the change in primary Class 1 contributions and rebates following from increasing the UEL to twice average earnings.

3.The estimated benefit expenditure information given in all three tables is than consistent with increasing the UEL and LEL in line with prices, even where (in tables (b) and (c)) the contribution income figures are based on increasing those limits in line with earnings, and allows for the effects of the Pensions Act 1995.

DEFENCE

Procurement Ethics Code

Mr. Keen: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence where Crown servants were involved in procurement procedure and subsequently joined a relating project company without permission and various sections of the code of procurement ethics are likely to have been breached, what action he will take under section 3.4 of the code. [13980]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Investigations would be made into the circumstances but no action would be taken under section 3.4 of the code since the breach would be of a condition of service and not fraudulent or criminal activity.

Ethnic Minorities

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many women from ethnic minorities are employed by his Department and its agencies; at what grade; and what measures he has taken to encourage the (a) recruitment, (b) employment and (c) promotion of women from ethnic minorities within his Department and its agencies. [39892]

Mr. Arbuthnot: My Department and its agencies have in place a wide range of measures to improve the quantity and level of representation of people of ethnic minority origin—both men and women—in the civilian work force. A separate range of measures is also aimed at all women staff and potential recruits, irrespective of their ethnicity. These measures, which are defined in the MOD's action programmes for race and women, include a civilian ethnic minority steering committee, which meets annually with one of my ministerial colleagues and separately with senior officials; recruitment and promotion monitoring; participation in the Windsor fellowship scheme for graduates of ethnic minority origin; equal opportunities awareness training for staff and managers; and personal effectiveness training programmes for women and ethnic minority staff. My Department has also recently reviewed its equal opportunities policy and practice as these impact on ethnic minority staff and related issues; it is also a member of the business in the community initiative "Race for Opportunity"; and it has participated in a Cabinet Office study to research how "double disadvantage" affects women of ethnic minority origin in the civil service. All of these measures and initiatives contribute to the provision of equality of opportunity in my Department for women from the ethnic minorities. The information requested about the number of ethnic minority women employed in the MOD and its agencies are as follows.

Personnel (Germany)

Mr. Wilkinson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is the annual cost of locally employed civilian personnel who work for the British Army in Germany excluding those working at the headquarters of the Allied Rapid Reaction Corps; [40275]

(2) what is the total annual cost of the stationing of British Army and related British civilian personnel in Germany, excluding those serving in the headquarters of the Allied Rapid Reaction Corps; [40273]

(3) what is the annual cost of (a) British Army personnel serving at the headquarters of the Allied Rapid Reaction Corps in Germany, (b) British civilian personnel serving at the headquarters of Allied Rapid Reaction Corps in Germany and (c) locally employed civilians working for British personnel at the Allied Rapid Reaction Corps in Germany. [40274]

Mr. Soames: The expected cost of British military, British civilian and locally employed civilian personnel working in the headquarters Allied Command Europe Rapid Reaction Corps and British Army (Germany) during the financial year 1996–97 was as follows:

British Military personnel

HQ ARRC: £12.280 million

BA(G): £630.420 million

Total: £642.700 million

British Civilian personnel

HQ ARRC: £0.239 million

BA(G): £60.560 million

Total: £60.800 million

Locally employed civilians

HQ ARRC: £0.240 million

BA(G): £252.52 million

Total: £252.76 million.

These figures reflect personnel salary costs only. It should be noted that a significant proportion of the locally employed civilian work-force is comprised of dependants of British military and civilian personnel.

The impact of the deployment of HQ ARRC and other personnel to former Yugoslavia is not reflected in these figures, as these costs are being captured as part of the overall cost of operations there.

The British civilian and locally employed civilian costs of HQ ARRC are a disproportionately low as HQ United Kingdom Support Command (Germany)—part of British Army (Germany)—provides it with a large number of infrastructure and support services.

Radio Spectrum

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list recent spectrum sharing arrangements between military and civil users. [40318]

Mr. Arbuthnot: My Department has for many years pursued a policy fo sharing its spectrum with civil usage where military interests are not prejudiced. For example, in the 400 to 450 MHz band, channels have been shared or released for civil use including channel tunnel communications co-ordinated with France, private business radio in conurbations, civil data services, police helicopter communications and HM Customs and Excise communications UK-wide.

Shortage of spectrum for cellular telephones led to a sharing arrangement of MOD training spectrum at 870 to 888 MHz and 915 to 933 MHz. As these band are given up by the cellular operators, they will be shared with other civil users under European co-ordination agreements. These frequency bands are subject to retrieval by the Department when necessary.

Wideband channels have been agreed in the bands 2340, 2400 and 2420 MHz for use by outside broadcasting operators, subject to military site restrictions. In addition, two wideband channels at 3425 and 3475 MHz have been agreed for wireless local loop installations, although some prior co-ordination of transmitter sites may be required to protect military installations.

Wideband channels have been agreed for local area network MOD spectrum at 10.15 to 10.3 GHz subject to military site restrictions.

Permanent sharing arrangements exist in the aeronautical radionavigation bands for military and civil aircraft. Similarly, MOD bands are shared with amateur radio operators, on a non-interference basis to military systems, which allows the amateurs the freedom to develop their activities without detailed case-by-case co-ordination.

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made by the joint review of the Radiocommunications Agency and the Ministry of Defence into releasing the entire 225 to 400 MHz band. [40314]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The band is a harmonised band for tactical military communications throughout all NATO nations. In concert with NATO nations, we have agreed to release some spectrum in the band for use by terrestrial digital audio broadcasting and the emergency services. There are no plans to release the whole of the 225 to 400 MHz band for civil use.

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what measures his Department has of the efficiency of its use of the radio spectrum on the basis of (a) time, (b) geography and (c) other criteria.[40312]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The spectrum allocated to the MOD is managed by the Department to meet requirements of the military services in the UK for a wide variety of systems and for those of visiting forces. In these circumstances, sharing in time is rarely an option. Geographic separation is the main criterion for the re-use of frequencies and is widely used in the efficient management of the spectrum. The MOD procedures equipment which is efficient in the use of spectrum when it is suitable for defence needs.

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what estimate he has made of his Department's minimum needs in the radio relay sub-bands in the area of 225 to 400 MHz. [40311]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The band 225 to 400 MHz is a harmonised frequency band throughout all NATO nations for tactical military communications. NATO has agreed to the release of the band 225 to 230 MHz for broadcasting use and two 5MHz sub-bands in the range 380 to 400 MHz for use by the emergency services.

The Army has reviewed its requirements for spectrum to support tactical military communications and has concluded that a further reduction in spectrum available for this purpose in this band would be prejudicial to operational effectiveness.

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what stage has been reached in the monitoring process for the Ministry of Defence's release of the 380 to 399.9 MHz band to civil broadcasting systems in the UK. [40315]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The band 380 to 399.9 MHz has not been designated by the International Telecommunication Union as a broadcast band. Within the Conference of European Postal and Telecommunication Administration nations, the band is one of the four designated to be shared with civilian users. Two sub-bands, 380 to 385 and 390 to 395 MHz, have been released, with the agreement of NATO, for use by the emergency services in NATO countries in Europe.

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what progress has been made by the Radiocommunications Agency and the Ministry of Defence to release the spectrum within the 410 to 420 MHz band for civil use by 1997. [40313]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Discussions between the Ministry and the Radiocommunications Agency of the Department of Trade and Industry have identified two bands of 5 MHz in the 410 to 430 MHz band that can be made available for civilian use by 1997.

Mutual Defence Agreements

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to enter into a bilateral agreement with France similar to (a) the memorandum of agreement on co-operation concerning nuclear safety and security between the USA and France and (b) the 1958 United States–United Kingdom mutual defence agreement. [40279]

Mr. Soames: I have nothing to add to the answer given to the hon. Member on 16 October 1995, Official Report, column 37.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what assessment he has made of the effect on (a) Anglo-French and (b) Anglo-American-French nuclear co-operation of the memorandum of agreement on co-operation concerning nuclear safety and security between France and the United States; [40250]

(2) what assessment he has made of the effect of the memorandum of agreement on co-operation concerning nuclear safety and security which France entered into with the United States on 4 June on the continued implementation of the 1958 mutual defence agreement between America and Britain, with particular reference to the transferral of information. [40278]

Mr. Soames: No such assessment has been made. Bilateral nuclear co-operation between France and the US is essentially a matter for the two Governments concerned.

RAF Lakenheath

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence on what occasions since 1966 Her Majesty's Government have made statements relating to the accident at Lakenheath Air Force base on 26 July 1956; and if he will make a statement. [40489]

Mr. Soames: I assume that the hon. Member is interested in the accident which occurred at RAF Lakenheath on 27 July 1956. On 9 November 1979, the Secretary of State for Defence made a statement about the accident, Official Report, column 321–22. This confirmed that no nuclear materials were involved either within the crashed aircraft or in any of the buildings affected; the US authorities have recently re-confirmed this to have been the case.

Private Finance Initiative

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the use of the PFI for the financing of future military equipment contracts. [39952]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The opportunities for exploiting the private finance initiative are explored in all areas of defence expenditure, including military equipment projects, on a case by case basis. There are currently around 60 projects being tested for PFI potential.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Clelland: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what costs to his Department were incurred by the visit of the Minister of State for the Armed Forces, the hon. Member for Crawley (Mr. Soames), to the north-east of England on Friday 19 July; and what officials of his Department accompanied the Minister. [39967]

Mr. Soames: There were no costs to public funds and no official accompanied me.

Service Men (Active Service)

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 18 July, Official Report, column 645, if he will list the number of British loan service personnel based in the countries listed by him for each of the last 10 years. [40199]

Mr. Soames: Details of the number of British loan service personnel based in individual countries are confidential between Governments.

1st Battalion Grenadier Guards

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what is the current establishment of the 1st Battalion Grenadier Guards; and what is its nominal strength. [40293]

Mr. Soames: The establishment of the 1st Battalion Grenadier Guards is 558. The current strength of the battalion—on 1 September—is 475, although some 25 of these are currently detached on other duties or training. In an operational emergency, most of those detached soldiers could return to regimental duty.

2nd Battalion Grenadier Guards

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many of the 2nd Battalion Grenadier Guards were made redundant when the battalion was disbanded. [40292]

Mr. Soames: The number of the 2nd Battalion Grenadier Guards made redundant are as follows:

	Phase 1 28th February 1993	Phase 2 28th February 1994	Phase 3 28th February 1995	Total
Officers	2	1	0	3
Soldiers	2	23	12	37
Total	4	24	12	40

Northcote Airfield, Humberside

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for what sum Northcote airfield, Humberside was sold. [40294]

Mr. Soames: It is not our practice to disclose the sale price of surplus property as this information is commercially confidential.

RAF Greenham Common

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when Her Majesty's Government were first notified of the matters contained in the report on the B47 accident at RAF Greenham Common, sent to the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent by his Department on 28 September; if the United States authorities have made available to Her Majesty's Government the expurgated sections of the report: and if he will place a copy of the report in the Library. [40490]

Mr. Soames: The circumstances of the accident which occurred at RAF Greenham Common on 28 February 1958 were known immediately after the event, and a statement was made to the House on 5 March 1958, Official Report, columns 133–34. A copy of the expurgated report of the US inquiry in to the accident was received by the Ministry of Defence on 7 August this year, and this is the only version which has been made available to us. I will arrange for a copy of the report to be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence where the contaminated soil and aggregates, removed after the accident at RAF Greenham Common on 28 February 1958, are currently stored: what packaging has been used; what monitoring is conducted to ensure toxic materials, hazardous to the environment, are not released from the burial sites; and what has been the cost to date, in 1996 prices, of the clean–up and subsequent waste management arising from the accident. [40507]

Mr. Soames: The accident at RAF Greenham Common on 28 February 1958 did not give rise to any contaminated soil or aggregates which would have required disposal in the manner suggested. I understand that debris from the accident was disposed of by the US authorities in accordance with their routine procedures as no special precautions were needed. All associated costs were borne by the US authorities.

Gulf War

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will publish the text of the letter sent by his Department to the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent on 7 August on depleted uranium use in the Gulf war. [40500]

Mr. Soames: A copy of the letter has been placed in the Library of the House.

Nuclear Submarine Decommissioning

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has for the disposal of short and long-lived intermediate-level radioactive waste from the nuclear submarine decommissioning programme in the event that the planned construction of a nuclear waste repository by Nirex in Cumbria is delayed. [40511]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Any intermediate-level waste removed during the de-fuelling, de-equipping and lay-up preparation of the submarine would continue to be stored on-site in suitably licensed facilities until such time as a long-term disposal route became available. The perceived final disposal route remains the deep repository being developed by Nirex early next century. This is kept under review to take account of technical and other developments.

Bomber Refuelling (Diego Garcia)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence at what time and on what date the United States Government requested permission to use the British base on Diego Garcia for the re-fuelling of bombers during the US military action against Iraq in September 1996; and when Her Majesty's Government acceded to the request. [40495]

Mr. Soames: A request from the United States Government to use the US-operated facilities on Diego Garcia for tanker refuelling was received by Her Majesty's Government on 2 September and approval for this was given later on the same day.

Ammunition

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list for each year between 1980 and 1990, in which transfers of 155 mm ammunition to NATO allies took place, the amounts involved and the recipient country. [14858]

Mr. Arbuthnot [holding answer 12 February 1996]: My Department has no record of any Government transfers of 155 mm ammunition during the period. It remains Government policy not to reveal details of exports of defence equipment.

Leyland Truck Fleet

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many 4 tonne trucks his Department possesses; when he last purchased Leyland 4 tonne trucks; how many Leyland trucks were purchased at that date; what was the total cost of the order; how many of his Department's tonne trucks are due for a refit; what is the age of the trucks which are to be refitted; and who will carry out the refit of the trucks. [5546]

Mr. Arbuthnot [holding answer 13 December 1995]: The 4 tonne fleet size currently stands at about 11,300—Bedford MK, Bedford MJ and Leyland—vehicles. The Department last procured 4 tonne Leyland trucks in April 1995, and to date the Department has purchased some 4,200 vehicles at a cost of some £190 million. Following completion of the current pilot study of 60 vehicles to ascertain the scope and likely cost of refurbishment, it is planned to carry out a refurbishment programme on about 4,100 Bedford MJ vehicles during 1995–96 to 2002–03. There is no set age which determines when a vehicle will be refitted. Selection for refurbishment will be based on age, tempered by corrosion condition and mileage, targeting those vehicles that will offer the best value for money. The Department plans to carry out the work in-house through the Army Base Repair Organisation—ABRO—making use of its available capacity. All assembly repairs, other than minor repairs, required to support the programme will be supplied by commercial industry. The work-load forms part of the planned programme for the ABRO former district workshops, which is to be market tested, providing an opportunity to industry to bid for the work.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Sandown Bay

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what advice he has issued in respect of the possible effects of the proposed sewer outfall in Sandown bay on the adjoining and nearby fishing grounds and banks. [39780]

Mr. Baldry: None. This Department has not yet been consulted about the changes that may be necessary to Sandown bay sewer outfall to comply with the provisions of the EU's urban waste water treatment directive.

Cattle Exports

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many bovine animals were exported in batches of fewer than 20 animals on the following export health certificates (a) EC57, (b) EC400, (c) EC935 and (d) EC2304 during (i) 1994, (ii) 1995 and (iii) 1996. [39848]

Mrs. Browning: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many bovine animals were exported on export health certificate EC56 during (a) 1994, (b) 1995 and (c) 1996. [39847]

Mrs. Browning: The information requested is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Ministerial Visits

Mr. Rendel: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many visits (i) he and (ii) his Ministers made to (a) the Newbury constituency and (b) other constituencies in the last 12 months. [39868]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: In the last 12 months I have made 19 constituency visits; none of these were to the Newbury constituency. My Ministers have made in 185 constituency visits during the same period; of these 1 was to the Newbury constituency.

BSE and Scrapie

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on progress towards a live test for BSE; and what estimate he has made as to when such a test will be available. [39836]

Mrs. Browning: MAFF has an extensive ongoing research programme into the development of a test to detect BSE in live cattle, valued at £1.825 million this year. Details of this programme were given in the BSE eradication plan, a copy of which is in the Library of the House. It is not possible to estimate when such a test will be developed to a stage when it can be used satisfactorily in the field.

Mr. Ron Davis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many cattle subsequently confirmed with BSE were born in each year from the initial onset of the disease. [40310]

Mrs. Browning: As at 4 October the number of confirmed BSE cases, with known dates of birth, listed by year of birth was:

Year of birth	Number of cases
1974	1
1976	2
1977	10
1978	7
1979	40
1980	101
1981	260
1982	1,395
1983	4,480
1984	8,063
1985	11,039
1986	19,626
1987	36,515
1988	21,649
1989	11,543
1990	4,203
1991	2009
1992	270
1993	3

Mr. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many sheep since 1990 were confirmed as having scrapie (a) in Britain, (b) in France, (c) in Germany, (d) in Italy and (e) in total in the European Community. [39838]

Mrs. Browning: Scrapie is a transmissible spongiform encephalopathy of sheep and goats which has been known for at least 250 years. The following list shows the number of cases of scrapie in Great Britain per annum up to 3 October 1996. Figures for 1990 to 1992 show the number of recorded cases confirmed at veterinary investigation centres. Between October 1990 and August 1992, payments were offered for cases when brain pools were being assembled for research purposes. Scrapie became a notifiable disease on 1 January 1993.

1991: 989
1992: 666
1993: 327
1994: 199
1995: 163
1996: 129

There are few details on the incidence of scrapie in other member states and the EC has acknowledged that the true incidence is not known. The 1994 edition of the "animal Health Yearbook" states that there are no recorded cases of scrapie in Denmark, Finland, Greece, Italy, Luxembourg, Portugal or Spain. Sweden last recorded a case in 1986 and Belgium in 1992. France and Eire are reported to have cases but have not published records of the incidence of the disease. Germany has reported four cases since 1990—one case in each of 1990, 1991, 1995 and 1996.

Mr. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many (a) sheep were confirmed as having scrapie and (b) cattle were confirmed as having BSE in each year since 1990 [39835]

Mrs. Browning: Scrapie is a transmissible spongiform encephalopathy of sheep and goats which has been known for at least 250 years. The following list shows the number of cases of scrapie in Great Britain per annum up to 3 October 1996. Figures for 1990 to 1992 show the number of recorded cases confirmed at veterinary investigation centres. Between October 1990 and August 1992, payments were offered for cases when brain pools were being assembled for research purposes. Scrapie became a notifiable disease on 1 January 1993. From this time onward, cases were confirmed either by histopathology at VICs or by examination of brain by electron microscopy.

Cases of scrapie since 1990 (Great Britain):

1990: 348

1991: 989

1992: 666

1993: 327

1994: 199

1995: 163

1996: 129

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy (BSE) was first identified in November 1986. The following list shows the number of confirmed cases of BSE in Great Britain up to 30 September 1996.

Cases of BSE since 1990 (Great Britain):

1990: 14,181

1991: 25,032

1992: 36,681

1993: 34,370

1994: 23,944

1995: 14,297

Roseclear

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what research he has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into products with similar ingredients to Roseclear remaining on the market; and if he will make a statement. [36415]

Mrs. Browning: We are assessing whether other amateur use products may present similar risks to users as Roseclear. In the light of this, we may require the manufacturers to produce further safety studies.

Fishing Agreements

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what studies (a) he and (b) other Governments of the European Community have (i) commissioned and (ii) evaluated of the effect of fishing agreements made by third-world countries with the Community on the sustainability of their fish stocks and actual or potential effects on their own fishing and related interests. [39908]

Mr. Baldry: United Kingdom registered vessels do not normally fish under fisheries agreements between the European Union and developing countries.

The Overseas Development Administration has funded a number of studies in tropical fisheries management, including one on the licensing of foreign fishing effort in the waters of developing countries, aimed at maximising revenues from these fisheries whilst maintaining their resources. The German Government have also funded some work. In addition, the European Commission evaluates all fisheries agreements between the EU and developing countries and is committed to their being balanced in the interests of both parties as well as responsible in terms of fishing levels and practises.

Casualty Animals

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what incentives exist to ensure that sick casualty animals are given the same treatment at slaughter as healthy animals. [39955]

Mrs. Browning: I assume the hon. Member is referring to the humane treatment of animals at slaughter. There are extensive provisions in the Welfare of Animals (Slaughter or Killing) Regulations 1995 to ensure welfare at slaughter of all farmed animals, whether or not for human consumption, and regardless of whether they are sick or injured. It is an offence under these regulations to cause any animal any avoidable excitement, pain or suffering.

It is also an offence under the legislation on the welfare of animals during transport to transport any animal if this is likely to cause it unnecessary suffering. Where an animal is unfit to travel it should be slaughtered on farm. Such slaughter is governed by provisions in the 1995 regulations.

Cattle Slaughter Scheme

Dr. Lynne Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what checks are in place to ensure that the slaughter of all animals in the bovine spongiform encephalopathy cull is in accordance with regulations under the Agriculture (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1968 and the Welfare of Livestock Regulations 1994. [39953]

Mrs. Browning: The welfare at slaughter of all animals, including those in the over thirty month slaughter scheme, is subject to the requirements of the Welfare of Animals (Slaughter or Killing) Regulations 1995. These are enforced in all abattoirs by the Meat Hygiene Service.

Dr. Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures he has taken to ensure that animals due for culling are adequately fed. [39956]

Mrs. Browning: The responsibility for ensuring that animals are properly cared for, fed and watered rests with farmers. Advice has been made available on planning feed requirements in the light of current conditions. The State Veterinary Service and ADAS have been instructed to be particularly vigilant for welfare problems and to take action where appropriate. We have also made compliance with welfare requirements, including those that apply during transport, a clear condition of the over thirty month scheme.

Dr. Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what (a) logistical and (b) economic reasons prevent cattle from being culled on farm; and if he will make a statement. [39954]

Mrs. Browning: EC Regulation 716/96 governing the over thirty month scheme requires that the cattle be slaughtered in specially designated slaughterhouses, except where animal welfare considerations necessitate the on-farm slaughter of an animal. This requirement enables appropriate veterinary and administrative controls to be applied in order to prevent any part of the animals from entering the food chain and to protect Community and UK Exchequer funding of the scheme.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what estimate he has made of the percentage of cattle slaughtered under the selective cull scheme which could be incubating bovine spongiform encephalopathy; and if he will make a statement; [40260]

(2) if he will press for extension of the selective slaughter policy in the event that a positive link between new cases of bovine spongiform encephalopathy and imported cattle is established; and if he will make a statement; [40125]

(3) what assessment he has made of whether cattle slaughtered under the selective cull scheme could be incubating BSE; and if he will make a statement; [40258]

(4) what assessment he has made of the effect of the implication of the accelerated slaughter scheme on the number of cases of active BSE; and if he will make a statement; [40261]

(5) what is his estimate of the reduction in the number of cases of active bovine spongiform encephalopathy which would be removed from the statistics by the implementation of the accelerated slaughter scheme; and if he will make a statement. [40257]

Mrs. Browning: For the present, the Government are not proceeding with the selective cull of cattle in relation to BSE, but will return to cull options in the light of the developing science.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what estimates he has made of the percentage of cattle slaughtered under the over 30 months slaughter scheme which could be incubating BSE; [40256]

(2) what assessment he has made of whether cattle slaughtered under the over 30-months slaughter scheme could be incubating BSE; and if he will make a statement. [40259]

Mrs Browning: No estimates of the percentage of cattle slaughtered under the over 30 month slaughter scheme which could be incubating BSE are available. It is a requirement that all animals slaughtered under the scheme are destroyed and so cannot enter the human or animal feed chains.

Ethnic Minorities

Ms. Abbott: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many women from ethnic minorities are employed by his Department and its agencies; at what grade; and what measures he has taken to encourage the (a) recruitment, (b) employment and (c) promotion of women from ethnic minorities within his Department and its agencies. [39901]

Mr. Boswell: The number and grades of known ethnic minority women in the Ministry including its agencies is as follows:

Grade equivalent	Number
Grade 7	2
SEO	3
HEO	12
EO	29
AO	99
AA	91
Total	236

The Ministry has in place comprehensive strategies aimed at ensuring equality and fair representation in recruitment, retention and development of both women staff and of staff of ethnic minority background. These strategies form part of the Ministry's wider equal opportunities policy.

Cattle Imports

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what evidence he has assessed which suggests that imported replacements for cattle lost in the bovine spongiform encephalopathy cull are putting the health of the national dairy herd at risk from (a) warbles, (b) ticks, (c) brucellosis, (d) foot-and-mouth and (e) bovine pleuropneumonia; and if he will make a statement. [40123]

Mrs. Browning: I am not aware of any evidence to suggest that cattle imported to replace cattle to be slaughtered under the BSE control programme would put the health of the national dairy herd at risk. Clearly increasing trade in live animals does increase disease risk but we are satisfied that the rules for imports of livestock into Great Britain strike the right balance between the removal of barriers to trade and the need to prevent the introduction and spread of serious diseases.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many imported cattle are currently estimated to be at risk from bovine spongiform encephalopathy and if he will make a statement. [40126]

Mrs. Browning: Apart from the United Kingdom there have been recorded cases of BSE in indigenous cattle in France, Portugal, the Republic of Ireland and Switzerland. The numbers of BSE cases confirmed in these countries indicate that the risk of BSE infected cattle being imported is low. The European Commission has called for studies to determine the precise extent of BSE in the Community. A small number of cases of BSE have been recorded in the UK in imported animals but only one, which came from France, is considered with certainty to have been infected before importation.

Pet Food

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how much mammalian meat and bone meal from bovine sources is incorporated into pet food; and if he will make a statement; [40228]

(2) how much mammalian meat and bone meal is incorporated into pet food; and if he will make a statement. [40227]

Mrs. Browning: Statistics for the total quantity of mammalian meat and bone meal from bovine sources incorporated into pet food are not available.

Because of our concerns that pet food containing MBM might present a possible risk of cross-contamination of livestock feed, new measures to prevent this were introduced on 1 August. The Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy Order 1996 now prohibits the production of this material on the same premises as livestock feed unless this takes place in a separate building and there is no contact with equipment or vehicles used in the production of livestock feed.

Where pet food containing MBM is stored or sold it must now be either physically separated form any feed for livestock or securely packaged with no leakage or spillage. Equipment used for handling or moving the material must not be used for livestock feed. Pet food containing MBM must not be transported with feed for livestock unless both types of material are securely packaged with no spillage or leakage.

The Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy Order 1996 also generally makes it an offence for MBM or material containing MBM to be present on farms or at feed mills. The only legitimate destination for MBM is now for pet food, for inclusion in domestic fertiliser or disposal to landfill (for material produced by the slaughter of animals under 30 months of age going for human consumption). The legislation requires that all movements and use of MBM have to be recorded and accompanied by appropriate documentation. This will ensure that all consignments of MBM, whether produced in this country or imported, are fully traceable.

Food Surpluses

Mr. Dowd: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans exist for EU food surplus distribution schemes in the next 12 months; and if he will give details of them. [40189]

Mr. Baldry: An EU surplus food scheme was introduced in 1988. This will continue in place next year, but there are no plans to distribute food in the United Kingdom through the scheme. Last November my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food announced, as part of the Government's expenditure plans, the UK's permanent withdrawal from participation, in line with the recommendations of the Ministry's fundamental expenditure review.

Bovine Somatotropin

Mr. Chris Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to allow the experimental use of the growth hormone BST on dairy cattle in the United Kingdom. [40229]

Mrs. Browning: None. The use of BST in dairy cattle is subject to an EC moratorium until 31 December 1999, which allows for limited practical tests to obtain any additional scientific data that might be taken into account in taking a final decision on the authorisation of BST. Applications for such tests would have to be approved by the EC's Standing Veterinary Committee. No application has been received in the United Kingdom.

Bovine Brain and Spinal Columns

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what health and safety requirements in respect of the removal of the brain and spinal column from cattle have been published and on what date; from what date such material was required to be removed; and if he will make a statement. [40249]

Mrs. Browning: The Bovine Offal (Prohibition) Regulations 1989, which came into force on 13 November 1989, required brain and spinal cord, as well as certain other offals, to be treated as specified bovine offal (now known as specified bovine material—SBM) and prohibited such material from use for human consumption.

The Department of Health in conjunction with the Health and Safety Executive and the Advisory Committee on Dangerous Pathogens have published a number of guidelines on the handling of brain and spinal cord and other BSE issues. These include "Categorisation of pathogens according to hazard and categories of containment", HSE and DoH, 1990, and "Precautions for work with human and transmissible Spongiform Encephalopathies", ACDP, HSE and DoH, 1994.

In addition, the Health and Safety Commission issued on 16 August this year, new general guidance on BSE for occupational groups. This new guidance re-affirms the precautions recommended in the other guidance material on BSE published since 1990 as outlined above. It follows a detailed review of all the earlier publications specific to the various sectors of employment. This new guidance has been published jointly by the HSC, the Department of Health and MAFF.

Crayfish

Mr. William Ross: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the number of sites in the United Kingdom in which the American Signal crayfish, Pacifartacus Leniusulus, is (a) present and (b) breeds; and what effect its presence has had on the native British white clawed crayfish. [40381]

Mr. Baldry: American signal crayfish are widespread in England, predominantly south of a line between the Wash and the Bristol Channel, and also in parts of Wales. There are no known populations of signal crayfish in Scotland or in Northern Ireland. Many populations of native British white clawed crayfish have been displaced by the larger, more aggressive signal crayfish which breed and grow more quickly. They have also been affected by the fungal disease known as crayfish plague, which can be carried by signal crayfish.

Woodland (North Yorkshire)

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what acreage of woodlands in North Yorkshire was owned by the Government in (a) 1979 and (b) 1996; [38930]

(2) if he will list the (a) name, (b) location, (c) acreage and (d) date of exchange of contracts of each area of woodland (i) sold and (ii) bought by the Government in

North Yorkshire since 1979; and if he will state in relation to each sale whether the new owner permits public access to that land; [38931]

(3) if he will list the (a) name, (b) location and (c) acreage of each area of Government-owned woodland in North Yorkshire which is currently up for sale. [38932]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 23 July 1996]: The subjects of the question relate to matters undertaken by Forest Enterprise. I have asked its chief executive, Mr. Gordon Cowie, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Gordon M. Cowie to Mr. Hugh Bayley, dated 14 October 1996:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply to your Questions about Forestry Commission land in North Yorkshire. (38930) (38931) (38932)

The Forestry Commission disposals programme commenced in July 1981 and therefore information is only available from that date. In 1981, the Forestry Commission owned 26,988 ha of land in North Yorkshire, while the current figure in 1996 is 22,060 ha.

To answer your question on particular sales and purchases in North Yorkshire I enclose the following information:-

Annex A—a list of land sold since 1981

Annex B—details of the one area acquired since 1981

Annex C—a list of land currently for sale, either on the Open Market or by Negotiation

The arrangements for Continued Public Access were only introduced in October 1991 and only two sales, highlighted in Annex A, have been sold subject to access agreements.

Sand-eels

Mrs. Ewing: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he has taken to assess the impact of industrial fishing for sand-eels along the east coast of the United Kingdom on juvenile stocks of commercial fish species; and if he will make a statement. [39165]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 23 July 1996]: In 1992 the Scottish Office marine laboratory in Aberdeen hosted a scientific meeting convened by the European Commission which concluded that even a major reduction in the sand-eel fishery was unlikely to produce significant benefits for other commercial fish species. The UK enforcement authorities carry out routine monitoring of the sand-eel fishery in UK waters. This monitoring confirms that there is little by-catch of other commercial species. However, given the scale of the fishery, I have pressed for further scientific research and the introduction of further controls.

Agency Printing Costs

Mr. Steen: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the agencies for which his Department is responsible indicating for each the costs incurred for printing (a) all publications and (b) the annual report in the last available year. [38668]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 23 July 1996]: The agencies for which MAFF is responsible are:

Meat Hygiene Service

Pesticide Safety Directorate

Central Veterinary Laboratory

Veterinary Medicines Directorate

Central Science Laboratory

Agricultural Development Advisory Service

All commission the printing of publications and annual report independently. Chief executives have been asked to respond directly giving the information required.

Letter from Johnston McNiel to Mr. Anthony Steen, dated 14 October 1996:

As chief executive of the Meat Hygiene Service your question to the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food relating to the costs incurred for printing all publications and annual report in the last available year has been passed to me for reply with respect to this executive agency.(38668)

The Meat Hygiene Service (MHS) was launched on 1 April 1995 as an Executive Agency of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (MAFF). It took over from some 300 local authorities responsibility for enforcement of the hygiene, inspection and welfare at slaughter legislation in licensed meat premises in England, Scotland and Wales.

In the financial year 1995/96 the MHS spent £21,184 on the publication of its Operation Manual. This manual provides an accessible source of guidance, information and instruction to all inspection staff.

All other MHS publications, such as the Agency's Business and Corporate Plans are produced "in house" at the MHS headquarters in York. This office is located within an existing MAFF building. The MHS benefits from a number of the facilities in this building, notably the MAFF reprographic service. The cost for using this service is included in the total charge for the accommodation billed by MAFF."

In 1995/96 the MHS spent £32,148 on the publication of its Annual Report and Accounts.

Letter from G. K. Bruce to Mr. Anthony Steen, dated 14 October 1996:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply, in respect of the Pesticides Safety Directorate (PSD), to your question regarding the costs incurred for printing of publications.[38668]

In the financial year ended 31 March 1996 the total cost incurred by PSD in printing publications was £6,861. Within that total, the printing costs of the 1994/95 Annual Report and Accounts were £6,516.

Letter from T. W. A. Little to Mr. Anthony Steen, dated 14 October 1996:

The Minister has asked me to reply to your question about printing costs for all VLA publications and the Annual Report in the last available year. [38668]

The VLA was established on 1 October 1995, from the merger of the existing Central Veterinary Laboratory with the Veterinary Investigation Service, which was part of the State Veterinary Service.

For the financial year 1994/95 for the old CVL, the total printing costs for all publications produced by the Agency was £20,332. Printing costs for the Annual Report and Accounts were £1,000.

Letter from John Fitzgerald to Mr. Anthony Steen, dated 14 October 1994:

In the absence of the Chief Executive on business, I have been asked by the Minister to reply on behalf of the Veterinary Medicines Directorate to your question about the costs incurred for printing as this is an operational matter for which the Chief Executive is responsible. [38668]

In the financial year 1995/96 the Veterinary Medicines Directorate spent £15,704 on printing of the Annual Report and Accounts, and £32,582 on all other publications.

Letter from Professor P. I. Stanley to Mr. Anthony Steen, dated 14 October 1996:

PRINTING COSTS

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply to your question about the costs incurred for printing a) all publications and b) the annual report in the last available year in respect of his Central Science Laboratory (CSL) Agency, as this is an operational matter for which I am responsible. [38668]

In 1995/96 the cost of printing all publications was approximately £83K. The cost of printing CSL's 1995/96 Annual Report & Accounts was £7K which will fall in the 1996/97 financial year.

Letter from Phillip Needham to Mr. Anthony Steen, dated 14 October 1996:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply direct to your Parliamentary Question in which you ask for the costs incurred for printing (a) all publications and (b) the annual report in the last available year. [38668]

The total cost incurred for printing ADAS corporate publications in 1995/96 was £73,935 which includes the annual report and accounts at a cost of £800.

Forestry Commission Land

Ms Lynne: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will list the plots of Forestry Commission land in Lancashire which are (a) currently for sale and (b) being considered for sale; and in each case (i) how large the plot of land is, (ii) what consultation will be made in advance of each sale and (iii) how many representations he has received for and against each sale; [39803]

(2) if he will list the plots of land which have been sold by the Forestry Commission in Lancashire in each of the last five years; and in each case (a) how large the plot of land was, (b) what consultation was made in advance of the sale and (c) how many representations he received for and against the sale. [39804]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 24 July 1996]: The subjects of the questions relate to matters undertaken by Forest Enterprise. I have asked its chief executive, Mr. Gordon Cowie, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Gordon M. Cowie to Ms Liz Lynn, dated 14 October 1996:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply to your Questions about Forestry Commission land in Lancashire. [39803 and 39804]

In answer to your questions I enclose the following information:-

Annex A: a list of land sold since 1991

Annex B: a list of land currently for sale, either on the Open Market or by Negotiation, or currently being considered for sale.

All the properties listed were notified in the Estates Gazette and the local authority has been advised of our intention to sell. No representations have been received, either for or against any of these sales.

Meat and Bone Meal

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list all legislation covering the storage of meat and bone meal made from cattle slaughtered under the 30-months scheme. [39120]

Mrs. Browning [holding reply sent on 24 July 1996]: The storage of meat and bone meal after it leaves rendering plants is covered by the Environmental Protection Act 1990, the Environmental Protection (Duty of Care) Regulations 1991 (SI 1991 No. 2839), the Waste Management Licensing Regulations 1994 as amended (SI 1994 No. 1056 and 1996/1279) and the Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy Order 1996 (SI 1996 No. 2007).

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) for how long he estimates meat and bone meal made from cattle slaughtered under the 30-months scheme will be stored in each of the facilities currently in use for this purpose in the United Kingdom; [39122]

(2) for how long he estimates meat and bone meal made from cattle slaughtered under the 30–months scheme will be stored at Woodbury Salterton in Devon. [39121]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 24 July 1996]: The Government are exploring all practicable options for the disposal of meat and bone meal derived from cattle slaughtered under the over 30-month scheme, including incineration and burning for energy recovery. The period for which meat and bone meal is stored will be dependent upon a number of factors, not least the final disposal route chosen, and this has not yet been decided.

Land Development

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was in each year from 1988 to 1995, inclusive, and broken down by agricultural land grade, the area of land proposed for developments of over 20 hectares in size in respect of which his Department has (a) not objected and (b) objected. [39195]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 24 July 1996]: Local planning authorities are required to consult the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food about any development proposal which does not accord with the development plan and which involves, or is likely to lead to, the loss of more than 20 hectares of agricultural land of grades 1, 2 or 3a. The information requested is shown in the table.

[1] Records for 1988 to 1992 do not distinguish the stage at which MAFF was consulted: data may therefore be recorded more than once.
[2] A development proposal referred to MAFF may include land of grades other than 1, 2 and 3a.
[3] Not defined between grades 3a and 3b.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on how many occasions ministerial conference and meeting rooms in the parliamentary estate have been booked in his name, or that of other Ministers in his Department, for meetings with Conservative hon. Members immediately preceding questions to his Department in the current parliamentary Session. [39522]

Mr. Douglas Hogg: Ministers have meetings with hon. Members as and when necessary to discuss a wide variety of matters. Records are not kept which would enable the distinction on the type of meeting to be drawn.

Departmental Vehicles

Ms Glenda Jackson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the number of traffic violations involving departmental vehicles, the nature of the violations, and the total amount of fines arising from those violations, in each year since 1986. [39312]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 24 July 1996]: This information is not available. Central records of traffic violations are not kept and drivers of official vehicles are usually expected to meet the cost of fines resulting from traffic violations themselves.

ENVIRONMENT

Advertisements

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will list the (a) organisations and (b) individuals who responded to the consultation paper of 14 February, concerning outdoor advertisement controls; [40251]

(2) how many of the responses received to the consultation paper concerning outdoor advertisement controls were opposed to the proposals to abolish areas of special advertisement control; [40252]

(3) when he plans to make a decision on the proposals to abolish areas of special advertisement controls; [40253]

(4) what plans he has for a further period of consultation on the proposals to abolish areas of special advertisement control; [40254]

(5) what plans he has to revise the proposals to abolish areas of special advertisement control. [40255]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The matter is still under consideration. When we announce our decision, copies of all the responses to the consultation paper will be made available in the Library.

Climate Change

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he is taking to follow up the recommendation on page 157 of his Department's review of the potential effect of climate change in the United Kingdom in relation to local strategic planning and climate change. [40067]

Mr. Clappison: The review of the potential effects of climate change in the United Kingdom in July looked at the potential impacts of climate change and provided an evaluation of possible adaptive responses. We are considering how to build on this, for example by co-ordinating a programme of integrated assessments of the impacts of climate change on sectors and regions in the UK.

Progress is also being made by more than 300 local authorities, in partnership with all sectors of their communities, to develop local strategies for sustainable development through the local agenda 21 initiative. This includes round table discussions on planning, greening the local economy and transport and sustainability.

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he is taking in respect of the conclusions on page 51 of his Department's review of the potential effects of climate change in the United Kingdom in relating to subsidence risks to buildings. [40068]

Mr. Clappison: My Department is considering the implications of the conclusions of the review of the potential impacts of climate change in the United Kingdom. The Building Regulations 1991 already require buildings to be constructed so that ground movement caused by swelling, shrinkage or freezing of the subsoil will not impair the stability of any part of the building. The potential for such ground movement depends on the nature of the soil and its response to changes in moisture content due to climatic conditions and/or the water demand of trees in the vicinity of the building. Guidance is available from relevant British standards, Institution of Structural Engineers, Building Research Establishment and National House Building Council standard, which generally recommend simple and inexpensive tests for assessing the soil properties and advise on the means of identifying and dealing with the problem, depending on the type of building construction. If buildings on shrinkable clay are constructed in accordance with this guidance, there should not be any significant increase in risk on account of an increase in the number of droughty summers and wetter winters.

Insurance costs associated with swelling and shrinkable ground have generated significant costs related to past developments. However, increasing awareness of the problem and the provision of adequate foundations should enable new development to avoid these costs. My Department has already funded considerable research on the problem which provides the basis for guidance. In the light of that guidance and the existing building control system, directives are unlikely to be necessary, but the research and its dissemination in order to increase awareness will be continued and will take into account amy impact that climate change may have on it.

Ethnic Minorities

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how may women from ethnic minorities are employed by his Department and its agencies; at what grade; and what measures he has taken to encourage the (a) recruitment, (b) employment and (c) promotion of women from ethnic minorities within his Department and its agencies. [39899]

Sir Paul Beresford: The number of women, by grade, from ethnic minorities employed by the Department and its agencies as at 1 July 1996 was a total of 191 at the following levels or their equivalents: two senior executive officers; 11 higher executive officers; 24 executive officers; 101 administrative officers and 53 administrative assistants.

Measures to encourage recruitment, employment and promotion of women from ethnic minorities have been taken under the Department's action plan for people of ethnic minority origin published in 1991, and a similar action plan for women published in 1993. They include: providing a range of equal opportunities training for managers and staff, including positive action management courses for women only and training on developing potential for ethnic minorities only; publicising staff vacancies in specialist recruitment publications featuring role models, to help encourage minority group representation; participation in the Windsor Fellowship scheme, providing vacation work experience for ethnic minority undergraduates; membership of a mentoring consortium led by the East London university to contribute to the development of ethnic minority students by establishing clear links with role models in employment; ensuring that wherever possible a woman serves on promotion and selection panels and that all such panel members are trained to take account of equal opportunities issues; monitoring and analysing success rates by gender and ethnic origin the processes of recruitment, internal postings scheme, annual performance and promotability markings, performance pay and bonuses; identifying any barriers to progress and enhancing the processes to ensure equality of opportunity; the appointment of equal opportunity liaison officers in each directorate to help promote equality of opportunity in the workplace and reflect local needs; annual reporting by the equal opportunities unit to the department's management board, and to all staff, covering the progress of all equal opportunities initiatives.

Joint Nature Conservation Committee

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many members of the Joint Nature Conservation Committee are qualified ecologists; and what plans he has to strengthen the ecological expertise of this committee. [39920]

Mr. Clappison: Of the 13 members of the Joint Nature Conservation Committee, nine have qualifications in earth of life sciences. The other four have backgrounds in farming and broadcasting. On 1 September, two new members of the joint committee took up their appointments. Professors Crawley and Heal bring broad ranging expertise on national and international nature conservation issues to the committee.

Health and Safety

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to extend health and safety protection at work. [39994]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Government have no plans, at present, to extend the application of the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974 and related legislation on health and safety at work.

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the number of people, in each region who are exposed at work (a) to noise at levels which can permanently damage their hearing and (b) to ergonomic problems which can permanently damage their health. [40472]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information is not available in the form requested.

The Health and Safety Executive estimates that around 500,000 people are exposed to noise at work of above 90 dB(A), the level at which employers are legally required to reduce exposure and provide hearing protection.

There are no figures on the number exposed to ergonomic problems at work, either nationally or regionally. Most such problems can readily be put right and do not cause permanent damage to health if appropriate action is taken.

Riparian Surveys

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to promote an extension of river corridor surveys to a full riparian zone survey; and if he will make a statement. [40124]

Mr. Clappison: Between 1989 and 1995, the former National Rivers Authority carried out river corridor surveys along 30,000 km of river in England and Wales. The primary purpose of such surveys is to map, in detail, habitat and vegetation of the channel and banks and to identify features of special interest which require protection. The surveys also record riparian features and land use in a 50 m strip either side of the watercourse.

The Environment Agency is now developing the river habitat survey system for assessing the habitat quality of rivers and streams based on their physical structure. RHS provides a classification system according to river segment type and a comparison with the predicted state of an unmodified channel. The methodology reflects channel features, vegetation in and around the channel, trees, land use, alien plant species and wildlife. An interim report with preliminary results was issued in March. A full report with final results form the period 1994–96 will be published in May 1997.

Local Government Finance

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list, by authority, the surplus achieved on trading accounts for the financial year 1994–95 for (a) refuse collection, (b) street cleaning, (c) building cleaning, (d) school and welfare catering, (e) other catering, (f) vehicle maintenance, (g) ground maintenance and (h) sports and leisure management services delivered by local authorities' direct labour or service organisations in England under the terms of the Local Government Act 1988. [40170]

Sir Paul Beresford: A detailed list of the surpluses achieved for these services for the financial year 1994–95 has been placed in the Library of the House.

Ms Armstrong: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in the Library in machine-readable form a table showing for each authority for each year from 1979–80 to 1996–97 the amount that each authority was deemed to need to spend in cash and in real terms for the purposes of distributing rate support grant; to what extent the figures are comparable, taking account of (a) changes in functions of local authorities, (b) abolition of the Greater London council, the Inner London education authority and metropolitan counties, (c) the local government review and (d) changed arrangements for (i) the assessment of needs, (ii) for the payment of the needs element of the rate support grant and (iii) precepting arrangements; if he will indicate for each authority on a comparable basis of ranking the assessed needs in each year on the basis (1) the percentage of total local government spending and (2) the amount assessed needs per head of population; and if he will make a statement about the needs of (A) Liverpool and (B) Westminster over the period. [40157]

Sir Paul Beresford: Information on the amount which each local authority was deemed to need to spend for the purposes of distributing rate support grant and revenue support grant has been placed in the Library as printed tables and in machine readable form. The data consist of damped needs assessment for 1979–80 and 1980–81, grant-related expenditure assessments for 1981–82 to 1989–90, and standard spending assessments for 1990–91 to 1996–97. Information has been provided in cash terms, in real terms, as an amount per head and as a percentage of the total needs assessment for all English authorities. The figures in real terms are based on the gross domestic product deflator.

The information includes, for 1992–93 and later years, figures recalculated so as to be comparable to those for the year immediately following. These adjusted figures take account of changes in function and geographical responsibility, but not changes in data, methodology, or the national totals. Adjusted figures are not available for earlier years.

The damped needs assessments of 1979–80 for Liverpool and Westminster included allowance for the needs of the authorities which precepted on the two cities. In 1996–97, the needs of precepting authorities are calculated separately. For comparability, therefore, the 1996–97 figures are the total standard spending assessments per head of both the cities and the authorities which precept on them. On this basis, the damped needs assessment for Liverpool in 1979–80 was £327 per head, some 33 per cent. below that for Westminster. In 1996–97, standard spending assessments for the Liverpool area were £1,053 per head, some 25 per cent. below those for the Westminster area. Thus the Liverpool area now has standard spending assessments £111 per head greater than if it had continued to have an assessment 33 per cent. below Westminster's, as it did in 1979–80.

Greenhouse Gas Emissions

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the level of greenhouse gas emissions in (a) 1995–96 and (b) 1990. [40245]

Mr. Clappison: Estimates of the United Kingdom's emissions of the main greenhouse gases for 1990 and 1994 were published in the 18th "Digest of Environmental Statistics":

	Estimated emissions (million tonnes of gas)
	1990	1994
Carbon dioxide (CO_2)	583	544
Methane (CH_4)	4.44	3.88
Nitrous oxide (N_2O)	0.11	0.09
Nitrogen oxides (NO_x)	2.71	2.22
Carbon monoxide (CO)	6.42	4.86
Non-methane volatile organic compounds	2.28	2.03

1994 is the most recent year for which we have a published inventory of the United Kingdom's emissions of greenhouse gases. Carbon dioxide emissions are provisionally estimated to have been 548 million tonnes in 1995.

These figures were calculated by the national environmental technology centre using the methodology developed by the intergovernmental panel on climate change.

Pneumoconiosis and Asbestosis Claims

Mr. Clapham: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer of 23 July, Official Report, column 312, on cases settled under the Pneumoconiosis etc. (Workers' Compensation) (Payments of Claim) Amendment Regulations, if he will give a breakdown of the 75 per cent. of payments which were not for pneumoconiosis or asbestosis. [40171]

Sir Paul Beresford: The table provides a breakdown of the 75 per cent. of all cases settled in 1995–96 under the Pneumoconiosis etc. (Workers' Compensation) (Payments of Claims) Amendment Regulations which were not for pneumoconiosis or asbestosis;

Disease	Percentage of claims[1]	Average age	Average payment £
Mesothelioma	74	61	14,506
Bilateral diffuse pleural thickening	17	61	8,749
Primary carcinoma of the lung (accompanied by asbestosis or bilateral diffuse pleural thickening)	8	59	7,509
Byssinosis	1	71	4,506

[1] Represents the percentage of claims in relation to the 75 per cent. of all claims paid for diseases other than pneumoconiosis or asbestosis.

Waste Recycling

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the percentage of waste which was recycled by each local authority in each of the last three years. [40416]

Mr. Clappison: Following a commitment in the White Paper on waste "Making Waste Work", my Department launched in September a major new survey to collect data from local authorities on municipal waste arisings and waste treatment options, from which recycling rates may be derived. The results for 1995–96 are expected early in 1997, and the survey will be repeated annually in the spring thereafter. This initiative should significantly improve both the quantity and quality of data available on municipal waste management.

Separately, information on local authority recycling rates has been collected both by the Audit Commission, under its local authority performance indicators initiative, and by the Chartered Institute of Public Finance Accountancy. Copies of the Audit Commission publications are available in the Library.

Water Pollution

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Holborn and St. Pancras (Mr. Dobson) of 26 January, Official Report, columns 408–12, on infringements, prosecutions, offences and pollution incidents in the water industry, if he will update the information provided. [40409]

Mr. Clappison: As a result of the 1995 technical audits of water companies, the drinking water inspectorate considered taking enforcement action against water companies in England and Wales in 146 instances. This was a reduction on previous years.

Thames Water Utilities Ltd. pleaded guilty at Kingston crown court on 31 July 1996 to four charges under section 70 of the Water Industry Act 1991 for the offence of supplying water unfit for human consumption and was fined £80,000 plus costs of £9,800. The prosecution was brought following an investigation by the drinking water inspectorate of an incident in which 84,300 consumers in parts of Tooting, Wandsworth and Wimbledon were supplied with dirty water.

The tables show the information on water pollution and water abstraction infringements and prosecutions, for incidents where prosecution took place after 26 January 1996. In all cases convictions were made.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the reasons for which prosecuting authorities have withdrawn prosecutions of alleged polluters of water resources since the Water Resources Act 1991 came into force. [40375]

Mr. Clappison: Prosecution in relation to water resources pollution offences is a matter for the Environment Agency.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what meetings he has held with (a) the (i) chairman and (ii) chief executive of the Environment Agency and (b) the director of the drinking water inspectorate since the Environment Act 1995 came into force to discuss how effective the prosecution measures available to the responsible authorities in regard to water pollution incidents have proved to date. [40395]

Mr. Clappison: There have been no specific discussions with my right hon. Friend of these issues. Pollution control policies and their effectiveness frequently figure in discussion between the Department and the agency. The Environment Agency is developing policies on enforcement and prosecution following, amongst other things, the changes made by the Environment Act 1995 on the use in legal proceedings of evidence from samples.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the outcome of the consultation on the water control of pollution regulations. [40406]

Mr. Clappison: A total of 27 responses have been made to the Department's consultation paper "Water: Control of Pollution Regulations" issued on 22 August. The regulations will be made shortly.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what monitoring is conducted (i) by his Department and (ii) on behalf of his Department and agencies which report to his Department on the effects of the concentration of copper deposits in drinking water supplies dormant for periods of over six hours. [40474]

Mr. Clappison: The Water Supply (Water Quality) Regulations 1989 require water companies to take a specified number of samples for analysis for copper each year from consumers' taps in randomly selected properties in each of their water supply zones. The specified number is between one and 24 samples per year depending on the size of the zone. The samples collected are the first litre of water drawn off by the sampler. This water will have been in contact with any pipework, including copper pipework, for varying periods including up to six hours and possibly more.

The results are provided annually to, and are audited by, the drinking water inspectorate. In 1995 the 31 water companies in England and Wales analysed 10,616 samples for copper. All samples were within the standard in the regulations of 3,000 micrograms per litre.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list each occasion, specifying dates and locations, on which cryptosporidium has been reported in domestic water supplies in the last five years. [40346]

Mr. Clappison: The water companies in England and Wales are required to report all incidents in which water quality might be affected. On cryptosporidium the notification can relate to either the detection of cryptosporidium oocysts in treated water, or to an increase of the illness cryptosporidiosis in the community, or both. The transmission of the illness occurs in a number of ways and often through contact with animals. One recent outbreak of cryptosporidiosis was found to be associated with the failure of a milk pasteurisation plant.

All incidents are investigated fully by the drinking water inspectorate. As cryptosporidiosis can be transmitted in many ways, the source of any outbreak has to be established through epidemiology. A case of South West Water Services Ltd. allegedly supplying water unfit for human consumption because of cryptosporidium is currently before the courts.

Notifications of events involving cryptosporidium are listed below under four headings. It should be noted that not all notifications become confirmed as incidents.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many water pollution incidents in the categories used by the Environment Agency, comprising (a) major, (b) significant, (c) minor and (d) unsubstantiated have taken place each year since the Water Resources Act 1991 came into force; and what remedial action has been taken to clean up contaminated water sources. [40376]

Mr. Clappison: The number of reported water pollution incidents in each year since the Water Resources Act, broken down into major, significant, minor and unsubstantiated are as follows:

	1992	1993	1994	1995
Major	388	331	229	199
Significant	[1]22,943	6,768	6,567	2,194
Minor		18,200	18,619	21,070
Unsubstantiated	8,342	8,997	9,876	12,427

[1] The figures for this year are not broken down into "significant" and "minor" incidents.

The classification system used by the National Rivers Authority and now the Environment Agency changed during the period since 1991. In particular "unsubstantiated" incidents were only specifically recorded after 1 January 1995. For previous years the figures are inferred.

The agency is concerned wherever possible to prevent pollution from occurring, using enforcement powers, advice and targeted campaigns to do so. The oil care campaign launched in 1995 has, for example, been successful in reducing the number of oil pollution incidents for the first time since 1991. Remedial action is determined on a case by case basis. The agency has powers to recover costs from polluters for such actions and will, following the introduction of new powers in the Environment Act 1995, be able to require a polluter or potential polluter to clean up or take action to prevent an incident.

Technology Foresight Projects

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what developments have taken place in the prioritised projects on the environment contained in the technology foresight initiative reports since their publication; what new resources have been committed to these projects; and if he will make a statement. [40480]

Mr. Clappison: The Department's science programmes have already identified many of the issues raised by the foresight panels and the steering group and are acting upon them.

As an example, the agriculture, natural resources and the environment foresight panel prioritised the reduction of pollution and energy use through attention to building, urban and transport design. This complements the DOE's aim of fostering sustainable development through the planning system and links with the recommendations of other panels and initiatives that are already in place, including the Secretary of State's quality initiative and the engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council programme, "Towards Sustainable Cities".

Some £40 million of DOE science funding in 1995–96, and 1996–97 are relevant to the environmental priorities identified in the technology foresight reports.

Technology foresight provides an important backdrop to the development of many areas of DOE policy, feeding through into the Department's policy support science and technology programmes, and facilitating the development of links between research areas.

Occupational Ill Health

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many people in each region have died from occupational ill health in each of the last 10 years. [40419]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information is not available in the form requested. Some categories of occupational ill health can be identified from death certificate details and figures for the last 10 years. These are recorded in table 1.

The number of death certificates mentioning asbestosis or the asbestos-related cancer, mesothelioma, in each of the last 10 years are broken down by region in tables 2 and 3. Figures for other occupationally related lung disease are not readily available by region.

Health and Safety Executive

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many people have been employed by the HSE in each of the last 10 years; and how many of those have been inspectors. [40447]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Following table shows the number of staff and the number of inspectors employed by the Health and Safety Executive in each of the last 10 years.

Year (1 April)	Total staff	Inspectors
1987	3,573.00	1,204.50
1988	3,470.00	1,165.00
1989	3,524.50	1,182.50
1990	3,698.00	1,239.00
1991	3,877.00	1,342.00
1992	4,321.00	1,469.50
1993	4,537.50	1,532.00
1994	4,544.50	1,572.50
1995	4,390.80	1,477.60
1996	4,151.00	1,466.00

Figures given are full-time equivalent counts: part timers were counted as half units until 1 April 1995; since then they are countered on the basis of the proportion of a full week that they work.

Sleipner Field

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what contact he has had with (a) the Norwegian Government and (b) the British Geological Survey about the disposal of carbon dioxide in the Sleipneir field. [40449]

Mr. Clappison: The UK has received information on the Sleipner project from Statoil of Norway via an international agreement on greenhouse gases research under the auspices of the International Energy Agency. Officials from my Department have met representatives from the British Geological Survey to discuss their research on the underground disposal of carbon dioxide.

Limestone Pavement Campaign

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assistance he is giving through his representative, Mr. Neale Oliver, to the Limestone Pavement Campaign, with particular reference to Orton scar. [40450]

Mr. Clappison: The Government welcome the news of the future protection of Orton scar through revocation of the existing planning permission. We will continue to support the limestone pavement action group through our statutory advisors, English Nature and the Countryside Commission, wherever appropriate.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his letter of 23 May, what action he has taken to follow up his initiative to provide alternative materials to limestone to gardeners who wish to make rockeries; and if he will make a statement. [40371]

Mr. Clappison: The Government are content with the protection afforded by the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 by means of the designation of sites of special scientific interest and/or limestone pavement orders. It nevertheless fully supports the limestone pavement action group's attempts to raise public awareness, and to highlight alternative materials available to gardeners.

Water Quality

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will investigate the health effects of contamination of the cut-off water supplies to consumers undertaken by water companies. [40475]

Mr. Clappison: Provided that the necessary precautions are taken by the water company, the disconnection of a customer's water supply for non-payment of charges, and subsequent reconnection, has no implications for the quality of water supplied.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what substances other than those covered by schedule 2 to the water supply regulations are tested for in water supplies in each region; and if he will list the date and location of each such test in the last three years. [40360]

Mr. Clappison: The results of the regulatory monitoring for substances covered by schedule 2 of the regulations are provided annually to the drinking water inspectorate. In each of the last three years, more than 3 million tests have been carried out and the percentage of tests complying with the standards in the regulations has improved from 98.9 in 1993 to 99.5 in 1995. Water companies may carry out additional testing for other substances in the light of local circumstances, generally in relation to incidents affecting or threatening to affect drinking water quality. The information is relevant only to individual incidents, and although held by the inspectorate it could not be collated except at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he had made of the compliance by drinking water suppliers with the 1985 World Health Organisation guidelines, as amended, on drinking water purity. [40377]

Mr. Clappison: The current UK standards as specified in the Water Supply (Water Quality) Regulations 1989 incorporate the standards of the 1980 EC drinking water directive which in turn were based in many cases on the 1984 World Health Organisation guidelines for drinking water quality. In some cases, the regulations are more stringent than the directive. In 1995, the 31 water companies in England and Wales met the standards in the regulations in 99.5 per cent. of over 3 million tests.

The 1984 World Health Organisation guidelines were amended in 1993. The new guidelines contain a number of more stringent values, the most significant one is the value for lead of 10 micrograms per litre. This value has been included in the proposed revision of the EC drinking water directive published in May 1995. The World Health Organisation value can be regarded as an average but the interpretation of the value in the proposed directive is not clear. In 1995 approximately 20 per cent. of samples taken from consumers' taps exceeded 10 micrograms per litre but these were spot checks and not a measure of average levels. The current standard of 50 micrograms per litre as a maximum is equivalent to an average level of around 20 micrograms per litre. The drinking water inspectorate has recently commissioned a study to estimate the extent of compliance with, and how much further water treatment and lead pipe replacement might be needed to achieve compliance with various possible interpretations of the proposed new standard and the associated monitoring requirements.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on developments made in the implementation of statutory water quality objectives. [40400]

Mr. Clappison: Last year, the Secretary of State asked the National Rivers Authority to prepare proposals for statutory water quality objectives in a small number of trial river catchments. I understand that the Environment Agency has recently completed a three-month consultation exercise on its draft proposals and is now finalising its recommendations for statutory objectives in eight river catchments. Once the recommendations have been received, they will be the subject of a statutory consultation exercise before a final decision is taken on their implementation.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what level of lead contamination of drinking water has been reported in each region in the last five years; and how much lead piping is still in use in the drinking water distribution systems in each region by (a) length and (b) bore. [40347]

Mr. Clappison: The total number of samples analysed for lead, and the number and percentage of samples exceeding the lead standard of 50 micrograms per litre in each region for the last five years, is given in the table.

Samples exceeding the standard for lead reported in each region for the period 1991–1995
Data from the compliance data and annual lead returns submitted to the Drinking Water Inspectorate

Region	North West	North East	Midlands	East	Wales	South West	South East	South
Total number of samples taken for lead during the period	85,402	27,817	34,754	14,224	19,179	14,883	18,012	28,167
Number of samples with lead>50 ug/l	3,611	968	1,748	115	501	539	284	130
Percentage of samples exceeding the standard for lead	4.2	3.5	5.0	0.8	2.6	3.6	1.6	0.5

The number of water supply zones in England and Wales in which the standard for lead has been exceeded has decreased from 25.6 per cent. in 1991 to 18.7 per cent. in 1995. A further improvement is expected in 1996 as a result of most water companies completing during 1995 the installation of treatment plant to reduce plumbosolvency.

Information about the length and bore of lead piping is not held centrally. The length of lead pipe will vary according to the type of property and in most cases is likely to be in the range of 5 to 20 m. The bore of the piping is likely to be between 12 and 18 mm. The table gives the estimated number of properties in each region supplied through lead communication pipes which belong to the water suppliers, with lead supply pipes which belong to the property owner and with lead internal plumbing which also belongs to the property owner.

Properties with lead pipes

Properties with lead internal plumbing (per cent. of total properties)	2,086,329 (75 per cent.)	1,394,688 (46 per cent.)	1,601,031 (46 per cent.)	152,483 (8 per cent.)	230,402 (26 per cent.)	346,984 (23 per cent.)	379,199 (18 per cent.)	824,425 (17 per cent.)

NB No account of joint services could be taken. Not all water companies were able to provide data on the numbers of properties with lead internal plumbing. Where data were missing, the number of properties with lead internal plumbing is assumed to be equal to the number of properties with lead supply pipes. Regions in all tables are as specified in the WRc report.

This table was based on data collected in 1991. Between 1991 and 1994 the water suppliers replaced nearly half a million lead communication pipes. The numbers on a regional basis are given in the following table.

	Number
North-west	99,887
North-east	57,240
Midlands	99,312
East	47,629
Wales	44,338
South-west	16,233
South-east	23,563

British Association for the Advancement of Science

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment which representatives of his Department attended the 1996 British Association for the Advancement of Science conference in Birmingham; what use his Department has made of the environmental research made public at the annual British Association for the Advancement of Science meeting; and what role his Department plans to take in the dissemination of environmental research results presented at the meeting. [40482]

Mr. Clappison: Professional staff of the Department attend a wide range of scientific conferences which present opportunities to gather timely information or to pursue DOE research programme interests. At this year's British Association for the Advancement of Science conference, a session on water resources was chaired by an inspector from the Department's drinking water inspectorate. Dissemination of results presented is the responsibility of the conference organisers, the principal means being the conference itself.

Water Pollution

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) which bodies holding a discharge consent, other than sewage works, from the former National Rivers Authority or the Environment Agency, currently discharge pollutants under controlled permission to rivers and other water courses in England and Wales; and it he will make a statement on the current status of compliance; [40473]

(2) on how many occasions since the beginning of 1990 discharge consent conditions have applied to (a) effluent treatment plants and (b) other industrial or commercial operations have been contravened; and what action has been taken in each case to stop the pollution. [40378]

Mr. Clappison: This information is not held centrally. Data on discharge consents, including information on sampling and any enforcement action is available from the pollution control register held at the regional offices of the Environment Agency. The National Rivers Authority, and now the Environment Agency, also publish summary monitoring and compliance reports, the latest being for 1994. In that year, 69 per cent. of trade effluent discharges as defined in the report, were compliant with the terms of their consents. The report for 1995 is in preparation.

Trees

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe report on the health of trees in Europe, published on 5 September, with particular reference to its evaluation of trees in the United Kingdom. [40287]

Mr. Clappison: The United Nations Economic Commission for Europe report draws on an annual survey of the conditions of forest trees conducted by the Forestry Commission.

The latest report records that the condition of trees in the United Kingdom in 1995 was better than the average for countries in the North Atlantic region of Europe. There were no major changes in crown condition compared to 1994 for oak, Norway spruce, Sitka spruce or Scots pine but, as in other countries, there was a marked deterioration in the condition of beech which was a natural effect of a heavy seeding year.

Shortheld Tenancy Rents

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the growth of assured shorthold tenancy rents over the next five years. [40299]

Mr. Clappison: None. Landlords are free to charge market rents. Research commissioned by my Department last year suggested that assured shorthold tenancy rents have reached a stage where rental yields are in equilibrium with the first-time buyer market. This would imply that such rents are likely to move broadly in line with house prices over the medium term. Recent projections of house price movements do not suggest substantial increases in assured shorthold tenancy rents.

Environmental Information

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the application of the Environmental Information Regulations 1992 to private companies. [40345]

Mr. Clappison: The Environmental Information Regulations 1992 apply to private bodies and persons with responsibilities for the environments which are either carrying out the functions of a public administration or which are under public control, which might include control conferred by statute, contracts or other means that would create the possibility of exercising decisive influence.

Management Information System for Ministers

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how may copies of the annual departmental MINIS returns have been (a) purchased from and (b) distributed by his Department since the returns were first made public; when it was decided to discontinue the public release for sale of the MINIS 1996 returns; and what announcement was made on the discontinuation of the report's publication. [40478]

Sir Paul Beresford: My Department does not have figures available for all the years since MINIS was first made public, but can provide figures for the last two years; these are in the table.

	Minis 15 (1994-95)		Minis 16 (1995-96)
	Distributed[1]	Sold	Distributed	Sold
Principal Establishment and Finance Officer	70	3	95	5
Local Government and Planning	69	5	95	7
Housing and Construction	74	3	95	5
Environment Protection Group	80	6	95	11

	Minis 15 (1994-95) Distributed[1]	Sold	Minis 16 (1995-96) Distributed	Sold
Cities and Countryside Group	71	6	95	8
Legal	73	3	95	5
Government Offices	82	3	[2]—	[2]—

[1] Distributed is the number of copies that were printed and issues within DOE, House of Lords, House of Commons, Environment Committee and other Government Departments.
[2] In 1995–96 a separate MINIS exercise was undertaken by Government Offices and their MINIS plans were published in GO MINIS 1.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State decided earlier in the year not to publish MINIS 17 documents formally since the costs of the exercise were not justified by the low volume of sales and the fact that the Department's new annual report now sets out the main achievements and forward expenditure plans of the constituent parts of the Department.

The decision not to publish MINIS documents formally was not announced as unbound copies are still available on request.

Asbestos

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list by number and category imported asbestos-based products; and if he will make a statement. [40328]

Mr. Clappison: The information requested is not available.

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans his Department has to require asbestos-based products to be permanently marked as such. [40327]

Mr. Clappison: The marking of asbestos products is already covered by the Asbestos Products (Safety) Regulations 1985 as amended. These regulations require that asbestos and all products containing the mineral should be marked as such using a specified label. The label may be printed directly on to the product, attached to it or attached to is packaging.

Air Pollution

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion of the reduction in toxic emissions and other pollutants listed in the pilot environmental accounts published in August is attributable to (a) a reduction in economic activity and (b) implementation of clean technologies. [40340]

Mr. Clappison: There are a number of sources of information on the sources of, and on past and predicted trends in, emissions of the pollutants listed in the pilot environmental accounts. These include the "Chemical Release Inventory", published by HMIP—now the Environment Agency—the "National Atmospheric Emissions Inventory"—AEA Technology—the Department of the Environment's "Digest of Environmental Statistics" and the draft "National Air Quality Strategy". It is not, however, possible to disaggregate this information in such a way as to be able to attribute the reduction in pollutants to different causes, such as economic activity, the application of cleaner technologies, changing business practices or other factors.

Asthma

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the impact of the asthma awareness campaign initiated by the Health and Safety Executive on the incidence of cases of occupational asthma. [40417]

Sir Paul Beresford: The HSE's "Breathe Freely" campaign ran from April 1994 to April 1995. It is too early to expect to see any change in the incidence of occupational asthma, given the variable latency period associated with this disease. However, HSE will review data in the incidence of occupational asthma to see what insight they might provide into the success of the campaign.

Global Environmental Research Strategy

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the launch of the UK national strategy for global environmental research; which United Kingdom research institutions will benefit from the strategy; what additional resources have been committed in support of the strategy; and what attempts have been made to publicise the existence of and prospective benefits arising from the strategy. [40398]

Mr. Clappison: The report, 'UK National Strategy for Global Environmental Research', by an expert panel of the inter-agency committee on global environmental change, was publicly launched by the committee chairman, Sir Ronald Oxburgh, on 10 September at the 1996 conference of the British Association for the Advancement of Science. In addition to the targeted dissemination to all United Kingdom organisations and institutions involved with global environmental research and extensive international distribution, the document has been made generally available through the Internet.

The report identifies a close match between its priority research issues and the "Forward Look" plans of the funding agencies. This no doubt reflects the influence of the inter-agency committee's previous strategy reports. The Department's research programme "Forward Look" is in line with the report recommendation to maintain current research efforts over the next few years. All institutions engaged in global environmental research will benefit from the strategy as they plan future research against the background of the report's recommendations on the conceptual approach, research directions and priorities, enabling technologies and infrastructure, and communication and co-ordination.

Information Technology

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what resources have been committed each year since 1979 by his Department to the development of environmental information software and computer-based environmental research; and what steps have been taken to disseminate this information. [40481]

Mr. Clappison: The Department makes information about the environment and environmental research publicly available via a wide range of databases and more recently the Internet. Details on each system have not been collated centrally and it would entail disproportionate cost to provide the annual resource estimates requested. Guidance on the use of systems is available to the public from the Department's library. They include:

- The RESLINE database containing details of the Department's research.
- Details of all Departmental publications in the British Library BLAISE database.
- Data supplied to the Biotechnology and Biological Sciences Research Council for inclusion on the UK FOCUS and AGREP databases.
- The BRIX and FLAIR databases produced by the Building Research Establishment in which environmental matters form a significant part.
- The Department's World Wide Web home page (http://www.open.gov.doe/) on the Internet which includes UK environmental statistics based on those published in the Department's annual 'Digest of Environmental Statistics', 'Air Quality Information', and the 'Air Quality Archive'.

Systems under development include the European information and observation network—EIONET—which will connect member states to the European Environment Agency in Copenhagen and gather information on the state of the environment at the European level.

Occupational Ill Health

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many working hours have been lost in each of the last 10 years due to occupational ill health. [40420]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information is not collected on a regular basis. However, a survey of self-reported work-related illness in England and Wales estimated that 700,000 workers believed they had experienced illnesses caused or made worse by their work and which resulted in 13 million days off work in 1989–90.

Radioactive Waste Management

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to publish his conclusions on the responses made to the review of the past five years' work of his Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee, announced on 8 July; if a summary of the responses and original submissions will be made public; and if he will place a list of the responses in the Library. [40394]

Mr. Clappison: The results of the financial management and policy review of the radioactive waste Management Advisory Committee will be announced in due course.

Such reviews are conducted in two stages. An announcement will be made on completion of the "prior options" stage, and if it is decided that RWMAC should continue, the review will go on to address the committee's structure and mode of operation.

Subject to the agreement of those concerned, I will place a list of respondents and copies of their submissions in the Library of the House when the review has been completed.

River Thames

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Tooting (Mr. Cox) of 16 July, Official Report, column 432, concerning the River Thames advisory group and working party respectively, if he will give for each of the persons involved to be members for both groups (a) their qualifications, occupations and other inquiries relating to the River Thames, (b) any financial or commercial interest they have concerning the Thames and its environment and (c) the number of meetings each have attended in the year 1995 and 1996. [40405]

Mr. Gummer: Members of my Thames advisory group were invited to contribute to its work on the basis of their personal contribution and knowledge across a range of fields and disciplines. My Department does not keep details of their qualifications, occupations or personal affairs.

There have been six meetings of the group so far in 1995 and 1996. The number of meetings attended by each member is as follows:

- Steven Norris: 3
- Alan Baxter: 6
- Michael Cassidy: 1
- Sir Philip Dowson: 3
- Paul Finch: 4
- Nicky Gavron: 4
- Christopher Howes: 5
- Simon Jenkins: 1
- Stuart Lipton: 5
- Richard MacCormac: 4
- Christopher Moran: 3
- Lord Rogers: 5
- Eric Sorensen: 5
- Stewart Steven: 3
- Kim Wilkie: 6

The River Thames working group is chaired by my hon. Friend the Minister for Transport in London and its membership is a matter for him.

Taxonomy

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what opportunities exist under the provisions of the Darwin initiative for British-based taxonomists and entomologists to study the inventory of known species and to explore the development of inventory taxonomy of species thought likely to exist but not yet identified at research institutes and universities in the United Kingdom. [40483]

Mr. Clappison: The Darwin initiative is designed to bring British expertise to bear on the biodiversity needs of developing countries, and the Department has just invited applications for the next round of funding. Taxonomic work is one of the main areas funded under the initiative. The only work on British collections is that carried out in the course of training developing country scientists.

Supermarkets

Mr. Bennett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what estimate he has made of the number of large supermarkets within Greater Manchester which do not have sprinkler systems. [40373]

Sir Paul Beresford: I have not made any such estimate. My Department does not collect statistical information on properties which do or do not have particular fire safety measures.

Sellafield

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what notification he has received from British Nuclear Fuels in respect of proposals to apply for a variation in its discharge consents under the Environment Act 1995, the Radioactive Substances Act 1960 and Nuclear Installations Act 1965 for the Thermal oxide reprocessing plant at Sellafield. [40396]

Mr. Clappison: Applications for disposal authorisations, or for variations to existing authorisations, under the Radioactive Substances Act 1993—as amended by the Environment Act 1995—are made to the Environment Agency. I understand that British Nuclear Fuels plc is considering applying for a variation to the current authorisation for disposal of waste gases, mists and dusts from its Sellafield site. The Nuclear Installations Act 1965 does not apply to discharge consents.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to publish the inspector's report into the rock characterisation facility at Sellafield. [40504]

Sir Paul Beresford: In accordance with usual procedures, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State will publish the report when he has reached his decision on the matter. Until he has received and considered the report, I cannot say when that might be.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the timetable for issuing a full safety certificate for large scale reprocessing at THORP at Sellafield. [40514]

Sir Paul Beresford: The THORP plant at BNFL Sellafield is currently being commissioned, and will eventually operate, under the requirements of the existing Sellafield site licence issued by the Health and Safety Executive's nuclear installations inspectorate. HSE intends to issue a consent for THORP when commissioning has been satisfactorily completed and it has received the appropriate documentation. This has not been received from BNFL.

Some reprocessing activity has been taking place as part of the active commissioning programme which started in January 1994, but full operation will only be undertaken when the consent to operation is issued.

Water Resources Directive

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what responses he has made to date to the EU draft framework directive on water resources issued in February. [40407]

Mr. Clappison: In December 1995 the Environment Council adopted a set of conclusions on European Community water policy which, amongst other things, invited the European Commission to present a communication on the subject. The communication was issued on 21 February, and the Commission proposes to bring forward a framework directive on water resources in due course. The Government submitted an explanatory memorandum to the European Scrutiny Committee on 16 April.

Environment Agency

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what reports the Environment Agency has produced to date on the state of the British environment; and what role his Department has in distributing the Environment Agency's reports. [40479]

Mr. Clappison: The Environment Agency published in April 1996 a report entitled "The Environment of England and Wales; a Snapshot". An online version of the report has been placed recently on the agency's Internet web site, and this updates the printed version. Copies of the report were placed in the Library of the House. My Department has no role in distributing Environment Agency reports.

AEA Technology

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what environmental protection guarantees are in place in respect of the sale of AEA Technology. [40341]

Mr. Clappison: I expect AEA Technology to continue to bid for environmental research and services tendered by the Department and to maintain the quality and integrity of work which made AEAT a substantial and long standing contractor in the past. AEA Technology activities will be subject to the same regulatory standards of environmental safety as any other private company. This will principally involve controls pursuant to the Radioactive Substances Act, the Environmental Protection Act 1990, the Water Resources Act 1991 and the Environment Act 1995.

Intergovernmental Conference

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what submissions his Department has made to the intergovernmental conference on transparency in regard to environmental policy and information disclosure; and what plans he has for future submissions. [40589]

Mr. Clappison: The United Kingdom has made no submissions on transparency to the intergovernmental conference.

The IGC discussions have not altered the Department's policy of openness which accords with the Government's code of practice on access to Government information, published in 1994.

The Department will not be making submissions to the intergovernmental conference.

Sponsored Bodies

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress has been made in the procedure of appointments to sponsored bodies since recommendations were put to the Directors Forum on Sponsored Bodies in September last year. [40651]

Sir Paul Beresford: Revised procedures have been introduced in the Department of the Environment which fulfil the relevant recommendations of the first report of the Committee on Standards in Public Life and comply with the code of practice and guidance issued by the Commissioner for Public Appointments. It will now be the normal practice to advertise vacancies on the boards of executive non-departmental public bodies, to interview candidates before appointment and to involve an independent person in the selection process.

Water Directive

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what matters of environmental concern were discussed at the European Commission meeting of 9 October; and what were the reasons for the withdrawal from the agenda of deliberation on the planned water quality framework directive. [40647]

Mr. Clappison: The agenda for the weekly Commission meeting is a matter for the Commission rather than for my Department; any decision not to discuss the proposed water quality framework directive is therefore an internal one for the Commission..

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Serious Fraud Office

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Attorney-General what plans he has to review the workings of the Serious Fraud Office; and if he will make a statement. [40554]

The Attorney-General: The Serious Fraud Office continues to implement recommendations made in the Graham report and by the Davie group, including measures to rationalise its investigative function and to make the most efficient use of police resources. I have no plans for further reorganisation.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Magistrates Courts

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the total number of magistrates' courts in each region, for each of the last five years; and if he will make a statement. [39116]

Mr. Streeter [pursuant to reply, 24 July 1996, c. 340]: The information requested is not collected centrally. Magistrates' courts are locally managed by magistrates' courts committees under the provisions of the Justices of the Peace Act 1979.

The extra time to answer this question afforded by the parliamentary adjournment has allowed officials to contact each of the 100 MCCs, and for the requested information to be collected. The cost of this exercise has exceeded the maximum limit set for answering parliamentary questions.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Manufacturing Productivity

Mr. Wareing: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will list the trends in manufacturing productivity in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) other member states of the European Union in each of the first three quarters of 1996. [40549]

Mr. Greg Knight: Figures on UK manufacturing output per person employed are published by the Office for National Statistics in table 4.7 of "Economic Trends", a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. They are also available on the central shared database, which can be accessed from the Library. The figures up to August 1996 will be released on Wednesday 16 October. Comparable figures for the other member states of the European Union are not yet available.

British Coal Enterprise

Mr. Tipping: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what sum was received by the Government from the sale of British Coal Enterprises. [40422]

Mr. Page: The sale of British Coal Enterprise is a matter for British Coal. I understand that the corporation has not yet completed the sale of all the activities of BCE.

Research Establishments

Mr. Waterson: To ask the president of the Board of Trade when he will place further memoranda concerning the prior options reviews of public sector research establishments in the Library. [41075]

Mr. Ian Taylor: I have placed in the Library of the House the memorandum setting out the rationale underlying the decisions concerning ADAS which were announced by my right hon. and learned Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food on 18 July.

Businesses

Mr. Waterson: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what are his plans for reforming Government support for business. [41076]

Mr. Lang: We are today launching two new challenges. I am also confirming a major simplification of central schemes.

Both challenges are designed to enhance the competitiveness of businesses, either through helping local partnerships to design and deliver high quality business support to firms—particularly smaller firms in their area—or through projects to improve the business performance of specific sectors of industry.

The local challenge will build on business link partnerships. It will reinforce the opportunities offered to small firms to access support in the co-ordinated way that these partnerships provide. It will encourage cross-partnership bids where these add value.

The sector challenge will bring together in one place the majority of Government funding for sectoral activity. it covers activities designed to have a broad impact on the competitiveness of sectors wherever they are located in the United Kingdom, including innovative approaches to export promotion.

A radical streamlining of DTI business support will reduce the number of separate schemes from 140 to fewer than 25 central programmes plus the two new challenges.

Further announcements in the coming weeks will set out in more detail our plans on specific schemes aimed at helping smaller firms to win through exporting, foresight the information society, and so on.

The Government have agreed criteria under which all current or potential new central schemes will be reviewed. Such reviews will be an on-going process with annual reports back to Ministers. We are committed to changing the emphasis of support away from central towards local and sectoral design and delivery. Over time, central schemes will become the exception, not the rule.

We are also committed to involving businesses and business support organisations more directly in deciding which schemes should continue. In future, we will consult businesses and business support organisations as a matter of course before taking decisions. I am pleased therefore to welcome the new consultative group being established by the business link partners to provide their input into this exercise.

Business told us that it wanted simpler, more accessible and more flexible support. The proposals announced today delivery just that.

I am placing copies of the local and sector challenge bidding guidelines in the Library of the House.

TREASURY

VAT

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing for each member state of the European Community the rates levied by value added tax on food in shops, household fuel, children's clothing, books, newspapers and magazines, public transport, water and sewage services, newly constructed homes, second-hand homes and the standard of tax most recently adopted; when the current VAT agreement expires; and what remunerations have been received from the Commission concerning its services or continuation for any stated period. [41410]

Mr. Oppenheim [holding answer 14 October 1996]: The information about VAT rates is set out in the table. The current EC VAT agreement (the sixth VAT directive), and so the provisions governing the VAT rates detailed in the table, have no expiry date. In the absence of any unanimous agreement upon 'definitive' VAT regime, the existing provisions continue to apply automatically and without time limit.

Tax Secrecy

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals he has to remove tax secrecy from (a) the Channel Islands, (b) the Isle of Man, (c) Gibraltar and (d) Caribbean dependencies; and if he will enter into discussions with the authorities of such places about the prevention of drug trafficking and fraud. [40368]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 14 October 1996]: Arrangements already exist for the exchange of information with the Channel Islands and other dependencies, where appropriate, for taxation purposes, including the detection and prevention of fraud. Legislation has been in place for some time to tackle the avoidance of tax through the use of off-shore concerns, and if the Government become aware of any significant new risk in this area, further legislation will be considered.

The Government take a prominent role in advising these territories on suitable legislation concerning the prevention of drug trafficking and fraud. All have drug money laundering legislation and some have extended these provisions to cover all serious crimes. Many have statutory gateways which allow information to be passed to overseas regulators. These measures have removed many obstacles caused by secrecy provisions, and further work is continuing to improve the exchange of information with these territories.

Income Statistics

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the percentage change in real personal disposable income (a) overall, (b) of persons in employment and (c) of persons not in employment, for each year since 1979. [40364]

Mrs Angela Knight [holding answer 14 October 1996]: Information on real personal disposable income at 1990 prices is published annually in the United Kingdom National Accounts, the Blue Book, and is also held on the Office for National Statistics database. These sources are available in the House of Commons Library. It is not possible to calculate the proportion of real personal disposable income which goes to persons in employment and to persons not in employment.

However, information at current prices is available on sources of household incomes in table 4.9 of the Blue Book; and analyses of incomes, only at household level, based on the family expenditure survey are also available—results are published annually in the relevant editions of "Family Spending" which are available in the Library.

The percentage change in overall real personal disposable income at 1990 prices in each year since 1979 is:

1979: 5.7
1980: 1.5
1981: –0.8
1982: –0.5
1983: 2.7
1984: 3.7
1985: 3.2
1986: 4.4
1987: 3.7

1991: 0.0
1992: 2.0
1993: 1.8
1994: 1.2
1995:3.0

Incomes

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people are currently earning less than £3 per hour; and what was the number in 1991. [40142]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The labour force survey shows that, in spring 1996, there were 1.74 million people in Great Britain earning less than £3 per hour. The labour force survey did not collect earnings information prior to 1992.

Glaucoma

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many new cases of glaucoma were detected in each of the last five years. [40573]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Statistics on glaucoma are not collected centrally.

Oral Cancer

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many new cases of oral cancer were detected (a) in each regional health authority and (b) nationally in (i) 1991 and (ii) 1992. [40572]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The number of new cases of oral cancer detected in (a) each regional health authority and (b) nationally in 1991 are shown in the table. Data for 1992 are not yet available.

International Monetary Fund

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the recent annual meetings of the International Monetary Fund and the World bank. [40951]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I attended meetings of the IMF's interim committee and the IMF/World bank development committee in Washington on 29 and 30 September, and the IMF/World bank annual meeting on 1–2 October, where progress was made on several issues of importance for the world economy and for developing countries. As usual, the IMF and World bank meetings were preceded by meetings of the G7 and G10 finance Ministers and central bank governors. I also attended the Commonwealth Finance Ministers' meeting in Bermuda on 24 to 26 September.

One of my top priorities for these meetings was the reduction in debt of the poorest, most indebted countries. I first launched an initiative on this subject at the Commonwealth Finance Ministers' meeting in Valletta two years ago. This year the IMF/World bank launched their own proposals in response to my initiative. These proposals were discussed in Bermuda and in Washington. I am delighted to be able to tell the House that they were endorsed. All other Ministers in the development committee joined me in calling for implementation to begin for the first potentially eligible countries before the end of 1996.

All major creditors—the IMF, World bank, and Paris Club—confirmed in Washington that they would play their part in delivering debt sustainability. The World bank will do so through the creation of trust funds. It has already allocated $500 million, and expects to contribute up to $2 billion in all. The IMF has undertaken to provide a combination of grants and loans which have longer maturities and grace periods, thereby effecting a substantial reduction in the value of its share of debt. The Paris Club of official bilateral creditors has agreed to go beyond Naples terms, on a case-by-case basis, up to 80 per cent. reduction of present value of claims. This is something the British Government have been advocating for many years, since it was first proposed by my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister, then Chancellor of the Exchequer, in 1990.

I regard agreement on this initiative, which the Prime Minister and I have advocated at successive international meetings over the last two years, as a major achievement. In the timescale of international economic diplomacy, two years from my first outline proposal to worldwide agreement on implementing a detailed scheme is good going. I am grateful to those who have worked to help us get there, including the voluntary organisations which have kept up the international pressure for action, as well as the officials of the international organisations who have helped put the pieces in place. We now have a scheme that offers real hope to some of the world's poorest countries. I will continue to work to ensure it is implemented in a flexible and commonsense way by the institutions concerned, to give countries that qualify an early and lasting exit from unsustainable debt.

I will also work to try to ensure that poor countries do not slip back into unsustainable debt, and that all developing countries have the best possible access to work markets and flows of private sector capital. I was therefore glad that, at the Commonwealth Finance Minister's meeting in Bermuda, Ministers agreed on the need for donors and creditors to discourage the financing of unproductive spending in developing countries. At Bermuda also, Ministers stressed the importance of an open, rules-based and non-discriminatory multilateral trading system. Ministers also discussed the rapid expansion in private capital flows, acknowledging their importance in promoting economic growth and investment. I pointed out the need for financial sector reform and liberalisation of the capital account. At my request, a small working group of Finance Ministry officials from Commonwealth countries will now study the role of national and international policies in encouraging private capital flows for investment.

Following another UK initiative, Ministers in Bermuda endorsed the new and updated 40 recommendations agreed by the financial action task force at the end of June 1996, which set out the measures countries should take to combat money laundering. In addition, we approved the publication of a comprehensive set of guidelines, prepared by the Commonwealth Secretariat, to help Commonwealth countries with the practical implementation of their anti-money-laundering strategies. Ministers also supported the establishment of regional groups—modelled on the Caribbean financial action task force—to enable Commonwealth countries to review their progress in implementing anti money laundering measures. We also urged the IMF and the World bank to take full account of the need for countries to maintain effective anti-money laundering systems in their surveillance activities and in their provision of technical assistance.

At the G7 meeting in Washington, we reviewed economic and financial market developments in the world economy and assessed the outlook for the G7 economies. In G7 countries, inflation remains at low levels, efforts are being made to reduce fiscal deficits, and external imbalances have receded. We agreed that policies should continue to be directed at sustaining non-inflationary growth and reduction of imbalances. We reaffirmed our standing commitment to co-operate closely in the exchange markets. At the request of my US and Canadian colleagues, we had a useful discussion about progress towards EMU.

We met representatives of the European Commission and the senior Russian economic team on developments in the Russian economy and progress on economic reform. We agreed that Russia has made significant progress in the area of macroeconomic stabilisation. We also agreed on the importance of strengthening Russia's fiscal balances in consolidating the gains it has made to date, and on the importance of adhering to the structural reform programme agreed with the IMF.

We reviewed the progress achieved and the considerable work underway to implement the initiatives arising from the last year's Halifax summit, and this discussion was continued in the G10 and interim committee.

The G10 discussed issues relating to international monetary and financial stability. We welcomed the progress that has been made towards the establishment of the new arrangements to borrow. I emphasised the benefits these arrangements would bring, not only through increasing the resources available to the IMF in the case of a threat to the stability of the international monetary system, but also in involving in the facility a wider range of countries including some of the emerging market economies, recognising their interest in the stability of the international financial system.

At the IMF interim committee, I stressed the importance of freedom of capital movement, and the benefits for countries that have not already done so of making careful progress in dismantling their remaining capital controls. I called on the IMF to help its members in this process, and I launched a proposal to bring the IMF's articles up to date to recognise its role in this area. Other Ministers supported my call to the IMF to revisit its role in relation to capital liberalisation, and to consider whether its present articles should be revised to reflect and promote the fund's proper role in encouraging capital liberalisation and helping member countries reap the full benefits of international capital flows. The Interim Committee agreed to discuss this at its next meeting in the spring.

We also agreed a new declaration—an update to the one first agreed in Madrid two years ago—on the partnership for sustainable global growth. This included calls to achieve budget balance, improve fiscal transparency, tackle corruption, prevent money laundering, encourage freedom of capital movements, and ensure the soundness of banking systems.

In the development committee, I stressed the importance of trade and development, and in particular giving poor countries the opportunity for growth through access to world markets. Many Ministers joined me in support for the President of the World Trade Organisation's proposals that developed countries should provide access duty-free to all the exports of least developed countries.

Copies of my speeches to the Commonwealth Finance Minsters' meeting, the interim and development committees, the annual meeting, and the communiques of those meeting and the G10 Finance Ministers' meeting, have been placed in the Library of the House. The G7 did not on this occasion issue a communiqué.

Public Bodies

Mr Miller: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what guidelines have been issued to non-departmental public bodies in relation to the implementation of local pay delegation, following the decision to end the previous pay arrangements for such organisations. [40133]

Mr. Waldegrave: Departments were given delegated responsibility for the pay systems of their civil service staff outside the senior civil service from 1 April 1996. This change did not directly affect non-departmental public bodies—they already had responsibility for their pay systems, subject to Treasury approval or consent in many, but not all, cases, and do not generally employ civil servants. However many NDPBs have pay systems which are analogous to or closely follow those of the civil servants in the sponsor department. As Departments introduce pay systems tailored to their particular requirements, NDPBs will need to consider what changes are appropriate for them. The Treasury has issued guidance to help departments think through the many issues involved, and Departments are free to show this to their NDPBs if they decide that is helpful.

ENVIRONMENT

Waste Recycling

15. Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what further assistance he proposes to support local authority local waste recycling schemes; and if he will make a statement. [38365]

Mr. Gummer: The measures and policy framework to assist local recycling are set out in the White Paper "Making Waste Work".

Energy Conservation

17. Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent representations he has received regarding energy conservation. [38367]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: My right hon. Friend and I regularly receive a wide range of representations on this subject.

Area Cost Adjustment

18. Mr. Fabricant: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the application of the area cost adjustment on local government funding. [38368]

Mr. Gummer: In our consultation, all four local government organisations have expressed reservations about implementing this review and have asked for further work. I will consider the representations after my meeting with them tomorrow.

24. Mr. Hendry: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has to reform the area cost adjustment. [38374]

Sir Paul Beresford: We will be discussing the review of the area cost adjustment with the local authority associations tomorrow at the consultative council on local government finance. Once we have taken their views, we will decide how to proceed. [38374]

Sewage

19. Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what percentage of sewage outfalls into rivers or the sea receive tertiary treatment. [38369]

Mr. Gummer: Fourteen.

Coastal Management

20. Mr. Whittingdale: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the management of coastal areas. [38370]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: We recognise that coastal areas are an important resource and have taken a number of steps to promote their effective management. In England, these include creation of a national coastal forum, publication of policy guidelines for the coast and—later this month—the issue of a best practice guide to coastal management.

Pollution Report

21. Mr. Robathan: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the latest report of the royal commission on environmental pollution. [38371]

Mr. Gummer: We welcome the royal commission's 19th report on the "Sustainable Use of Soil." We are considering all its recommendations carefully and expect to publish a formal response to the report by the end of the year.

Local Government Conduct

22. Dr. Goodson-Wickes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what recent studies he has made of the conduct of local government. [38372]

Sir Paul Beresford: We have made no recent studies of the conduct of local government. However, the Nolan committee announced in June that its third study will examine aspects of conduct in local government in England, Scotland and Wales.

London Governance

23. Mr. Tony Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about the governance of London. [38373]

Sir Paul Beresford: The current arrangements serve our capital city and the nation extremely well.

Wetlands

25. Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what progress he has made on the conservation of wetlands in Europe. [38375]

Mr. Clappison: The Government have broadly welcomed the policy set out in the European Commission's communication on the wise use and conservation of wetlands. Many positive steps are already being taken in Europe to conserve wetlands under EU directives and international conventions. The UK makes a major contribution. For example, we have listed 107 internationally important wetlands under the Ramsar convention. Many wetland sites have also been classified as special protection areas under the birds directive. Other sites have been submitted to the Commission as candidate special areas for conservation under the habitats directive, and will be protected in the interim pending formal designation. [38375]

Housing

26. Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many homes are under construction and how many have been built during the last 12 months; and what were the equivalent figures in 1978-79. [38376]

Mr. Curry: It is estimated that 146,000 dwellings were completed in England during the 12 months to August 1996 and that 197,000 were under construction by the end of August. In comparison, some 227,000 dwellings were completed in the financial year 1978-79 and there were 339,000 under construction at the end of March 1979. [38376]

Global Warming

27. Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what new responses he plans to combat global warming (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) via international initiatives. [38377]

28. Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action is being taken by his Department to meet its objectives in respect of carbon dioxide reductions. [38378]

Mr. Clappison: I am pleased to say that the UK is on target to meet the Rio commitment to return greenhouse gas emissions to 1990 levels by 2000 and we expect carbon dioxide emissions to be 4 to 8 per cent. below 1990 levels. This achievement reflects the impact of measures set out in the UK climate change programme and the progress report on carbon dioxide emissions.

However, there is no room for complacency. The UK is one of only a handful of states which will meet the Rio commitment and, by the next climate change conference in December 1997, we need to have agreed significant reductions in emissions beyond 2000. That is why I have called on other states to agree to reduce greenhouse gas emissions by 5 to 10 per cent below 1990 levels by 2010.

Integrated Regional Office, Yorkshire

Mr. MacShane: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to ensure democratic accountability of integrated regional office officials in Yorkshire. [38379]

Mr. Curry: As head of the Government office for Yorkshire and the Humber, the regional director remains accountable to each of my right hon. Friends the President of the Board of Trade and the Secretaries of State for Education and Employment and for Transport and to me for the delivery of our particular policies and programmes.

Right to Buy

Mr. Peter Atkinson: To ask the Secretary of state for the Environment how many tenants have exercised the right to buy in the last 12 months. [38366]

Mr. Curry: In the year to March 1996, there were more than 31,500 right-to-buy sales by local authorities and new towns in England. Right to buy and other home ownership schemes are still producing about 180 new home owners a day in Britain.

Policy Initiatives

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what environmental policy initiatives have been launched since 26 July. [38518]

Mr. Clappison: During the parliamentary recess, we have been mainly concerned to develop initiatives which will be announced in this place shortly. Since 26 July, we have launched the following main environmental policy initiatives: consultation on air quality strategy; publication of circular on revised special waste regulations; and publication of draft statutory guidance on contaminated land. In addition, the landfill tax came into operation on 1 October.

Hedgerows

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what action he proposes to take in regard to the protection of hedgerows which were established under private enclosure legislation in the light of a recent court case in East Yorkshire. [40073]

Mr. Clappison: The recent judgment in this case established that the Yorkshire wildlife trust and Mr. Colin Seymour, a parishioner, have locus standi to pursue their application for a declaration that Flamborough parish council is bound by the relevant Enclosure Act and award to preserve part of an enclosure hedge. I understand that the application has yet to be heard by the court. We await the outcome with interest. When that is known, we will consider the implications of this case, if any, for regulations for the protection of important hedgerows to be introduced under section 97 of the Environment Act 1995. Such regulations will not, however, override restrictions imposed by other enactments or agreements, including enclosure awards.

Rating Appeals

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many rating appeals (a) in total and (b) by valuation office were lodged against the (i) 1990 and (ii) 1995 rating lists; and in each case how many (1) have been resolved and (2) are outstanding. [40423]

Sir Paul Beresford: I am placing in the Library a set of tables which set out, in total, by region and by each office of the Valuation Office agency in England, the number of valid proposals to alter the 1995 rating lists which were received by 31 August 1996, the number settled and the number outstanding.

I am also placing in the Library tables setting out, in total, by region and by each office, the number of proposals to alter the 1990 lists which are outstanding as at 31 August. The number of valid proposals received against the 1990 list in England up to 31 August was 1,402,948. Information on the number received by individual office and region is not available, as the structure and number of offices have now changed.

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects all the appeals against (a) the 1990 rating list and (b) the 1995 rating list to have been resolved; and if he will make a statement. [40424]

Sir Paul Beresford: Current plans are that appeals against the 1990 rating lists outstanding at 1 April 1996 should be cleared by 31 December 1996; appeals made prior to 31 March 1996 by 31 December 1997; and to reduce progressively the time to clear appeals to a maximum of 12 months by 1 April 1988. The only exceptions will be cases where all reasonable efforts to settle matters by agreement have been exhausted and the cases are awaiting determination by valuation tribunals or by the Lands Tribunal.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the research being conducted at British universities into materials that could be exported in support of construction projects compatible with principles of sustainable development; and what support his Department has provided these projects. [40425]

Mr. Clappison: My Department has made no such assessment. However, the Department of the Environment is providing direct support for the enhancement of civil engineering exports, including environmental technology, through collaborative funding of a two-year research project led by the Institution of Civil Engineers. This follows a recommendation from the national technology foresight exercise and will promote appropriate research programmes to cultivate UK expertise critical to export success in civil engineering.

Child Care (North Hull)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to announce approval of the child care facility in north Hull under the Yorkshire and Humberside objectives of the European regional development fund programme. [40477]

Sir Paul Beresford: The approval letters for this scheme were issued by the Department for Education and Employment on 25 September 1996.

European Regional Development Fund

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when his Department plans to complete its review of ERDF processes in England. [40421]

Sir Paul Beresford: We hope to complete the review in time for the implementation of the 1997 to 1999 round of objective 2 programmes.

Administrative Expenditure Guidelines

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when his finance directorate issued its MINIS 17 guidelines for administrative expenditure. [40654]

Sir Paul Beresford: Expenditure guidelines were issued on 22 September 1995 at the beginning of the MINIS 17 planning round, based on the resource requirements which were agreed in MINIS 16. The guidelines were adjusted as normal throughout the MINIS 17 round, in the light of available resources, technical changes and decisions taken.

Drinking Water Inspectorate

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of whether the outcome of the review of the handling of incidents and prosecutions by the drinking water inspectorate is consistent with the quality procedures manual and the code of enforcement. [40656]

Mr. Clappison: The review of incidents was carried out by a consultant on behalf of the drinking water inspectorate. It did not cover the inspectorate's handling of incidents, but was concerned with the lessons that could be learnt by the water companies in preventing incidents and their handling of them. The objectives of the review included: categorising the type of incidents, causes and frequency of occurrence; carrying out a critical appraisal of water companies' responses to incidents, including actions taken to protect and inform consumers, to communicate with health and local authorities and to prevent recurrence of incidents; assessing the effectiveness of water companies' arrangements for responding to incidents and the actions taken to rectify any faults in the treatment/distribution system, identifying areas of weakness; identifying those incidents which were outside the control of the company and those incidents which were avoidable; identifying those regulations which are commonly breached; and making recommendations appropriate to the findings from the above on any issues which warrant wider consideration.

The inspectorate is assessing the consultant's findings and will publish the main conclusions and lessons to be learnt early in 1997.

The drinking water inspectorate's quality procedures manual consists of a number of procedures covering the inspectorate's activities, including one on the handling of incidents and another on the handling of consumer complaints about drinking water quality. These procedures have been developed as part of the inspectorate's total quality programme. The one on handling incidents has been in operation since May 1996. This procedure is an important part in achieving a consistent and rigorous approach to the investigations of incidents.

The code for enforcement was introduced at the beginning of 1994. The code sets down how the inspectorate carries out its duties and sets service standards with response times. The inspectorate reports on its performance against the response times in its annual report.

Central Economic Directorate

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to make more transparent the output of his Department's central economic directorate. [40657]

Mr. Clappison: The output of the Department's chief economist directorate is set out each year in its MINIS return.

"Policy Appraisal and the Environment"

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he plans to publish his Department's evaluation of the Government advisory document, "Policy Appraisal and the Environment," as implemented by Government Departments. [40655]

Mr. Clappison: The consultants appointed to undertake the evaluation of "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" are due to submit a draft final report to the Department in mid-December. No decision about the timing of publication has yet been taken.

Environment Policy

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the implications for the United Kingdom environment policy of ISO 14001 published in September; and if he will make a statement. [40653]

Mr. Clappison: The White Paper on sustainable development—Cmnd. 2426—set out the Government's belief that voluntary initiatives by business have a vital role to play. The Government therefore welcome the new international standard for environmental management systems, ISO 14001, as it provides a management tool which will enable businesses voluntarily to improve their environmental performance. I was delighted earlier this week to address the British Standards Institution's conference to launch ISO 14001 in this country, an event which aptly reflected the pioneering work previously done by the institution to establish the world's first specification for environmental management systems, BS 7750. Businesses now have a framework for a voluntary and proactive approach to the management of their environmental impacts which is backed up by a regime of independent certification and is recognised worldwide. Companies making use of the standard will also be well on the way to achieving registration of their sites under the eco-management and audit scheme, which was launched last year across the European Union and is keenly supported by the Government. These initiatives, with their industry-wide recognition, should together form a powerful incentive for progressive business organisations to improve their competitiveness and at the same time raise the level of their environmental performance well above the minimum demanded by regulation.

Unexploded Bombs (London)

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information his Department (a) holds and (b) has assessed in respect of unexploded bombs in London; how many unexploded bombs are estimated to exist in each London authority area; how many bombs are officially listed; what is the estimated risk associated with these; what contact his Department has had with planners, surveyors or their representative groups in this matter; and what action is planned to deal with the situation. [40564]

Sir Paul Beresford: There is nothing I can add to the answer already given today by my hon. Friend the Minister of State for the Armed Forces, who has undertaken to write to the hon. Member.

Wildlife Law (Guide)

Mr. Sykes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to publish the practitioner's guide to wildlife law. [40945]

Mr. Clappison: Last November, I launched the partnership for action against wildlife crime, and announced that the Department would make funds available to finance a guide to wildlife law. Through the launch of the partnership, we have established good links between enforcement organisations, identified problems hampering enforcement, and sought ways to overcome them. One problem has been the lack of a comprehensive source of information about the various pieces of legislation protecting wildlife.

Tomorrow, the Secretary of State for the Environment will announce the publication of the guide "Wildlife Crime—a Guide to Wildlife Law Enforcement in the UK" at a major seminar on combating environmental crime, to be held at the QEII conference centre in London. A copy of the guide will be placed in the Library of the House.

The seminar will explore the scope for improving the enforcement of trade measures contained in key international environmental agreements to ensure that the UK is at the forefront of tackling the illegal trade in endangered species, ozone-depleting substances and hazardous waste, and whether lessons learnt in one area can be applied in another.

Rural White Paper

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the Government intend to publish their progress report on the Rural White Paper, "Rural England: A Nation Committed to a Living Countryside". [41082]

Mr. Gummer: My right hon. and learned Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and I intend to publish the progress report "Rural England 1996" on 24 October 1996. This reports on progress in implementing the commitments made in "Rural England", which we published in October 1995.

PRIME MINISTER

Engagements

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 15 October. [38691]

Sir Peter Tapsell: To ask the Prime Minister if he will list his official engagements for Tuesday 15 October. [38692]

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House I shall be having further meetings later today.

Ombudsman

Sir Michael Shersby: To ask the Prime Minister if he will make a statement about the offices of the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration and Health Service Commissioner for England, for Scotland and for Wales. [40949]

The Prime Minister: In accordance with section 1(3) of the Parliamentary Commissioner Act 1967 and schedule 1 to the Health Service Commissioners Act 1993, Sir William Reid will be retiring from these offices on 2 January 1997.

Her Majesty has been pleased to approve the appointment of Mr. Michael Sydney Buckley as Sir William's successor as Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration and Health Service Commissioner for England, for Scotland and for Wales, with effect from 3 January 1997.

I am sure all Members of the House would wish me to express their gratitude and admiration for the very able and thorough manner in which Sir William Reid has fulfilled these duties over the last seven years. He has made an outstanding contribution to our public life.

Royal Family (Taxation)

Mr. Michael Brown: To ask the Prime Minister what changes are planned to be made to the memorandum of understanding of 5 February 1993 under which the Queen and the Prince of Wales pay income, capital gains and inheritance tax on a voluntary basis, to take account of the introduction of the new system of self assessment for income tax and capital gains tax. [40950]

The Prime Minister: Yes, a change is required to reflect the new tax payment dates under self assessment. The memorandum of understanding has been amended, and I am placing a copy of the amendment in the Library.

The memorandum of understanding provided that income tax and capital gains tax would be payable on 1 December following the end of the tax year. However, under self-assessment, 1 December will no longer be a tax payment date, and instead income tax will be payable on 31 January and 31 July and capital gains tax on 31 January. The memorandum of understanding has therefore been amended to make income tax and capital gains tax for 1996–97—the transitional year—payable on 31 January 1998; and income tax and capital gains tax for 1997–98 and subsequent years will be payable on 31 January and 31 July in accordance with the normal rules of self assessment.

These new arrangements mean tax will be paid under the memorandum of understanding several months earlier on average than at present.

Changes have also been made to the provisions relating to payments on account, and interest on tax underpaid or overpaid, to bring them into line with the new self assessment rules.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Early Retirement and Voluntary Severance

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many (i) early retirement and (ii) voluntary severance packages were given to civil servants by grade in each Government Department in 1995–96. [40121]

Mr. Freeman: I regret that the information requested is available only at disproportionate cost. However, the table provides details of the number of early retirements and early severances in 1995–96 by main Department.

Department	Number of early retirements	Number of early severances
Agriculture, Fisheries and Food	280	228
Crown Prosecution Service	53	10
Customs and Excise	588	335
Defence	2,285	2,400
Education and Employment	450	627
Environment (including Property Holdings)	180	102
Foreign and Commonwealth Office	98	15
Overseas Development Administration	47	92
Health	284	355
Her Majesty's Prison Service	51	25
Home Office	103	22
Inland Revenue	1,090	466
Lord Chancellor's Department	84	28

Paymaster agency.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) what was the average value of (i) early retirement and (ii) voluntary severance packages given to civil servants by grade in each Government Department in 1995–96 [40120]

(2) what was the highest value (i) early retirement and (ii) voluntary severance package given to civil servants by grade in each Government Department in 1995–96. [40122]

Mr. Freeman: The information requested is available only at disproportionate cost.

Business Support

Mr. Mates: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what conclusions have been drawn from the Government's consultation on simplification of business support, announced in the third competitiveness White Paper. [40512]

The Deputy Prime Minister: My Department is today publishing the conclusions of the cross-government review on simplification of business support. The new arrangements mark a significant development in the partnership between government and business. We are bringing together support form across government into more coherent, simplified programmes. We are also committed to moving away from centrally designed and administered support schemes, which business has told us can be too complex and distant from their own needs, and to making government-funded support as customer focused as possible.

The new challenge funds—local and sectoral—will be set up to support the best proposals for the most effective and customer focused business partnerships. My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade is today announcing further details of these challenges. Wherever possible these partnerships will take over the design and delivery of business support. Services that are best administered centrally, such as export market information, will be simplified to make them more accessible and responsive to business needs.

By giving business more of a say in how support services are provided, the Government aim to meet their needs more fully and to ensure the best value for money for the taxpayer. Copies of the conclusions, "Helping businesses to win: the conclusions of the consultation", have been placed in the Library of the House.

Executive Agencies

Mr. David Nicholson: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster if he will make a statement about the progress of the sales of HMSO, Chessington Computer Centre, Recruitment and Assessment Service and the Occupational Health and Safety Agency. [41081]

Mr. Freeman: These sales have now been completed. Chessington Computer Centre was sold on 31 July to a consortium made up of a management and employee buy-out team, Integris UK—the outsourcing division of Bull Information Systems Ltd.—and financial backers, Close Brothers. The consideration was £12.5 million, of which £1.25 million is deferred until 31 December 1999.

The Occupational Health and Safety Agency—OHSA—was sold on 18 September to BMI Health Services, which is part of General Healthcare Group plc. The consideration was £350,000. In addition, BMI is acting as agents for the Government to collect trade debts owed to OHSA which were estimated to be about £1.4 million when the sale was completed.

Her Majesty's Stationery Office was sold on 30 September to National Publishing Group—NPG—a consortium led by Electra Fleming to trade under the name The Stationery Office. The consideration was £54 million. In addition, NPG has raised £71 million to fund investment, restructuring and working capital for The Stationery Office. In a separate transaction in September, the Government sold an HMSO site near Manchester for £1.4 million.

Recruitment and Assessment Services was sold on 30 September to the Capita Group plc. The consideration was £7.25 million.

SCOTLAND

Ethnic Minorities

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many women from ethnic minorities are employed by his Department and its agencies; at what grade; and what measures he has taken to encourage the (a) recruitment, (b) employment and (c) promotion of women from ethnic minorities within his Department and its agencies. [39895]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: There are seven women members of staff who have declared themselves to be from an ethnic minority background in the Scottish Office and its agencies. Three hold posts at AO grade and four at AA grade. As an employer committed to equal opportunities for all staff we monitor the recruitment, employment and promotion of men and women whatever their background to ensure that no discrimination takes place. In recent months we have established a network group to support staff from an ethnic minority background. That group has discussed awareness raising of employment opportunities in the Scottish Office among ethnic minorities.

Blind People

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the total number of registered blind people in Scotland by category. [40033]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The latest complete figures are those for 1995:

Number of persons registered blind and partially sighted: Scotland—1995

	Number registered at 31 March (include those registered as new cases)
	Blind			Partially sighted

Prisons (Hepatitis)

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps are being taken to monitor the levels of hepatitis B and C within prisons in Scotland; how many inmates in the prison system have hepatitis B and C; what guidance his Department gives for the treatment of prisoners with hepatitis B and C; what measures are being taken to minimise the spread of hepatitis B and C within Scottish prisons; and if he will make a statement. [39891]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The subject of the question relates to matters undertaken by the Scottish Prison Service. I have asked its chief executive, Mr. E. W. Frizzell, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from E. W. Frizzell to Mr. Archy Kirkwood, dated 15 October 1996:

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton has asked me to reply to your question about the steps taken by the Scottish Prison Service to deal with hepatitis B and C within prisons in Scotland.

The Scottish Prison Service encourages inmates at risk of hepatitis B and C (principally those who have been involved in intravenous drug misuse) to come forward for voluntary testing on a confidential basis. For that reason it is not possible to state how many prisoners are infected with hepatis B and/or C. In a survey of 14 establishments in April 1995, however, there had been 48 positive results for hepatitis B out of 264 blood tests carried out in the previous year on prisoners at risk. The records of a sample of known intravenous drug users recently admitted to prison were also scrutinised. Ten per cent of the 165 prisoners involved were known to be hepatitis B positive, 47% were negative while for 43% the hepatitis status was not known. As regards hepatitis C, in Shotts Prison (with 465 adult male prisoners), 21 prisoners sought tests between January and July this year, of which 13 were positive (2 being confirmations of earlier tests). In Cornton Vale prison (for females) over the same period 27 out of 40 tests for hepatitis C were positive. For hepatitis B 6 tests out of 29 were positive.

Immunisation against hepatitis B is available to prisoners and support treatments are provided as appropriate by prison medical officers, including the use of Interferon if required. The Medical Adviser to the SPS will shortly be issuing guidance to prison medical officers based on best practice in the NHS.

Information is provided to prisoners through leaflets and clinics. As part of a wider hygiene initiative, disinfectant tablets are available to all prisoners for cleaning utensils. So far as is known these tablets will also kill hepatitis B and C.

NHS Funds

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the reasons for delaying further reconsideration of the Scottish health authorities revenue equalisation—SHARE—formula for distribution of health service funds, with specific reference to rural areas; and when he plans next to have discussions with officials of Highland health board on this matter. [40676]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I anticipate that all health boards will be moved to their SHARE parity position at 1 April 1997. Evaluation of technical aspects of the formula is continually undertaken by my officials. Any proposals for changes to the formula would be subject to consultation with health boards and others at the appropriate time.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Millenium Exhibition

Mr. Rooker: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a progress report on plans for the millenium exhibition funding from the (a) public and (b) private sectors; and by what date a final decision will be made. [40648]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 14 October 1996]: This is a matter for the Millenium Commission. I shall reply to the hon. Member in my capacity as chairman of the commission and place copies of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

Millenium Festival

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what progress has been made in preparing for the millennium festival. [37928]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley [holding answer 14 October 1996]: This is a matter for the Millenium Commission. I shall reply to the hon. Member in my capacity as chairman of the commission and place copies of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

TRANSPORT

Transport Security Director

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he has published the 1995-96 annual report of the Director of Transport Security. [40952]

Sir George Young: Copies of this report are available in the Library of the House.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Child Support Agency

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what steps he is taking to reduce the level of unpaid maintenance as assessed by the Child Support Agency. [40056]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Mr. Frank Field, dated 14 October 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency maintenance assessments.

The Agency is currently in the process of implementing a number of initiatives to further improve the collection of legally due maintenance.

A Debt Management System (DMS) has been trialled in our Plymouth Centre and will be rolled out nationally between January 1997 to March 1997. This will enable the Agency to better identify accounts which fall into arrears and take positive action to progress these cases. The Agency is also enhancing the Child Support Computer System and introducing procedural modifications to help improve compliance.

Various payment methods are used to help minimise debt. The use of deduction of earnings orders (DEOs) where necessary, has proved a very effective method. To further improve the effectiveness of DEOs the Agency has streamlined its procedures to ensure that payment of maintenance starts as soon as possible.

Where a DEO is not appropriate the Agency considers enforcement action such as obtaining a liability order. Also, since May 1996 the Agency has been able to enter debts in the County Court Register of Judgements. This is particularly useful with self-employed absent parents who do not pay their legally due maintenance. It is a powerful incentive to avoid credit blacklisting.

The Agency is also looking at ways of further improving compliance at an early stage by encouraging the use of other payment methods such as direct debit.

Finally, I would like to add that reduction of the outstanding maintenance debt is a high priority for the Agency.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many cases deferred by the Child Support Agency following the announcement of 20 December 1994 (a) have been taken on by the agency and (b) have yet to be taken on. [40059]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Mr. Frank Field, dated 14 October 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the Child Support Agency cases where take on was deferred in December 1994.

The Agency recommenced take on of these cases in November 1995, in line with the agreement made with the Secretary of State to recommence take on by December 1995. Up to 31 August 1996, 4,845 cases had been taken on by the Agency.

It is not possible to give an exact figure for the number of cases still outstanding. To obtain this a clerical examination of all the deferred cases would have to be made to find those appropriate for action and this would incur disproportionate cost. It is estimated that the number outstanding at 30 June 1996 has reduced to around 190,000 cases.

This reduction is due to a number of reasons. The recommencement of take on mentioned above; also, in some cases where Income Support has ceased and the parent with care has made a fresh application for benefit, the Agency will have become involved and these cases will have been taken on; in other cases the parent with care will have requested that the Agency take on the case and this will have been done; finally, some clients will no longer be claiming Income Support.

I hope this is helpful.

Mr. Cohen: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the number and percentage of women, since the establishment of the Child Support Agency, whose cases have been examined by the Child Support Agency who (a) have not named the father, (b) are accepted by the agency as not knowing the name of the father and (c) claim not to know the name of the father but whose claim has been rejected by the Child Support Agency. [40141]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Ann Chant to Mr. Harry Cohen, dated 14 October 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about Child Support Agency cases.
The details that you have requested are not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost; there are a number of reasons for this:
Firstly, the Agency does not differentiate absent parents and parents with care by gender; by far the vast majority of parents with care are women, but within those cases where the parent with care has failed to identify the person liable to pay maintenance, there is a small number where the parent with care is male.

Also, when dealing with parents with care and collecting details of absent parents, the Agency encounters very different circumstances and goes through different stages for different cases. The issue of naming the absent parent, and the question of whether the parent with care knows the name of the absent parent are factors that contribute to this process; however, the Agency does not record statistical information in every case on these factors separately.

From the nearest available information in this area, I can tell you that of over 1.3 million cases cleared by the Agency since its launch in April 1993, the number of cases where the failure to name the absent parent, initially at least, has been an issue is estimated to be in the region of 180,000.

I hope this is helpful.

Community Care Grant Appeals

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will make it his policy to accelerate the community care grant appeals procedure; and if he will make a statement. [40236]

Mr. Roger Evans: The Secretary of State has laid down guidance and directions for dealing with a request for a review. We are not aware of any major problems with the current review process.

From 1 April 1996 to 31 July 1996 inclusive the average clearance time for a community care grant review was 13.8 days.

One benefit office in the hon. Member's constituency did have a backlog of reviews outstanding at the end of July. It has since taken action to reduce the arrears in this area of work. Its clearance time for reviews should be showing an improvement and constituents should now be receiving an improved service.

Reduced Earnings Allowance

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many appeals in each of the benefit districts in Wales have been lodged against the withdrawal of the reduction in earnings allowance. [40464]

Mr. Roger Evans: This information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what estimate his Department has made of the number of appeals to be made in England and Wales against the withdrawal of the reduced earnings allowance; [40468]

(2) how many additional staff have been employed and how many man hours have been devoted to deal with the outstanding appeals made to date against the withdrawal of the reduced earnings allowance. [40461]

Mr. Evans: The information is not available in the format requested.

It was estimated that approximately 25 per cent. of reduced allowance recipients transferred to retirement allowance following the introduction of amending legislation would appeal against the adjudication officer's decision.

Based on this assumption the cost in staff time for the Benefits Agency is estimated at a total of 15.81 man years. This figure is provisional and may be subject to change.

Offices have been provided with resources accordingly to enable them to deal with the extra work arising from these appeals.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many individual appeals against the withdrawal of the reduced earning allowances have been heard; and what percentage of appeals heard have found in favour of the appellants. [40469]

Mr. Evans: The information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been the average cost to an individual who has lost his reduced earnings allowance as a result of recent regulations in each of the benefit districts in Wales. [40467]

Mr. Evans: The information is not available in the format requested.

Reduced earnings allowance recipients who are over pensionable age and who are not in regular employment have been transferred to retirement allowance in accordance with the Social Security (Industrial Injuries and Diseases) (Miscellaneous Amendments) Regulations 1996, which came into effect on 24 March 1996. The average difference between reduced earnings allowance and retirement allowance is estimated to be around £29.00. This may be offset by additional income-related benefit entitlement for some retirement allowance recipients.

Child Support Departure System

Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he proposes to introduce the child support departure system. [40915]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: I have today laid draft regulations which, subject to the approval of the House, will provide for the departures system to be phased in nationally from 2 December 1996.

The child support formula assessment is right in the vast majority of cases but the new system will allow scope for discretion in the small proportion of cases where the standard formula is not seen to produce a fair result. The grounds on which a departure application may be made include, for example, property and capital transfers made before April 1993 and high travel costs to maintain contact with the child. Also included are cases where parents are diverting income which would otherwise be available or where their lifestyle is inconsistent with their declared income.

Supported Housing

Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are the terms of reference of the interdepartmental review of funding of supported housing; and if he will make a statement. [40914]

Mr. Roger Evans: In April, right hon. Friend the Secretary of State consulted on draft regulations to clarify the treatment of service charges in housing benefit. The representations that he received indicated that significant amounts of housing benefit may be being paid in respect of personal services in supported accommodation. He concluded that the sudden withdrawal of this source of income may cause significant difficulties for vulnerable people. Therefore, the proposed amendment was withdrawn and an urgent inter-departmental review commissioned to consider all aspects of the funding of services in supported accommodation. The review's terms of reference are to:

1. Identify and estimate current benefit expenditure on services provided in supported accommodation.
2. Consider the proposed legislation and its implications. In particular, identify and estimate the numbers of people who would have been affected by it.
3. Examine and report upon the current mechanisms for funding and delivery of support services.
4. Identify and report upon alternative mechanisms for funding support services.
5. Examine and support upon where the sustainable balance should lie between Social Security and other funding services, and the implications for the care and housing sectors.

We are seeking a sustainable balance between the various funding sources which ensures that essential support services are properly and appropriately funded whilst securing the most effective and economic resources.

Child Benefit

Mr. Steinberg: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many children aged (a) 16, (b) 17, (c) 18 and (d) 19 years in receipt of child benefit attend (i) school, (ii) sixth form college, (iii) tertiary college, (iv) further education college and (v) the youth training scheme. [30139]

Mr. Burt [pursuant to his reply, 22 May 1996, Official Report, c. 290]: The information that I gave regarding the number of 17-year-olds undergoing youth training was incorrect. The correct information is as follows.

The information is not available in the format requested. Child benefit data are not available on the nature of the education being undertaken, and education data have no regard to the receipt or otherwise of child benefit. The figures are therefore not directly comparable. However, child benefit is not payable for any young person undergoing a youth training course, and all entitlement ceases at the 19th birthday. Available data on the number of 16, 17 and 18–year–olds for whom child benefit is paid, and the number in education and training are in the tables:

Number of children for whom child benefit is paid

	Number
16 year olds	577,100
17 year olds	400,700
18 year olds	177,600

Educational establishments attended by 16 to 18–year–olds

	16–year–olds	17–year–olds	18–year–olds
Schools	246,000	175,000	19,000
Sixth form colleges	53,000	40,000	10,000
Tertiary colleges	35,000	30,000	13,000
Further education	125,000	112,000	74,000
Youth training	69,000	76,000	40,000

DEFENCE

Precision Guided Missiles

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what reports he has received that parts for the ISC-Ferranti precision guided missile were to be supplied by South Africa; what action his Department took as a result of such reports; and if he will make a statement. [40210]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The hon. Member will recall that he raised this issue in a letter that he sent to my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister dated 5 November 1994.

The Prime Minister's reply of 24 November stated that the papers that the hon. Member had forwarded with his letter did not provide any evidence of breaches in UK import or export controls. I have nothing to add to this.

Biological Weapons (Iran)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what recent assessment he has made of the biological weapons capacity of Iran. [40506]

Mr. Soames: Iran has a developed biotechnology industry which would be capable of sustaining a biological warfare research programme. For this reason, it is a cause for concern that Iran, though a state party to the biological and toxin weapons convention since 1973, has not offered to submit to the UN centre for disarmament affairs any confidence-building and transparency declarations.

Gulf War Syndrome

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proposals he has to add a gynaecologist to the medical team examining British service men and ex-service men and their partners who are suffering prolonged illness following service in the Gulf war. [40496]

Mr. Soames: It is not intended to add a gynaecologist to the medical team running the Department's medical assessment programme. If a consultant gynaecological opinion is required, this will be obtained through the usual medical referral procedure.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what research in collaboration with the United States Institute of Medicine has been funded by his Department into Gulf war syndrome. [40497]

Mr. Soames: The United States Government are funding a range of studies into Gulf health issues, including one in the United Kingdom by Dr. Simon Wessely of King's college medical school. I shall be announcing the final selection of research projects to be funded by my Department, as recommended by the Medical Research Council, in November.

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans he has to compensate victims of Gulf war syndrome; and if he will make a statement. [40557]

Mr. Soames: Those who served in the Gulf war have the same legal right of compensation against the Ministry of Defence as civilian workers have against MOD or any other employer. Any Gulf veterans who can be shown to be suffering from illness caused by negligence on the part of my Department will be entitled to compensation in line with common law principles. However, no such compensation claims have yet been pursued by lawyers for claimants, although a list of over a thousand names of potential claimants has been lodged with MOD. This list gives the symptoms or disease claimed to have been experienced by each person since the Gulf war, without specific allegations of negligence.

Gulf War Clean-up Operations

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many British troops were involved with United States forces in the clean-up operations near Al-Nasiriyah in 1991 following the Gulf war. [40498]

Mr. Soames: Our records indicate that no British troops were involved in the US Army's activities in the Al-Nasiriyah area after the Gulf war.

Operation Granby

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which British forces served directly with the US Army's 37 Engineer Battalion during Operation Granby. [40499]

Mr. Soames: We have no record of any British forces serving directly with the US Army's 37th Engineer Battalion during Operation Granby.

Gulf War Publications

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence which sections of the text of the recent book on the Gulf war by Major-General Patrick Cordingley, were amended by his Department on submission of the draft text for clearance; and if he will list the reasons for the removal of sections of the submitted text. [40505]

Mr. Soames: Minor changes to Major-General Cordingley's manuscript were agreed in order to protect confidentiality and national security.

Military Bases (Pollution)

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what studies have been commissioned by his Department into (a) the degree of contamination and (b) the prospects for remedial action at (i) military bases in the United Kingdom and (ii) dependent territories abroad. [40426]

Mr. Soames: Within the United Kingdom my Department is introducing a procedure of land quality assessment to establish the condition of individual sites on the defence estate and where appropriate make recommendations for and implementation of remediation. Given the extent of the defence estate a prioritised programme for this work is being drawn up. For dependent territories abroad, a similar land quality assessment process is being adopted, where this meets the requirements of the host country.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received this year from the Celtic League concerning the environmental consequences of pollution at and leakages from existing and retired military bases in the United Kingdom. [40427]

Mr. Soames: None. The league has asked for environmental information about UK military bases, but it has not yet confirmed that it would be prepared to meet any MOD administrative costs for researching the information due under the Environmental Information Regulations 1992.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what studies his Department has commissioned on the levels of (a) toxic and (b) other pollution at military bases in Wales; and what publications his Department has issued in this respect over the past 12 months. [40518]

Mr. Soames: My Department is introducing a procedure of land quality assessment to establish the condition of individual sites and detect the presence of contaminants on the defence estate, and where appropriate make recommendations for and implementation of remediation. Given the extent of the defence estate, a prioritised programme for this work is being drawn up. Land quality assessment work is being undertaken at the Defence Evaluation and Research Agency sites at Aberporth, Llanbedr and Pendine, and an assessment of RAF Caerwent was commissioned on 4 October 1996.

My Department has not issued any publications about the level of contamination at military sites in Wales during the last 12 months.

HMS Royal Oak

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the potential environmental threat from the seepage of oil from the wreck of HMS Royal Oak at Scapa Flow in the Orkney Islands. [40428]

Mr. Soames: My Department has taken urgent steps to remove the environmental threat to Scapa Flow posed by oil leaking from a small area of the wreck of HMS Royal Oak. The leak has been sealed, and the small quantity of oil which had come ashore prior to this action has been removed.

Landfill Tax

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what consultation his Department has undertaken with Her Majesty's Customs and Excise over the implementation of the landfill tax; and if he will make a statement. [40429]

Mr. Soames: Her Majesty's Customs and Excise have kept my Department informed of the plans to implement the landfill tax. As the MOD and its agencies do not operate any landfill sites, we do not except to pay direct landfill tax charges.

Submarines

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many submarines are now assessed to be surplus to requirements; and what plans exist for their disposal. [40551]

Mr. Arbuthnot: There are currently six diesel–electric submarines surplus to the Royal Navy's requirements: four Upholder class and two Oberon class boats. The four Upholder class submarines are currently being marketed for sale or lease to a number of friendly countries. The Oberon class boats are in the hands of a commercial residual asset manager who is stripping them of reusable components before the hulls are sold for breaking.

Eleven nuclear-powered submarines have been withdrawn from service. Our current policy is that decommissioned nuclear-powered submarines should be stored safely afloat at the location where they are decommissioned, pending disposal. We envisage final disposal, early next century, in the deep repository currently being developed by Nirex.

Deysbrook Barracks, Liverpool

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the future of the Deysbrook barracks site in Liverpool. [40552]

Mr. Soames: It is planned to redeploy the Regular Army units currently occupying Deysbrook barracks to other locations. The majority of the site will therefore no longer be required by my Department, and will be disposed of within the next four years. A small enclave will, however, be retained as a Territorial Army centre to house the Territorial Army and cadet units currently using the barracks.

Private Simon Jeans

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the murder of Private Simon Jeans serving with IFOR in Bosnia-Herzegovina. [40556]

Mr. Soames: Private Simon Jeans of the Royal Logistics Corps was attacked in Split, Croatia, on 7 September this year. Sadly, he died of his injuries 10 days later, having been medically evacuated to the UK. Her Majesty's Government are very saddened by this vicious and senseless act, and offer our most heartfelt sympathies to his family.

Criminal proceedings are progressing against four Croatian youths. Every assistance has been, and will continue to be, given to the Croatian civil police to bring the perpetrators of this dreadful crime to justice.

Trilateral Defence Agreement

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the trilateral defence agreement with Poland and Ukraine. [40559]

Mr. Soames: I met the Polish and Ukrainian Defence Ministers in Poland on 2 and 3 September. We agreed to institute a regular process of trilateral meetings and to develop a programme of trilateral defence co-operation. Within this framework, we are examining the possibility of UK assistance to the joint Polish-Ukrainian peacekeeping battalion and of joint training exercises.

Unexploded Bombs

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information his Department (a) holds and (b) has assessed in respect of unexploded bombs in London; how many unexploded bombs are estimated to exist in each London authority area; how many bombs are officially listed; what is the estimated risk associated with these; what contact his Department has had with planners, surveyors or their representative groups in this matter; and what contact his Department has had with planners, surveyors or their representative groups in this matter; and what action is planned to deal with the situation. [40563]

Mr. Soames: I will write to the hon. Member.

Services Sound and Vision Corporation

Mr. Colvin: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on his Department's relationship with the Services Sound and Vision Corporation. [40946]

Mr. Soames: The Services Sound and Vision Corporation is a registered charity and also a company limited by guarantee which supplies a range of goods and services to my Department and to other customers. It does not carry out any function of government as such. It is classified as a non-departmental public body sponsored by my Department because most of its income has derived from work which was automatically placed by my Department with the corporation on a non-profit basis, and the Ministry of Defence is represented by trustees in the higher organisation of the corporation. However, this arrangement has not provided MOD with the kind of control that it is appropriate for sponsoring Departments to exercise over their NDPBs. It has been decided that best value for money would be obtained if the relevant goods and services were obtained by normal contractual means. My Department intends, subject to any responses to the minute that it laid before Parliament on 14 October 1996, that all future work done for it by SSVC should be conducted under contract.

MOD's proposed contractual relationship with SSVC would be the same as its relationship with any commercial supplier, so it would be inappropriate for the corporation to retain its status as a NDPB. Therefore, subject to signing of the proposed contracts, it is intended that SSVC's NDPB status shall be revoked.

In order to prepare for the proposed new relationship with MOD, SSVC reviewed its activities. As a result of this, the corporation decided not to compete for some types of work that it previously undertook for MOD. This decision, and restructuring to enable it to compete for other types of MOD work, led to the need to reduce the SSVC work force by some 25 per cent. or about 200 posts. My Department has honoured its consequential liabilities towards SSVC by funding the restructuring costs, which mainly consisted of redundancy payments.

Another effect of the new relationship between MOD and SSVC concerns residual contingent liabilities. MOD would, under the proposed contractual relationship, retain some liabilities arising from the NDPB arrangement. This is explained in greater detail in the minute laid before Parliament to earlier.

With the removal of SSVC's NDPB status there would be no reason for MOD to continue to be represented in the corporation's higher organisation and, given the new contractual relationship between MOD and SSVC, it would be preferable for the practice to end as soon as possible.

Following the restructuring of SSVC and the removal of its NDPB status, the corporation should be able to operate more efficiently and with greater freedom than in the past. Given this, and its expertise in the business activity it will continue to undertake, MOD believes that the corporation should flourish.

Intelligence and Security Centre

Mr. Hargreaves: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement about defence agency status for the Defence Intelligence and Security Centre. [40947]

Mr. Soames: The defence costs study recommended that a single joint services defence intelligence and security training centre with a rationalised management and support structure be formed at one location and that this centre be considered for defence agency status.

Following detailed studies, I have agreed to the formation of the Defence Intelligence and Security Centre as a defence agency on 1 October 1996 at the former RAF Chicksands.

When collocation is complete, the DISC will comprise units formerly based at Ashford and Garats Hay stations, Royal Air Force North Luffenham and Wyton, and HMS Mercury. It will employ approximately 500 staff, comprising military personnel from all three Services and civil servants.

The chief executive will hold executive powers delegated from my Department to allow the agency to fulfil its responsibilities. The chief executive will also be directly accountable to my Department and Parliament for the propriety and regularity of the agency's expenditure, for the adequacy of its financial systems, and for the efficient and economical conduct of its business. I will arrange for copies of the agency's framework document and corporate plan to be placed in the Library of the House.

The aim of the agency is to train the armed forces and other intelligence agencies in intelligence, security and psychological operations disciplines and conduct after capture to contribute to effective and timely advice to the armed forces on appropriate intelligence and security policy matters, and to maintain an operational capability all in a cost effective manner.

The chief executive has been set the following demanding output and developmental key targets for the first six months of operation, taking into account that units will be moving to Chicksands during this period:

The output targets are:

For training:

to make available to customers an agreed number of planned annual course training days—1,125 days between 1 October 1996 and 31 March 1997, recognising the need to meet any surge requirements within allocated resources.

For advice:

to contribute to formulation of MOD policy on appropriate intelligence, security and psychological operations matters in an efficient and satisfactory manner.

For operations:

to meet the operational tasking to manning levels and performance standards agreed with the owner to the satisfaction of customers.

For development of the DISC, the targets are:

On training:

by 31 March 1997 to evaluate quality control mechanisms across all areas of training including systems of measurement, target setting and customer interface, all in accordance with the systems approach to training and identify any corrective measures necessary.

On advice:

in consultation with the owner and customers, determine a formal assessment mechanism by which the effectiveness of the contribution made by DISC staff to formulation of MOD policy for appropriate intelligence and security matters can be made.

Concerning resource management:

to introduce interim systems for training and financial management in order to produce training information and full cost accrual accounting based resource accounts for the period 1 October 1996 to 31 March 1997, in accordance with the requirements of agency reporting and the accounts direction for trial audit by the National Audit Office.

And also:

to progress the implementation of the planned DISC rationalisation and collocation programme.

All these targets will encourage continuous improvements and efficiencies to intelligence and security training for the armed services and enable the DISC to develop into a cohesive corporate centre of excellence. The bringing together of these units will also enable efficiencies in manpower and support costs to be made and a saving to the defence budget of £5 million per annum once collocation has occurred.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

St. Helena

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the figures for grant in aid for St. Helena for the past five years (a) in cash terms and (b) at constant prices. [40602]

Dr. Liam Fox: The figures are:

£ million

	Cash prices	Constant prices
1991–92	3.424	3.827
1992–93	3.479	3.731
1993–94	3.495	3.644
1994–95	3.225	3.303
1995–96	3.805	3.805

Grant in aid, or budgetary aid, is only one element of the UK's wider aid programme to St. Helena.

WALES

Local Government Consultation Paper

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when he proposes to announce his decisions on the proposals set out in his consultation paper "The Welsh Office and Local Government: Redefining the Relationship", published in March of this year. [41074]

Mr. Hague: I have already announced progress in a number of important areas, including arrangements for the first round of the Welsh capital challenge scheme. However, I have today published a second paper which provides a comprehensive summary of the original proposals and the responses received. It also sets out my decisions on all of the proposals and encourages further dialogue on the question of the Welsh Office's relationship with local government. Copies of the paper have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Second Severn Crossing

Mr. Donald Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will commission a study over an appropriate period of the effect of the second Severn crossing on the economy and employment of south Wales. [40031]

Mr. Hague: I have no such plans. The new crossing represents an opportunity that I believe Welsh businesses will take.

Tuberculosis

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many TB cases there were in Wales in the last available year; and if he will make a statement. [40051]

Mr. Hague: There were 184 notified cases of tuberculosis in Wales in 1995.

Smoking-related Diseases

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many people died from smoking-related diseases in each of the last three years. [40047]

Mr. Hague: The available information is as follows. All figures for 1995 are provisional.

The specific category of smoking-related disease is not defined explicitly. Three diseases commonly caused by smoking are: lung cancer, coronary heart disease, and chronic obstructive pulmonary disease.

The total number of deaths occurring in Wales from lung cancer was 2,017 in 1993, 1,966 in 1994 and 1,864 in 1995. It is likely that smoking would have been a major factor in between 90 and 95 per cent. of these deaths.

The total number of deaths occurring in Wales from coronary heart disease was 9,676 in 1993, 8,611 in 1994 and 8,739 in 1995. The total number of deaths occurring in Wales from chronic obstructive pulmonary disease was 1,802 in 1993, 1,557 in 1994 and 1,990 in 1995. It is likely that smoking would have been a major factor in a significant proportion of these deaths.

Ethnic Minorities

Ms Abbott: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many women from ethnic minorities are employed by his Department and its agencies; at what grade; and what measures he has taken to encourage the (a) recruitment, (b) employment and (c) promotion of women from ethnic minorities within his Department and its agencies. [39900]

Mr. Hague: My Department is committed to increasing the proportion of its staff who come from ethnic minority backgrounds. Outreach programmes have been introduced to encourage recruitment. A programme of action for staff from ethnic minorities has been developed to help identify and overcome any barriers and ensure staff have the opportunity to develop to their full potential.

Statistical information on staff from ethnic minorities is not available in the format requested.

NHS Staff

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many practice managers and practice administrative staff there are in the health service in Wales. [40049]

Mr. Hague: The information is given in the following table.

Whole–time equivalent number of GP practice staff in post

	1 October 1995
Practice managers, including fund managers	440
Other administrative staff[1]	2,463

[1] Secretarial, receptionist, clerical, computer operators and other administrative staff.

Mental Health

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much his Department spends on mental health; what proportion this constitutes of the health budget; and if he will make a statement. [40050]

Mr. Hague: In 1995–96, according to their audited accounts, district health authorities and family health authorities spent £149,880,964 on mental illness services which represented 7.6 per cent. of the total provision spent purchasing health care. This included some £13.8 million allocated by the Department for spending on mental health services.

Road and Economy Studies

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the titles of the studies (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated by his Department during the last 10 years concerning the relationship between economic growth, jobs and road building. [40064]

Mr. Hague: None, but the south Wales area traffic study published in December 1990 and the north-east Clwyd traffic study published in November 1991 looked at traffic levels, traffic growth and future capacity requirements for the road network in those areas of Wales. There is a degree of assessment of potential economic growth associated with such studies. Copies of both reports are in the Library of the House.

Youth Training

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate his Department has made of the average cost of a national vocational qualification acquired through youth training within each of the training and enterprise councils in Wales. [40484]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The following table gives the estimated apportionment of costs, as between national vocational qualifications levels 1 to 4, incurred by the Welsh Office as a result of its contracts with the respective training and enterprise councils in Wales in 1995–96.

Average cost of a national vocational qualification

TEC	Average—cost per NVQ 1995–96(£)
	NVQ1	NVQ2	NVQ3	NVQ4
Mid Glamorgan TEC	4,285	3,658	7,943	8,544
Gwent TEC	3,338	2,604	5,943	6,227
West Wales TEC	3,309	3,022	6,331	6,944
South Glamorgan TEC	4,768	3,709	8,477	8,874
Powys TEC	3,801	2,997	6,798	7,145
Targed	2,983	2,448	5,430	5,775
North East Wales TEC	3,217	2,176	5,393	5,416
Wales	3,751	3,009	6,760	7,141

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate his Department has made of the percentage and number of those aged 19 who have not achieved a national vocational qualification at level 2 or a comparable educational qualification. [40487]

Mr. Evans: The labour force survey for winter 1995–96 estimated that 36,000 or 39 per cent. of 19 to 21-year-olds in Wales had not achieved a national vocational qualification at level 2 or a comparable educational qualification. No reliable figures are available for 19-year-olds separately.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate his Department has made of the amount offered per training week within the youth training scheme by each training and enterprise council; and what proportion of that amount is spent on training. [40485]

Mr. Evans: The Welsh Office does not make estimates of the prices offered by each of the training and enterprise councils in Wales to training providers. The Department contracts with each TEC for a range of services at prices which reflect the nature and volume of service to be provided and take account of the previous year's outturn performance in terms of comparative unit costs. The TECs in turn contract with training providers and other suppliers at prices which reflect their own commercial judgment as to appropriate levels. These may be above or below those paid by the Department.

School Leavers

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the percentage of school leavers who have entered work without recognised training or further education. [40486]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The information requested is not collected by the Welsh Office. However, the Wales Association of Heads of Careers Companies has published figures showing that, of 16-year-olds in Wales in 1995, approximately 5 per cent. entered employment without any planned training.

Effluent Treatment Plants

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on how many occasions since 1 January 1990 consent conditions applied to effluent treatment plants in Wales have been contravened; and what steps have been taken to remedy the pollution. [40525]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: I refer the hon. Member to tables 13.1 to 13.3 in the "Environmental Digest for Wales No. 9 1996" published by the Welsh Office, a copy of which is in the Library of the House. Under the Water Resources Act 1991 and the Environment Act 1995, the Environment Agency has a wide range of powers to tackle aquatic pollution.

Drinking Water

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the compliance of provision of public drinking water supplies in Wales with the 1985 World Health Organisation guidelines on drinking water quality. [40520]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The national standards for public drinking water supplies are prescribed by the Water Supply (Water Quality) Regulations 1989, SI 1989 No. 1147. These incorporate the standards of the EC Drinking Water Directive, 80/778/EEC, which in turn are based in many cases on the 1984 World Health Organisation guidelines for drinking water quality. Information on compliance in Wales with the regulations is contained in the annual reports published by the chief inspector of the drinking water inspectorate, copies of which are held in the Library of the House.

Sustainable Development

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the progress of implementation since June 1992 of Agenda 21 for sustainable development in Wales. [40517]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Information on the progress made in Wales toward achieving sustainable development in Wales will be included in "The Environment in Wales—Fifth Report", which will be published in the next few weeks by the Welsh Office. I will arrange for copies of the report to be sent to the hon. Member and to be placed in the Library of the House.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent representations have been received in respect of the effect on sites of special scientific interest in wales of airborne and aquatic discharge from (a) power plants and (b) agri-farming. [40515]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: None.

Water Pollution

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many (a) major (b) significant (c) minor and (d) unsubstantiated water pollution incidents have been (i) notified and (ii) suspected in Wales in each year since the coming into force of the Water Resources Act 1991; how many prosecution have resulted and what punitive or remedial action has been taken in each case. [40522]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: I refer the hon. Member to the annual reports published by the Environment Agency and its predecessor the National Rivers Authority on "Water Pollution incidents in England and Wales", copies of which are held in the Library of the House.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales on how many occasions since the coming into force of the Water Resources Act 1991 the environmental protection authorities in Wales have dropped a prosecution against an alleged polluter where the incident was notified during the investigation as a category 1 or category 2 case. [40523]

Mr. Evans: The policy of the Environment Agency and previously the National Rivers Authority is to prosecute category 1 pollution incidents where there is adequate evidence to support the case. The policy for category 2 incidents is less rigid and allows for the use of formal cautions or warning letters where appropriate. Information on prosecutions under the Water Resources Act 1991 that have been dropped by the authority and the agency is not held centrally.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the meetings he has had in the past 12 months with the head of the Welsh region of the National Rivers Authority and the Welsh divisional office of the Environment Agency to discuss the effectiveness of the application of legislation to protect drinking water sources from pollution; and if he will indicate the outcome of each meeting. [40524]

Mr. Evans: Officials of the Environment Agency, and previously the National Rivers Authority, including the Welsh regional general manager, meet regularly with officials of the Welsh Office to discuss a range of matters relating to the functions of the agency and the authority. My right hon. Friend is advised on the carrying out of these functions by committees which have been established under section 6 of the Water Resources Act 1991 and section 11 of the Environment Act 1995 and annual reports are placed in the Library of the House.

Homelessness

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the level of homelessness in Wales; and what steps he is taking to alleviate the problem. [40516]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: I am very pleased that the level of homelessness in Wales continues to fall significantly. The recently published "Welsh Housing Statistics 1996", a copy of which is in the Library, recorded a fall in accepted cases of homelessness of 13 per cent. to 9,000 in 1995 and the proportion of priority acceptances at 65 per cent of this figure is the lowest recorded level since 1978.

We have a range of policies and initiatives in place in Wales to assist authorities in tackling homelessness and clearly these are working.

Bullying

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what provisions exist to assist schoolchildren in Wales to combat bullying. [40521]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: As part of the Government's commitment to tackling issues of school discipline, we have made available funding of £925,000 under this year's grant for education support and training programme for specific projects aimed at reducing truancy and improving classroom discipline generally. However, primary responsibility for measures to combat and deal with bullying rests with schools themselves supported by local education authorities.

All schools should establish their own anti-bullying policy as part of their overall policy on pupil behaviour and discipline.

We will be bringing forward a package of measures to improve school discipline in the Education Bill which we will be introducing in the next session of Parliament.

Urban Investment Grant Scheme

Mr. Richards: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales when the urban investment grant scheme will be transferred to the Welsh Development Agency; and if he will make a statement. [41073]

Mr. Hague: Transfer of responsibility for the urban investment grant—UIG—scheme was deferred from 1 April to 1 October 1996 to allow the WDA not only to administer new projects but to act as my agent for existing UIG agreements and for projects where grant was approved subject to the successful conclusion of a legal agreement falling within the WDA's statutory powers. This increased level of responsibility was made possible through section 130 of the Housing Grants Construction and Regeneration Act 1996, which came into force on 25 September. I appointed the WDA to be my agent in relation to these matters from 1 October 1996.

Also from 1 October 1996, for new business, I have asked the WDA to offer incentives similar to those previously available under the Welsh Office's UIG scheme to promote the economic regeneration of derelict land and buildings in urban areas. For 1996–97, £3.882 million will be transferred to the WDA to fund on-going and new projects.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Nuclear Test Ban

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of discussions at the United Nations General Assembly on a nuclear test ban; and if he will place in the Library a copy of all speeches made by representatives of the United Kingdom Government to the UNGA on a test ban since 1 September. [39918]

Mr. David Davis: A resolution adopting the comprehensive test ban treaty was adopted by the United Nations General Assembly on 10 September 1996, with the support of 158 states. My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs set out the Government's position in his statement to the United Nations General Committee on 24 September, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House.

European Youth Foundation

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs which countries currently contribute towards the budget of the European Youth Foundation. [40180]

Mr. David Davis: The following countries have undertaken to contribute towards the current budget of the European Youth Foundation of the Council of Europe:

Albania
Andorra
Austria
Belgium
Greece
Hungary
Iceland
Ireland
Norway
Poland
Portugal
Romania.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British youth groups, apart from the scouting movement, presently benefit from the work of the European Youth Foundation. [40178]

Mr. Davis: About 70 British youth groups in 1996, apart from the Scout Association, have benefited directly or indirectly from European Youth Foundation grants made to their respective international umbrella youth organisations.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans his Department has to (a) reduce and (b) end the United Kingdom's contribution to the European Youth Foundation. [40177]

Mr. Davis: We have given the requisite 12 months notice to cease contributing our annual endowment to the European Youth Foundation with effect from 1 January 1997. Our 1996 contribution has been paid in full.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what estimate he has made of the saving to public funds when his Department withdraws its financial support to the European Youth Foundation. [40181]

Mr. Davis: We estimate that our withdrawal from the European Youth Foundation will save the public purse about £325,000 per annum.

Mr. Sheerman: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many countries currently contribute towards the funding of the European Youth Foundation. [40179]

Mr. Davis: Thirty-six countries have undertaken to contribute to the current budget of the European Youth Foundation.

Nuclear Safety Agreement

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what consultations his Department had with the United States State Department about the memorandum of agreement on co-operation concerning nuclear safety and security it signed with France on 4 June; and if he will make a statement. [40280]

Mr. David Davis: None.

Mr. Simpson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has received from the US State Department a copy of the memorandum of agreement on co-operation concerning nuclear safety and security which France entered into with the United States on 4 June; and if he will place a copy in the Library. [40276]

Mr. Davis: No. Bilateral co-operation between the United States and France is a matter for the Governments concerned.

Eastern Europe (Nuclear Weapons)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the implications for the stipulations of articles (i) and (ii) of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty over the transfer of nuclear weapons and nuclear know-how of negotiations to increase the membership of NATO with eastern European states; and if he will make a statement. [40519]

Mr. David Davis: None. Articles I and II of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty do not prevent the stationing of nuclear weapons on the territory of non-nuclear weapon states, but the alliance made clear last year that there was no a priori requirement for the stationing of nuclear weapons on the territory of new members, and that the present NATO nuclear posture would for the foreseeable future continue to meet the requirements of an enlarged alliance.

St. Helena

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to his answer of 20 June Official Report, column 566, relating to the dismissal of a teacher in St. Helena, if the notification was received from the Governor operating in his personal capacity. [40603]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The teacher in question resigned from her post. She was not dismissed. There is therefore no relevance in this case to the Governor's reserved powers.

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs for how many days in 1996 the Governor of St. Helena has been resident on St. Helena. [40600]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: During 1996, the Governor has been resident on St. Helena for the whole year except for 30 days spent travelling to and from St. Helena's dependencies on duty, and 76 days travelling to and from the UK for consultations in London and leave. St. Helena's Chief Secretary was appointed to administer the Government during the Governor's absences.

Dr. Marek: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the figure for unemployment in percentage term on St. Helena at 1 January 1996; what is the latest figure; if he will make a statement. [40601]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: The percentage of people seeking full-time employment at the end of December 1995 was 15 per cent. of the on-island work force. The latest equivalent figure available—for August 1996—is 18 per cent. We are working with the St. Helena Government to develop the island's economy to create new employment opportunities and to alleviate the unemployment situation on St. Helena.

Secretary-General of the United Nations

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is Her Majesty's Government's policy in respect of the post of UN Secretary-General. [40562]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: It is the Government's long-standing policy not to reveal their voting intentions for the election of the United Nations Secretary-General.

Private Simon Jeans

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what representations he has made to the Croatian Government in respect of the murder of Private Simon Jeans serving with IFOR; if compensation is being claimed from Croatia; and if he will make a statement. [40555]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: We have made clear our grave concern at the incident leading to the tragic death of Private Simon Jeans. The Croatian authorities have arrested and charged with manslaughter four people in connection with his death. They are due to appear in court in Croatia on 23 October. British IFOR commanders remain in very close contact with the Croatian authorities. It is for the family of Private Simon Jeans to consider claiming compensation once the outcome of the Croatian authorities' investigation is known. The broader question of UK criminal injuries compensation for service men and women killed in the former Yugoslavia is being examined by the Government.

BBC World Service

Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the outcome of the joint FCO-BBC World Service working group report on the implications for the future of the BBC World Service of the BBC's restructuring proposals. [40916]

Mr. Rifkind: The chairman of the BBC and I met on 14 October to consider the report of the joint FCO/BBC World Service working group. We have accepted its conclusions.

I am encouraged that the working group has agreed a series of 20 new proposals designed to ensure the continued protection of World Service interests and the maintenance of the special character, style, ethos and quality of World Service broadcasts.

The working group will reconvene in the autumn of 1997 to review the effects of the World Service of the implementation of the BBC's restructuring proposals to ensure that the new measures agreed by the working group are functioning satisfactorily and producing the desired results.

The Government remain committed to the success of the World Service, to the maintenance of the high quality of its output, and to its continued pre-eminence among international broadcasters.

I have placed copies of the full report of the working group in the Libraries of both Houses.

A summary of the measures agreed by the working group is as follows:

SUMMARY OF MEASURES AGREED

In the course of its discussions the working group considered a number of measures designed to ensure the continued protection of World Service interests under the restructuring proposals put forward by the BBC. The following are the principal measures agreed with respect to financial and economic issues, the maintenance of the quality of World Service news and other programmes including management issues, and the FCO/World Service relationship.

Financial and economic

(i) BBC to draw up new guidelines to govern the trading relationship between World Service and BBC supplier departments. These will be subject to periodic internal review, independent external monitoring and an effective financial penalty clause. Guidelines to be approved by NAO.

(ii) Financial mechanisms to be developed to ensure proper allocation of the cost of overseas correspondents.

(iii) The FCO/BBC financial memorandum to be redrafted to incorporate new financial mechanisms.

(iv) The BBC's fair trading guidelines to be revised to incorporate the commitment that FCO-grant in aid funds cannot be used for non-World Service purposes.

(v) NAO to examine the functioning of the new financial mechanisms after six months of operation.

(vi) Arrangement for appointing the Accounting Officer of the World Service to be re-examined in separate discussions between FCO and BBC.

(vii) Proposals for alternative methods of managing World Service Capital Assets to be examined in separate discussions between FCO and the BBC.

(viii) BBC proposals on future savings to be considered further when all necessary information is available.

Quality

News and current affairs programmes

(ix) World Service news and real-time current affairs programmes to be produced by a dedicated unit within BBC News co-located with the World Service including the vernacular services. Dedicated team members to be appointed for a period of time agreed with World Service.

(x) World Service to specify additional competencies and training for staff working on the supply of such programmes and services.

(xi) World Service programme commissioners to have full editorial responsibility rooted in the power to specify the agenda, range and breadth of news programmes and services as well as their style, content and distinctive voice. There would also be provision for an internal review process with, in cases of disagreement, referral to senior management up to the director general. The board of governors to be made aware of any such referrals. This internal review process to feed into the BBC's annual performance review by the Director General to the Chairman and Board of Governors.

(xii) World Service to be represented on all senior appointment boards of significance to the provision of World Service output. All appointments concerned to be jointly agreed. World Service to approve individual presenters for all key programmes.

(xiii) World Service to have the right within the specification agreed between World Service and BBC News to require programming to cover particular events or to respond to breaking news.

Newsgathering

(xiv) World Service to have power to require that strategic deployment of newsgathering resources including geographical spread is appropriate to range and breadth of World Service needs. Correspondents' assignment briefs to spell out their responsibilities to World Service.

Co-location

(xv) Co-location between the team producing World Service news and current affairs programmes and the vernacular services to be given top priority. Any period of separation to be kept to a minimum and entered upon only if and when the World Service has agreed that the advantages significantly outweighed the disadvantages.

General programmes

(xvi) BBC to ensure that staff of BBC Production are fully briefed and trained on special requirements of World Service and that there are regular interchanges of staff.

(xvii) Programme commissioners to have extensive powers to specify target audience, strategic objectives, style and content of programmes as well as wide freedom to commission as they see fit from within and outside BBC.

Management

(xviii) Managing Director World Service to attend meetings of BBC executive committee whenever World Service issues are to be discussed. World Service to be represented on BBC executive committee by the deputy director general.

(xix) BBC to strengthen oversight of World Service by BBC board of governors, including the establishment of new procedures to approve strategy and review performance and to ensure that any disagreements between World Service commissioners and BBC production are made known to the governors. An independent advisory panel to be established under the chairmanship of a BBC governor to advise the governors on World Service output and performance.

FCO/World Service relationship

(xx) The World Service's relationship with the FCO to remain unaffected by the restructuring.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Firearms

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many new gun licences have been issued in England and Wales since 1 January. [40113]

Miss Widdecombe: Statistics on firearm and shotgun licences are collected centrally only on an annual basis. Statistics for 1996 will be published in the spring of 1997.

Sir Michael Sheresby: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many deaths occurred as the result of shooting in which unregistered and illegally held firearms was used during each of the past 10 years; [40322]

(2) in how many cases during the past 10 years police officers in England and Wales have been killed by a registered firearm used (a) by the licence holder and (b) by a third party; [40320]

(3) how many deaths have occurred in each of the past 10 years as a result of gunshot wounds in which a registered firearm was used (a) by the holder of the firearms licence and (b) by an unauthorised third party; [40319]

(4) in how many cases during the past 10 years police officers in England and Wales have been killed by an unregistered and illegally held firearm. [40321]

Miss Widdecombe: Information as to whether firearms used in offences of homicide are legally held is not at present routinely collected centrally.

However, a special exercise has been recently carried out to find out whether the guns used in homicide were licensed or not.

This covered the years 1992 to 1994, and out of a total of 196 homicides, information was available in 152 cases to show that 22 cases—14 per cent.—involved the use of a legally held firearm. In 5 per cent. of homicides in which the weapons were not legally held by a suspect, the weapons were believed to have been stolen—seven out of 130. For 88 of these offences, however, the police reported that they did not know whether the firearm had been stolen or not.

During the period of the survey, one police officer and one special constable were shot and killed, the firearms being illegally held.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many notifiable offences were recorded by the police in which firearms were reported to have been used in Wales in 1995. [40052]

Miss Widdecombe: The information requested is not yet available for 1995, but is due for publication in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales 1995" on 7 November.

Emergencies

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department which bodies have statutory duties for and what statutory bodies have responsibilities for providing emergency assistance to (a) those trapped in vehicles after road accidents, (b) householders or owners of commercial or industrial premises who have been subject to unexpected flooding and (c) persons trapped in lifts, when no local assistance is able to release them, giving in each case how the bodies are funded for such activities. [40362]

Mr. Sackville: Under section 1 of the Fire Services Act 1947, a fire authority has a duty to make provision for firefighting purposes, and in particular to secure the services of a fire brigade and equipment in order to meet efficiently all normal requirements. Section 3(1)(e) of the 1947 Act gives a fire authority supplementary powers to employ its brigade for purposes other than firefighting, such as those referred to in the question. The police service has no statutory responsibility or duty as such to provide assistance in respect of such incidents, although it may well do so in practice. The role of the ambulance service is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Health. Fire authorities are financed from council tax, national non-domestic rates and revenue support grant.

Ethnic Minorities

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he proposes to make an announcement regarding the future of section 11 funding; which and what percentage of projects currently in operation will be guaranteed funding until March 1998; and if he will make a statement. [40582]

Mr. Kirkhope: We have under active consideration the position regarding further section 11 funding from next April onwards. Although we are not yet in a position to make an announcement, I expect to be able to do so shortly.

Betting

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to change the law in relation to betting on the national lottery; and if he will make a statement. [40771]

Mr. Kirkhope: There are no plans at present to change the law in relation to betting on the national lottery.

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the outcome of the consultation on the deregulation of casinos, bingo clubs and advertising of commercial gambling. [41077]

Mr. Kirkhope: On 27 February, we went out to consultation on a package of measures to relax certain controls on casinos, bingo clubs and advertising of commercial gambling. This is a general report on the outcome of that consultation and our plans for taking the changes forward.

Casinos

The deregulation proposals received general support. I have laid a draft deregulation order today for Parliamentary scrutiny;

- allowing casinos in England and Wales to sell alcohol up to 2 am (3 am in London);
- reducing the waiting period for casino membership from 48 to 24 hours.

I also plan to lay a draft order later this year allowing payment by debit cards in casinos and bingo clubs.

I hope in the next few weeks to publish a consultation document about the precise form of the deregulation orders allowing:

postal applications for membership;

group membership;

limited advertising;

casino slot machines.

Permitted areas for casinos

In February we proposed to allow casinos in 13 new locations. The new areas attracted support from their local councils, with the exception of Croydon and Peterborough. I intend to finalise that list in the light of the comments received.

We have also received representations from other areas. I do not think it appropriate to add an unmanageable number or to depart radically from the original proposals, but I am considering the case for some additions. New permitted areas can be implemented by secondary legislation, but I will need to address the resource, timing and other practical implications before any are introduced. I will make my intentions clear in the next few weeks.

Bingo

There has been a mixed response from inside and outside the industry to the proposals to abolish the demand criterion for bingo licence applications, the requirement to operate as clubs and the 24 hour waiting period for membership. In the light of the representations received I do not propose to proceed with those measures.

I am still assessing the detailed responses to the other proposals affecting bingo clubs. I will give priority to a measure abolishing advertising restrictions and will then examine further the move to three yearly licences. I would also like to allow simplified charging in bingo clubs, subject to advice from the Gaming Board following discussions with the industry.

Advertising betting shops

I also plan later in the year to bring forward a measure allowing non-broadcast advertising of betting shops.

R v. Preddy

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action the Government intend to take to deal with the effect of the judgment of the House of Lords in the case of R v. Preddy. [41078]

Mr. Howard: The Law Commission has today published report No. 243, "Offences of Dishonesty: Money Transfers", in which it examines the implications of the House of Lords judgment in R v. Preddy, building on its earlier work on its report No. 228, "Conspiracy to Defraud". The Government accept the law Commission's recommendations, and will introduce legislation to give effect to its proposals at the earliest possible opportunity.

Immigration

Mr. Congdon: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are his plans for the reintroduction of compulsory application forms for foreign nationals wishing to apply for leave to remain in the United Kingdom following the suspension of the scheme on 6 June. [41079]

Mr. Kirkhope: The compulsory application forms system introduced on 3 June was suspended after three days following legal challenge. Having heard the arguments, we were persuaded that it was right to make changes and the forms have therefore been revised to take account of the issues raised. Copies of the newly prescribed versions have been placed in the Library. The new forms will be compulsory for applications made on or after 25 November. As before, the scheme does not cover applications under European Community law or applications for asylum.

Application forms are designed to help applicants and to improve efficiency. They set out the basic information that an applicant must provide. The compulsory forms scheme is being introduced following a successful 12 months pilot scheme which demonstrated a clear demand for application forms. During the pilot scheme applicants showed themselves willing and able to use the forms and where forms were used applications were resolved more quickly and the need to make further inquiries was greatly reduced. Application forms benefit the applicant, the immigration system and the taxpayer. They are being introduced in order to demonstrate the high priority the Government attach to a fair and efficient manner of immigration control.

Criminal Justice (Delays)

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what work is in hand to reduce delay in the criminal justice process. [40180]

Mr. Howard: Following the report of the royal commission on criminal justice and the efficiency scrutiny of administrative burdens on the police, efforts to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the criminal justice process have been taken forward by officials from my Department, the Lord Chancellor's Department and the Crown Prosecution Service through the trial issues group. Nevertheless, my right hon. Friend the Lord Chancellor, my right hon. and learned Friend the Attorney-General and I believe that it is now appropriate to explore additional means of reducing the time that it takes to deal with cases. We have therefore set up a review urgently to identify means of expediting the progress of criminal cases from initiation to resolution, consistently with the interests of justice. The review will examine the scope for improvements within current structures as well as those which might require new legislation. We expect a report next January.

Asylum and Immigration Act 1996

Mr. Austin-Walker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what (a) communications and (b) consultations have taken place on the Asylum and Immigration Act 1996 and instruments made under it, with the Commission of the European Communities and with member states under Commission decision 88/384/EEC and article 118 of the EC treaty; on what dates; by what means; and if he will place in the Library the documents concerned. [40509]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 14 October 1996]: None. These matters are covered by the arrangements for intergovernmental co-operation under title VI of the treaty on European Union.

Police (Health and Safety)

Mr. Touhig: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to introduce legislation to provide that police officers will be covered by health and safety requirements; [40232]

(2) when he expects the ad hoc working group on health and safety management in the police service to complete its work; [40230]

(3) when he plans to produce his Department's advice in the form of a Home Office circular on health and safety in the police force. [40231]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 14 October 1996]: I have today announced the Government's proposals to amend the Health and Safety at Work, etc. Act 1974 and the corresponding Northern Ireland legislation so that it extends to the work of police officers, police cadets and special constables. The ad hoc working group on the management of health and safety in the police service has completed the first phase of its work. We have today issued to police forces in the United Kingdom practical guidance on the application of the health and safety legislation to the duties of police officers. A copy of this guidance has been placed in the Library.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Intervention Board

Mr. Mans: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how the Intervention Board performed against its targets for 1995–96; and what key performance targets Agriculture Ministers have set the agency for 1996–97. [40948]

Mr. Baldry: The information is as follows:

1995–96

	Target	Performance
Percentage of claims processed within deadlines	98.5 per cent.	99.9 per cent.
Percentage of claims processed correctly	98.5 per cent.	99.2 per cent.
Cumulative running cost efficiency gains	2.5 per cent.	3.3 per cent.
Improvement in index of productivity	6.0 per cent.	3.9 per cent.
Ratio of disallowance to EAGGF funds handled	0.4 per cent.	[1]—
To maintain expenditure within vote provision, cash and running cost limited	—	Met
New value for money savings in procurement of goods and services	6.0 per cent.	8.8 per cent.
Yield: cost ratio of anti-fraud activities	3.0:1.0	3.7:1.0

[1] A decision covering the clearance of the 1993 EAGGF accounts is still awaited.

In agreement with my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, I have set the following targets for 1996–97:

	Target
Percentage of claims processed within deadlines	99.0 per cent.
Percentage of claims processed correctly	98.5 per cent.
Cumulative running cost efficiency gains	2.5 per cent.
Improvement in index of productivity	6.0 per cent.
Ratio of disallowance to EAGGF funds handled	0.4 per cent.
To maintain expenditure within vote provision, cash and running cost limited	—
New value for money savings in procurement of goods and services	6.0 per cent.
Yield: cost ratio of anti-fraud activities	3.0 : 1.0

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

School Inspections

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for North Thanet, (Mr. Gale) of 19 December 1995, Official Report, column 1017 if she will publish the advice from Her Majesty's chief inspector on a more targeted approach in the second cycle of inspection. [39919]

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State announced on 16 September that she had accepted in full the chief inspector's recommendations to move to a more targeted programme of inspection. The key elements of the new arrangements, which will take effect from the end of the first cycle, are that: each school will be subject to a full inspection within a six–year period, instead of every four years as at present: weaker schools should be inspected more frequently; seriously weak schools will be specifically identified within registered inspectors' reports; and that special visits will be made to schools which are models of good practice.

The Secretary of State has deposited copies of the chief inspector's recommendations and of her response in the Libraries of both Houses.

Teacher Training Courses

Mr Bunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list the number and percentage of teachers who completed training courses in 1994, broken down by subject and in total; and who were in posts by March 1995. [39928]

Mr. Robin Squire: The table shows the number of teachers who successfully completed Bachelor of Education or Postgraduate Certificate of Education courses leading to qualified teacher status in 1994 and their position as at 31 March 1995.

	Number of completers[1] in England and Wales Calendar year 1994	1994 completers in service at 31 March 1995 in the maintained schools sector in England and Wales[2]	In service as a percentage of completers

Notes:

[1] Excludes 131 students who successfully completed School Centred Initial Teacher Training in 1994.:

[2] Details of service as at 31/3/95 are provisional. Includes service in the maintained nursery, primary, secondary and special education sector. Service details are available for some, but not all, teachers in the independent and further and higher education sectors. Around 1,110—per cent.—of the 1994 completers are known to have entered service in these sectors, but are not included in the table.

Nursery Voucher Scheme

Ms Estelle Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what information from Office for Standards in Education inspections of providers under the nursery voucher scheme will be made available to parents; and when. [40389]

Mr. Robin Squire: This is a matter for Her Majesty's chief inspector of schools, who heads the Office for Standards in Education. I have asked Mr. Chris Woodhead to write to the hon. Member.

Ms Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many vouchers for nursery education have not been redeemed to date during phase 1 of the nursery voucher scheme. [40385]

Mr. Squire: Nursery education vouchers were issued in respect of 14,711 children for the summer term of 1996. Of these, 1,372—some 9 per cent.—have not been redeemed.

Ms Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what the difference is between the number of vouchers issued under phase 1 of the nursery voucher scheme and the number of places available in each of the four pilot areas. [40383]

Mr. Squire: The number of vouchers issued for summer term 1996 in each of the phase 1 authorities is shown in the table. Information on the number of places available for children eligible for vouchers is not held centrally.

	Number of vouchers issued
Norfolk	8,976
Kensington and Chelsea	1,151
Wandsworth	3,170
Westminster	1,414

Ms Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many providers have participated to date in phase 1 of the nursery voucher scheme. [40390]

Mr. Squire: Some 1,141 providers, of which 647 are in the private and voluntary sectors, have participated in the scheme to date.

Ms. Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate she has made of the number of new providers established since the introduction of phase 1 of the nursery education voucher scheme. [40386]

Mr. Squire: Any provider that is not a maintained or independent school has to be registered under the Children Act 1989. Our records do not show whether an institution was established specifically in response to the introduction of the scheme.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will request each of the four local education authorities operating the vouchers scheme for pre-school education to publish an estimate of the number of places in all settings that will be required in each of their areas if 90 per cent. of eligible pupils' parents apply for vouchers. [40403]

Mr. Squire: The table shows the estimated number of eligible children in each of the phase 1 authorities and 90 per cent. thereof. These estimates of population are less reliable when broken down both by local authority area and by year group.

LEA	Estimated number of eligible children	90 per cent. of estimated number of eligible children

Schools White Paper

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if the pamphlet "Self-Government for Schools: A Summary" was accompanied with a letter noting that the White Paper is a consultation paper; and in what form responses to the consultation were invited. [40586]

Mr. Forth: A summary of the White Paper "Self-Government for Schools" was sent to the head teachers and chairmen of governors of all local education authority-maintained and grant-maintained schools. It was accompanied by a letter from my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State. The letter invited comments on the White Paper by 4 October, gave details of where they should be sent, and noted that each school was eligible for one free copy of the White Paper on request.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many responses her Department has received to the consultation on the White Paper "Self-Government for Schools", listed by type of organisation consulted; which consultees responded favourably; which consultees offered criticisms; and what was the nature of these criticisms. [40588]

Mr. Forth: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State received some 600 responses to the White Paper by the deadline of 4 October. We are currently analysing the responses. A summary will be placed in the Library in due course.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many copies of "Self-Government for Schools: A Summary" were sent out; to which bodies; and at what total cost. [40585]

Mr. Forth: The summary of the White Paper "Self-Government for Schools" was sent to the head teachers and chairmen of governors of all local education authorities-maintained and grant-maintained schools. It has also been made available to interested parties on request. Over 70,000 copies have so far been issued. The cost of producing and distributing the summaries sent to schools was some £18,000.

Students (Hardship Funds)

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many students applied for hardship funds in (a) 1993–94, (b) 1994–95 and (c) 1995–96 for (i) further and (ii) higher education; and if she will make a statement. [40579]

Mr. Forth: The purpose of the hardship funds, correctly known as the access funds, is to provide financial help to students whose access to further or higher education might be inhibited by financial considerations or who, for whatever reason, including physical or other disabilities, face financial difficulties.

From the information provided by institutions, the number of eligible applicants for further and higher education access funds were as follows:

Academic year	Further education	Higher education
1993–94	41,668	77,060
1994–95	51,027	77,005
1995–96	n/a	n/a

n/a = not yet available.

Discretionary Awards

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what (a) statistics and (b) representations her Department has assessed regarding spending on (i) discretionary awards and (ii) special needs by local education authorities in England in 1995–96 and 1996–97; and if she will make a statement. [40545]

Mr. Forth: The latest available data from local education authorities on discretionary awards are for the academic year 1994–95. Provisional national data were published in a departmental press notice—110/96—on 1 April 1996. Final data, including information from individual local education authorities, will be published on 22 November in the statistics of education student support volume, 1994–95. Provisional data at national level for the academic year 1995–96 will be available in spring 1997.

Both the number and level of discretionary awards have been in decline recently. Representations have been made about this by a wide range of bodies representing the interests of students and institutions in dance and drama, horticulture and agriculture, legal practice and other disciplines. These are matters for local education authorities, who decide which students to support and at what rates in the light of local needs and priorities and the resources available.

Funds for special education are contained within the education standard spending assessment but cannot be separately identified. Local education authorities can and do spend more or less than their education SSA on education services.

Teaching Publicity

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the amount spent on publicity and promotion for each year since 1994, by the Teacher Training Agency (i) in total and (ii) broken down into components; how many calls are received annually by the telephone line promoting teaching as a career; and what evidence she has assessed to indicate that the telephone line has improved recruitment. [40587]

Mr. Forth: This is a matter for the Teacher Training Agency. I will ask the chairman of the agency, Geoffrey Parker, to write to the hon. Member direct.

Primary Schools

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the average size of single teacher classes in primary schools in January in each local education authority and in total; and what was the actual and percentage change in numbers compared with January 1995 in each local education authority and in total.

Mr. Robin Squire: The information is shown in the table:

[2] Rounding of components may cause discrepancies in number and percentage changes. The comparable average class size in 1979 was 25.9.

Mr. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage, and how many primary school pupils were in classes of over 30 in January in each local education authority and in total; and what was the actual and percentage change in numbers compared with January 1995 in each local education authority and in total. [40159]

Mr. Squire: I refer the hon. Member to the answer that I gave to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Brightside (Mr. Blunkett) on 14 October 1996.

Mr. Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage and how many primary school pupils were in classes of over 36 in January in each local education authority and in total; and what was the actual and percentage change in numbers compared with January 1995 in each local education authority and in total. [40160]

Mr. Squire: The information requested is shown in the table.

Student Grants

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what plans she has to end the administration of student grants by local education authorities. [40558]

Mr. Forth: The Government have no plans at present to alter the current arrangements. The national committee of inquiry into higher education has been asked to look into the longer-term funding of higher education, including student support. The committee will report in the summer of 1997.

Grant for Education Support and Training

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the GEST funding per pupil in (a) grant-maintained schools and (b) local education authority schools, in each local education authority for (i) 1994–95, (ii) 1995–96 and (iii) 1996–97; and if she will make a statement. [40593]

Mr. Robin Squire [holding answer 14 October 1996]: The table shows GEST funding per pupil in local authority-maintained schools for 1995–96 and 1996–97 based on the latest available figures. Variations reflect such factors as the impact of bidding and the incidence of small schools. Figures for 1994–95 are not readily available. Grant-maintained schools are outside the scope of GEST, but are funded for similar activities through special purpose (development) grant. SPG (D) grant is paid direct to GM schools at the rate of £42.50 per pupil in 1995–96 and £44.50 in 1996–97. GEST and SPG(D) are not directly comparable because the responsibilities of LEA and GM schools differ.

HEALTH

Suicide Attempts

Mr. Parry: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many suicide attempts have been made at the Broadoak psychiatric unit, Broadgreen hospital during the past two years; and if he will make a statement. [40301]

Mr. Burns: The available information is as follows:

September 1994 to August 1995: two unexpected deaths; one open verdict, one still awaited;

September 1995 to August 1996: two unexpected deaths; inquest verdicts awaited.

Figures relating to suicide attempts are not available centrally.

Health Information Service

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many calls the health information service has received in each year since 1992; and how much funding it has received in each year. [40565]

Mr. Horam: The health information service was established in April 1992. Table A provides details of the number of calls received by the service since its establishment and table B provides information on the cost of providing the service for the financial years 1992–93 to 1996–97.

Table A: Number of calls received by the health information service between April 1992 and September 1996

Year	Number of calls
1992	51,252
1993	136,293
1994	275,404
1995	457,187
1996 (January–September)	442,424

Table B: Cost of providing the service between 1992–93 and 1996–97

Financial year	Cost £
1992–93	1,507,643
1993–94	1,881,998
1994–95	2,045,338
1995–96	2,337,766
1996–97[1]	2,718,933

[1] Projected expenditure for 1996–97.

Mr. Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what procedures are followed in respect of monitoring the subjects of inquiry or complaint to the health information service. [40566]

Mr. Horam: Health authorities have responsibility for securing the provision of the freephone health information service in line with health service guidance HSG(95)44, copies of which are available in the Library.

Arrangements for monitoring calls made to the health information service are for determination between individual health authorities and their health information service providers. However, any system of monitoring must respect the callers right to confidentiality.

New Hospitals

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many new hospitals have been built in 1996 and in each of the previous five years in (a) London and (b) each health region. [40569]

Mr. Horam: This information is not collected centrally.

Accident and Emergency Departments

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many accident and emergency departments have been closed in each health region in 1996 and in each of the previous five years. [40570]

Mr. Horam: It is the responsibility of each health authority to ensure the provision of adequate accident and emergency services for its resident population. Trusts with an accident and emergency department are listed in table 9 of "Bed availability for England". Booklets for 1993–94 and 1994–95 are available in the Library. The 1995–96 figures are expected to be available in November.

Care should be taken in interpreting any reduction in the number of trusts with accident and emergency departments as closures. A trust may have more than one A and E department but will be listed once only. Mergers of trusts each with an A and E department would be listed once following a merger.

Community Health Councils

Sir Cranley Onslow: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will review the procedure for the termination of appointments to membership of community health councils. [40526]

Mr. Horam: The conditions for termination of community health council membership are laid down in statute which came into force on 1 April 1996 There are no plans to review them.

Mixed Wards

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many mixed wards were in existence in the most recent year for which figures are available. [40571]

Mr. Horam: This information is not collected centrally.

Indebtedness

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what representations he has received from (a) health authorities and (b) health trusts in respect of problems arising from indebtedness; and what extra assistance he is offering in this respect. [40561]

Mr. Horam: Health authorities have no power to borrow and thus the issue of their indebtedness does not arise. National health service trusts have powers to borrow to finance capital expenditure. Such borrowing is controlled by the external financing limit—EFL—which they are not permitted to exceed. Reporting of changes in trusts' balance sheet financing and indebtedness and performance against the EFL form part of the year-end requirement to produce audited accounts, which are published.

Hepatitis

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will place a copy of NHS executive letter EL (96) 77 in the Library. [40675]

Mr. Horam: Copies have been placed in the Library.

Hospital Bed Closures

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what has been the number of (a) acute bed closures and (b) long-stay bed closures in London in each year since the publication of the Tomlinson report. [40567]

Mr. Malone: Information on the number of beds opened or closed is not collected centrally.

Data on the average daily number of beds available in acute hospital wards in London, for the last three years for which information is available, are set out in the table. Similar information on long-stay beds is not collected centrally.

Average daily number of available acute beds

	Inner London	Outer London	Total
1992–93	10,335	8,881	19,216
1993–94	9,708	8,499	18,207
1994–95	9,622	7,977	17,600

Inner London includes former London postgraduates special health authorities. Totals may not add due to rounding.

Hospital Closures

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many hospitals have closed in 1996 and in each of the previous five years in (a) London and (b) each health region. [40568]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Roxburgh and Berwickshire (Mr. Kirkwood) on 7 June, Official Report, column 585.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Members' Staff Costs

Mr. Allen: To ask the Lord President of the Council what discussions he has had with the Senior Salaries Review Body to encourage the SSRB to complete its work in respect of separating the staffing costs of hon. Members out of the office cost allowance; and if he will make a statement on when proposals will be received and put to the House. [40266]

Mr. Newton: Work on the SSRB's development recommendations has already begun at official level. Sir Michael Perry and I are to meet shortly to consider how best to carry this work forward, bearing in mind the SSRB's other responsibilities.

Asbestos

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee on what occasions asbestos has been encountered during building and refurbishment on the parliamentary estate during the last year. [40298]

Sir Raymond Powell: As with most older buildings, asbestos is regularly encountered during building and refurbishment work on the parliamentary estate. Generally, the Parliamentary Works Directorate is aware of the locations where asbestos will be found, which are recorded in its asbestos register. Where asbestos materials can safely remain in place, they are encapsulated and inspected at regular intervals. Ultimately, the aim is to remove any materials containing asbestos but that cannot all be done at once, nor is it necessary to do so. Maintenance and new works projects include specific allowance for the removal of hazardous materials. In all such projects the opportunity is taken to remove asbestos and materials containing asbestos in the course of the work. The removal of asbestos is undertaken in strict accordance with the guidelines and procedures laid down by the Health and Safety Executive.

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee (1) if all asbestos has now been removed from the Palace of Westminster; [41092]

(2) what types of asbestos were present in the Palace of Westminster; what were the levels of asbestos found in the air; and when the asbestos was removed; [41094]

(3) what are the current levels of asbestos remaining in the Palace of Westminster. [41093]

Sir Raymond Powell: As in most older buildings, there is some asbestos remaining in the Palace of Westminster. A register is kept of the locations on the Parliamentary Estate where asbestos is known to remain—usually because it is inaccessible—and of those places from which it has been removed. It is the practice to remove asbestos found when undertaking maintenance and other works services. Ultimately, the aim is to remove any materials containing asbestos but that cannot all be done at once, nor is it necessary to do so. Remaining asbestos is sealed in and inspected at regular intervals.

Removal of asbestos is undertaken in line with the recommendations of the Health and Safety Executive for managing the asbestos hazard and preventing any risks to occupants or workmen. Areas are tested for fibres in the air both during and after the removal of asbestos. All areas have to be issued with an asbestos clear certificate by an independent accredited company before they are reoccupied.

Parliament Square

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Chairman of the Accommodation and Works Committee what discussions he has had with Westminster council regarding the proposed closure of the south side of Parliament square to traffic. [40944]

Sir Raymond Powell: The Director of Parliamentary Works is a member of a consultation group on the scheme for Parliament square and he reports to my Committee. I will ask him to write to the hon. Member.

Fact-finding Missions

Mr. Allen: To ask the Lord President of the Council what facilities exist for hon. Members who are Front Benchers to visit countries on fact-finding missions and for such visits to be paid for by (a) Her Majesty's Government and (b) the House; and if he will examine the desirability of making additional funds available for this purpose. [40242]

Mr. Newton: Her Majesty's Government facilities are a matter for individual Departments concerned. With regard to facilities provided by the House, the sum of £108,657 is allocated within the 1996–97 Short money—financial assistance to Opposition parties—in connection with Front-Bench travel in the United Kingdom and Europe on the parliamentary business of the parties. This travel fund, which I announced on 4 November 1993, Official Report, column 495, is uprated on the same basis as the main Short money allocation, that is by reference to the retail prices index in April of each year.

PRIME MINISTER

Rail Privatisation

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Prime Minister, pursuant to his statement of 10 October in Bournemouth concerning improvements to rail passenger services from privatisation, if he will (a) give specific examples and (b) show that criteria he used for coming to this general conclusion. [40796]

The Prime Minister: Rail franchising is leading to extra investment, additional train services, better passengers charters and improved passenger care. The new franchisee on South Eastern, for instance, is committed to replacing its existing trains with modern rolling stock, at a cost of up to £400 million. The franchisee for Midland MainLine plans to introduce an extra 22 weekday services each day between Leicester and London, and InterCity East Coast intends to invest some £17 million in improvements to rolling stock performance, passenger security and disabled access. These are just some of the improvements which franchising will bring to the passenger rail network at less cost to the taxpayer.

Royal Travel Expenditure

Mr. Rathbone: To ask the Prime Minister what plans the Government have for the future funding of royal travel by rail and air. [41216]

The Prime Minister: The Government propose, with Her Majesty the Queen's agreement and following consultation with the Leader of the Opposition to invite Parliament to approve next year a single grant in aid on the Department of Transport's vote for official royal travel by rail and air. The royal household will use this to purchase the services of the royal train, of No. 32 (The Royal) Squadron or suitable commercial providers.

At present, these costs are met by the Department of Transport and the Ministry of Defence or the Foreign and Commonwealth Office as part of their general expenditure. The aim of the change is to have one focus—the royal household—responsible for securing the best value for money from this public money and to improve accountability to Parliament through the Department of Transport.

The grant in aid from the Department of National Heritage, under which the royal household takes on first line of responsibility for property services on the occupied royal palaces, provides a suitable model. It has enabled savings in excess of 25 per cent. in real terms to be achieved since it was introduced in 1991. An annual report on the new grant in aid for royal travel will be presented to Parliament by the Secretary of State for Transport. Once the new system is established, targets for savings will be agreed and performance against them published in this annual report.

The new grant in aid will not cover expenditure on the royal yacht, which is due to be decommissioned in 1997.

I am confident that these measures, which are consistent with modern financial management, will improve the cost-efficiency and public accountability of this expenditure.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Promotional Expenditure

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how much his Department has spent on (a) publicity, (b) promotions, and (c) hospitality in each of the last six years. [40618]

Mr. Streeter: My Department has spent the following amounts on (a) and (b) publicity and promotions, and (c) hospitality over the last six years:

1991–92: Publicity and promotions £35,734
Hospitality £20,895
1992–93: Publicity and promotions £40,000
Hospitality £20,697
1993–94: Publicity and promotions £46,667
Hospitality £20,477
1994–95: Publicity and promotions £78,961
Hospitality £26,159
1995–96: Publicity and promotions £117,684
Hospitality £27,694
1996–97 (to end September):
Publicity and promotions £40,061
Hospitality £6,165.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department how many (a) written and (b) oral parliamentary questions have required correction by his Department in each of the past two years. [40636]

Mr. Streeter: The information requested is not collected in relation to either oral or written questions and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Royal Commission Recommendations

Mr. Waterson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what action has been taken on the royal commission on criminal justice recommendation No. 249 on monitoring of performance during training and No. 251 on performance appraisal of the judiciary. [41220]

Mr. Streeter: The royal commission on criminal justice recommended that

> "The performance of judges should be monitored during training by other members of the judiciary"
> (Recommendation 249)

The performance of those who sit in a part-time judicial capacity, both in the Crown court and in other jurisdictions, is already appraised, particularly during their initial training. Following consultation with the senior judiciary and the chairman of the Judicial Studies Board, these arrangements will be extended further.

At the present time, before a trainee assistant recorder, for example, is authorised to sit alone, he or she must undertake an induction programme, which includes the training course run by the Judicial Studies Board, but also involves a period of sitting in with an experienced circuit judge in the Crown court—the pupil-master judge—who is required to report to the Lord Chancellor stating whether in his or her opinion the trainee is duly fitted to sit.

In accordance with the recommendation of the Judicial Studies Board, the role of the pupil-master judge in respect of assistant recorders—and the equivalent supervising judges in respect of certain other categories of judicial office holder—is to be extended to include an element of in-court observation so as to provide further advice and appraisal to newly-appointed part-time judges, and enable better assessment of their suitability for appointment to full-time judicial office.

Advice is already provided to those who attend Judicial Studies Board courses by serving members of the judiciary who serve as tutors for this purpose.

Full-time judges are appointed only from the ranks of those with the experience of service in a part-time capacity for a sufficient period to demonstrate their competence and suitability for full-time appointment; the period of part-time service accordingly provides a basis for on-going assessment for this purpose.

The royal commission also recommended that

"The judiciary should also have in place a formal system of performance appraisal. Presiding and Resident Judges should have the lead in this; members of the Bar should also be able to comment on the performance of judges. These aspects should be looked at by the Lord Chancellor in consultation with the judiciary." (Recommendation 251).

These matters have been reviewed, as recommended by the royal commission.

There are already appraisal arrangements in place for the judiciary. It is an essential feature of the arrangements for part–time sittings by recorders and assistant recorders and others that their service affords opportunities for assessing their suitability for appointment to full–time judicial office—and this stands to be developed further in accordance with the arrangements outlined above.

Judicial office holders are also assessed by more senior full–time judges as to their suitability for appointment to higher judicial office.

Judges accept their obligations under the judicial oath which is taken on appointment. All judges are subject to two further forms of appraisal or review. First, almost all judicial decisions are subject to appeal or review, enabling higher courts to scrutinise and, where appropriate, to comment on or redress judicial decisions or conduct. Secondly, judges undertake their work for the most part in full view of the public and are subject to the more informal scrutiny of the media.

It is, however, important to ensure that we do not undermine the primary place within our constitution of the principle of judicial independence or our confidence that judges will determine each case fairly and on its own merits, without fear of reprisal or improper intervention. The independence of the judiciary, therefore, must connote independence not only from the executive but that of one judge from another. For these reasons, neither the Lord Chancellor nor any other senior judges have any constitutional power to require one judge to report on another, or to offer appraisal or any other qualitative assessment of the judge's performance as a judge. Neither is there any authority to require a judge to submit to such appraisal. The Lord Chancellor's statutory powers to dismiss a judge, which in any event do not extend to the more senior judges, are also very narrowly drawn. These important considerations make it inappropriate to introduce a formal system of appraisal. The heads of divisions, and presiding and resident judges, however, do have responsibilities for the oversight of judicial business and they are able to assist judges informally where that appears likely to be helpful. It is a well understood role of the leaders of the circuits to draw to the attention of the presiding and resident judges, as appropriate, concerns expressed by members of the Bar about the judiciary.

In his report "Access to Justice", Lord Woolf recommended that the judiciary conducting civil cases should be monitored int he performance of the case management functions envisaged for them int he report. This monitoring would not amount to appraisal, but would be aimed at securing consistency of approach in this new role and promotion of best practice. The Government support that recommendation, and its aim of facilitating the improvement of judges' working methods.

Judges are fully aware of their duties and responsibilities to the Crown, and the existing arrangements strike an appropriate balance between the obligations of the judiciary to the public and the overriding of preserving judicial independence.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many (a) written and (b) oral parliamentary questions have required correction by his Department in each of the past two years. [40629]

Mr. Willetts: This is a matter of public record.

HMSO (Uzbekistan)

Sir Michael Shersby: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster (1) what percentage of the value of the consignments of educational stationery sent by Her Majesty's Stationery Office to Uzbekistan has so far been recovered; how long it will take on the basis of current sales to recover the remaining payments due to the office; and what steps he has taken to ensure that there will be no loss resulting from this business; [40452]

(2) if he will publish details of the current situation and projection for Her Majesty's Stationery Office's stationery trade with Uzbekistan; and what estimate he has made of how much of the money owing to the office he expects to recoup. [40451]

Mr. Freeman [holding answer 14 October 1996]: The original sales value of the 10 consignments for Uzbekistan was £6.5 million. Prior to privatisation on 30 September, HMSO had received £1.6 million from its trading with Uzbekistan, £1.5 million of which was reported to the Committee on Public Accounts by the then chief executive of HMSO on 10 June 1996. This fully covers the sales value of the first three consignments and amounts to nearly 25 per cent. of the sales value of all 10 consignments.

HMSO signed, in early June, a new contract with Uztoshkitob—the Uzbekistan Republic Wholesale and Retail Association of the State Publishing Committee—aimed at maximising potential receipts from the sale in Uztoshkitob's retail outlets of the remaining goods. Payment is dependent on the rate at which the goods are sold.

The return due from retail sales during August and September amounted to approximately £200,000, but conversion to hard currency is precluded by general bank order. All bidders for HMSO were made aware of the details of HMSO's trading with Uzbekistan: the payments so far received, stocks in the UK and abroad, the contract terms and potential receipts. The successful bidder took over the stationery office as a going concern including all the stocks and debtors of the business.

The HMSO privatisation was in the form of a share sale rather than an asset sale and therefore it is not possible to identify the value placed by the new owner on the Uzbekistan stocks, contract and potential receipts. The sale of HMSO represents value for money for the taxpayer taking account of all assets and liabilities involved. Realisation of future payments from Uztoshkitob is now a matter for the Stationery Office Ltd.

Political Advisers

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how many political advisers have been employed in each Government Department in each of the last three years; at what costs; and what are the current salary scales by which they are paid. [40448]

Mr. Freeman: The information is contained in the tables.

Special advisers are paid on a salary spine of 34 points ranging from £20,631 to £71,597.

New Buildings and Premises

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what was the total expenditure on new buildings and premises by his Department and its agencies; and if he will indicate the square footage of new office space purchased or newly rented in each of the last five years. [41153]

Mr. Willetts: The table details for the Cabinet Office and its agencies, including the Central Office of Information, (i) the capital costs, including fees, of new buildings and premises and new extensions to existing buildings and premises and (ii) the square footage of new office space purchased or newly rented for the five financial years 1991–92; 1992–93; 1993–94; 1994–95 and 1995–96.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

Millennium Exhibition

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on the arrangement by which the chief executive of the Welsh Development Agency has been appointed chief executive of Greenwich Millennium Exhibition plc with an option to return to the Welsh Development Agency within 90 days; what assessment she has made of the principal advantages of this arrangement to the exhibition company; and if she will make a statement. [41068]

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will state in respect of the millennium exhibition planned for the Greenwich peninsula site (a) the amount to be contributed by the national lottery, (b) private commitments already made by each individual organisation and the total and (c) the number of staff, their location, and names of those responsible as executive officers. [40930]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This is a matter for the Millennium Commission. I shall write to the hon. Members in my capacity as chairman of the commission and place copies of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

Royal Naval College

Sir Patrick McNair-Wilson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what the responsibilities of her Department will be for the maintenance of the royal naval college, Greenwich when the Ministry of Defence has left the site. [41193]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: My Department is currently responsible for the maintenance of the external fabric of the royal naval college buildings together with the maintenance, including the interiors, of the painted hall and chapel. When the Ministry of Defence vacates the buildings, my Department will continue to contribute to the funding of these maintenance responsibilities. The level of funding and duration will be a matter for agreement between the Department and the trust which is being established to take over the main lease on the buildings. I would expect the taxpayer's contribution to reduce as the trust generates income to meet the costs of maintenance. My Department will remain concerned to ensure that the buildings are maintained to a standard appropriate to their status.

Promotional Expenditure

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how much her Department has spent on (a) publicity, (b) promotions, and (c) hospitality in each year since its formation. [40619]

Mr. Sproat: The information requested is given in the following table:

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage how many answers to (a) written and (b) oral parliamentary questions have required correction by her Department in each of the past two years. [40637]

Mr. Sproat: This is a matter of public record.

Concessionary Television Licences

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what representations have been received recently over the concessionary television licence for pensioners; and what were the main points in such representations. [40971]

Mr. Sproat: Since April 1996, we have received about 170 representations concerning the concessionary television licence available to certain pensioners.

The main points raised were specific queries on eligibility for the concession, calls for extending the scope of the scheme and proposals to abolish the concession in favour of a reduced fee licence for all pensioners.

National Lottery

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what has been the total income received from (a) national lottery tickets and (b) national lottery scratchcard sales in South Yorkshire; what proportion these figures represent of the total income nationally; and what percentage of national lottery awards funding has been received by South Yorkshire lottery. [40840]

Mr. Sproat: Figures on the sales of national lottery tickets and scratchcards in South Yorkshire are operational matters for Camelot Group plc. I have therefore asked the Director General of the National Lottery, to write to the hon. Member, placing copies of his response in the Libraries of the House.

To date, 135 lottery awards—1.5 per cent. of the total—have been made to projects in South Yorkshire for a total of £67,336,877—2.98 per cent. of the total awarded.

Television Licence Fraud Hotline

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will set up a free phone hotline for the reporting of suspected television licence fraudsters; and if she will make a statement. [40872]

Mr. Sproat: No. The BBC is responsible for the administration and enforcement of the television licensing system, including policy on reducing licence evasion.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Aid Budget

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans he has to increase the overseas aid budget; and if he will make a statement. [40773]

Dr. Liam Fox: In common with the budgets of other Departments, the ODA's budget for 1997–98 is currently under consideration in the public expenditure survey round, the outcome of which will not be known until the Chancellor's November Budget statement. At £2,154 million in 1996–97, the UK's development assistance programme is substantial and is internationally recognised for its quality, effectiveness and poverty focus.

TREASURY

Balance of Payments

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the disparity between his forecast for the balance of payments current account deficits in 1997 and the average of the forecasts made by the Panel of Independent Forecasters for 1997. [40728]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The latest Treasury forecast for the current account deficit in 1997 is £1½ billion, shown in the table 1.4 of the "Summer Economic Forecast". This lies within the range of forecasts provided by members of the Panel of Independent Forecasters, detailed in table 1A.1 of the same publication.

Self-assessment Computer System

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what steps he is taking to make sure that the self-assessment computer system will have the comprehensive technical support necessary to put right promptly any faults that may occur in live operation. [41231]

Mr. Jack: Electronic Data Systems Ltd.—the Inland Revenue's information technology partner—will ensure that full technical support is provided by all companies contracted to supply components of the self assessment computer system. In particular Oracle, the company supplying the software package for the database holding taxpayer records, will provide 24-hour support using its worldwide service network.

Such diagnostic and remedial work undertaken to support the system may at times necessitate specialist staff—either in the UK or, exceptionally, at Oracle facilities abroad—having access to copies of batches of taxpayer records. The handling of such confidential data will, as now, be governed by the strictest possible security arrangements to safeguard against misuse. The actual processing of individual's tax affairs and the development of the Inland Revenue's computer systems will continue to be undertaken wholly within the UK.

These comprehensive technical support arrangements will help ensure that the operation of the new self-assessment computer system is as trouble-free as possible.

Customs and Excise

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will announce the results of the review by HM Customs and Excise of its next steps arrangements. [41232]

Mr. Oppenheim: Customs and Excise has been operating along next steps lines since 1991 when the bulk of the Department's operational staff were organised into executive units.

The Department currently has 24 executive units; 14 collections, national investigation service, national intelligence division, solicitor's office and seven other central operations or service units which together employ some 95 per cent. of their staff.

The Department and each executive unit has a framework document which contains statements of responsibilities and accountabilities. The review of its organisation and the impact of next steps clearly demonstrates that Customs and Excise continues to be fully committed to next steps principles. The outcome of the review is the publication today of the revised departmental document "HM Customs and Excise: Next Steps Framework Document 1996", copies of which have been placed in the Libraries of the House.

Executive unit framework documents will be published before the House rises for the Christmas recess.

Public Debt

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the use of the general Government financial deficit as the principal measure of public debt. [40336]

Mr. Waldegrave: The general Government financial deficit is a national accounts measure of the deficit on the Government's current and capital accounts. As a national accounts measure, the GGFD follows internationally recognised guidelines, allowing international comparisons of government deficits. Partly for this reason, it was chosen as the deficits measure in the excessive deficit procedure set out in the Maastricht treaty. But most countries also use their own measure of the deficit when presenting their Budgets. The UK focuses on the public sector borrowing requirement as it is a measure of the net cash demand of the whole of the public sector on the rest of the economy. In addition, monthly PSBR figures are available about two weeks after the end of the period to which they relate, whereas the GGFD is available only quarterly and about three months after the end of the quarter. Forecasts of both are given in the "Financial Statement and Budget Report".

Privatisation

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what sums were (a) paid to and (b) received from public funds in (i) telephone and electronic communications, (ii) gas, (iii) electricity, (iv) public water services and (v) Royal Mail, for the year of and five years preceding the year of their disposal or 1995 as appropriate; and if he will make a statement. [40412]

Mr. Jack [holding answer 14 October 1996]: I refer the hon. Member to the following documents, which set out the information available for each industry. Figures for external financing requirements can be found in "Public Expenditure Statistical Analyses 1996–97" and its predecessor publications; including the "Statistical Supplement to the FSBR" and "Government Expenditure Plans". The EFR measures the difference between what an industry spends and the income from its trading and related activities; the most significant components of external finance are normally Government grants, subsidies and loans, and movements in deposits—which are normally liabilities of the public sector.

Figures for interest payments from the industries to the national loans fund are quoted in the "Consolidated Fund and National Loans Fund Accounts".

Tax and dividend figures for all nationalised industries are available in "Inland Revenue Statistics" and the Office for National Statistics' Blue Book respectively; however, this information is not broken down on an industry-by-industry basis.

UK Bonds

Mr. Gapes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what steps his Department has taken to investigate the volume of United Kingdom bonds issued on the Swiss market which have subsequently been deemed to be defunct or in default; if he will list the United Kingdom banks and other financial institutions which have been approached to participate in such investigations; and what action his Department has taken; [40150]

(2) if he will list those United Kingdom bonds issued on the Swiss market since 1987 which have subsequently been deemed by (a) his Department and (b) the Swiss authorities to be (i) defunct and (ii) in default, indicating the approximate value of each bond and all such bonds. [40151]

Mrs. Angela Knight: None that I am aware of.

Public Sector Borrowing

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the title and authorship of the documents used by Governments of the member states by the European Union in concluding that the percentage of public sector borrowing and debt as a proportion of gross national product should be those specified in the treaty of union, Maastricht. [40363]

Mr. Waldegrave: The Council, meeting in the form of Heads of State or Government, in accordance with article 109j of the EC treaty, will assess which countries fulfil the necessary conditions for the adoption of the single currency. In doing so, the Council will take account of reports prepared for this meeting by the Commission and the European Monetary Institute. Sound public finances, as detailed in article 104c of the treaty and in protocol No. 5 on the excessive deficit procedure, will form an important part of the assessment.

Diesel and Oxygenated Fuel

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he has made of the potential economic benefits deriving from environmental improvements of (a) City diesel and (b) oxygenated fuel; and what consideration he has given to the introduction of fiscal incentives to encourage their use. [40716]

Mr. Oppenheim: We keep the potential economic and environmental benefits of City diesel and oxygenated fuel under review. The Government do consider, where appropriate, the use of fiscal incentives to promote practices which are environmentally and economically beneficial, but each case is looked at on its merits.

Road Fund Licence Exemption

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to review the road fund licence exemption to allow variable concessions; and if he will make a statement. [40777]

Mr. Oppenheim: We keep under review the vehicle excise duty concessions and exemptions. Any statement on this will be made in the Budget.

Scotch Whisky

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has had concerning equalising the tax on Scotch whisky with that of other alcoholic drinks; and if he will make a statement. [40769]

Mr. Oppenheim: The Chancellor of the Exchequer has received representations from the Scotch Whisky Association and the Wine and Spirit Association of Great Britain and Northern Ireland. Other interested groups and individuals have written or made representation through Members of Parliament to the Chancellor and other Treasury Ministers.

Each year, prior to making his Budget decisions, the Chancellor of the Exchequer reviews the levels of taxation on alcoholic beverages including spirits. consideration is given to a wide range of social, economic and health factors as well as the revenue effect. Any statement on this will be made in the Budget.

Abortion

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many abortions have been performed in total to women usually resident in the Trent region under the provisions of the Abortion Act 1967; and how many and what percentage of these abortions were performed in emergency to save the life of the mother. [40820]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The total number of abortions performed under the Abortion Act, to women usually resident in the Trent health region[1] from 1970 to 1994[2] was 245,489. During this period, nine abortions, 0.004 per cent. of the total number of abortions performed, were carried out in an emergency, certified by the operating practitioner as immediately necessary, to save the life of the woman[3].

[1] Figures are based, where possible, on 1994 health authority boundaries. Other boundary changes have not been reflected in the figures.

[2] Figures for 1968–69 are not held on a comparable basis.

[3] Abortions performed under statutory grounds 5 (1970–31 March 1991) and F (1 April–present day) that is, where in the case of emergency it was necessary to save the life of the woman.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give a breakdown by gestation of the pregnancy of the abortions performed on women usually resident in the Trent region in the last year for which figures are available; and what were the comparable figures for each of the previous four years. [40821]

Mrs. Knight: The latest year for which abortion data by gestation of the pregnancy are available for women usually resident in the Trent health region is 1994. The data are presented in table 21 of the 1994 abortion statistics, series AB No. 21, HMSO publication 1996.

Comparable figures for each of the last four years, 1990 to 1993 inclusive, are available in table 24b (1990, 1991) and 24c (1992, 1993) in the following publications: 1990, 1991, 1992, 1993, abortion statistics, England and Wales, series AB Nos. 17 to 21 respectively; HMSO publications 1991, 1993, 1994, 1995, 1996 respectively.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give a breakdown by the procedure adopted of the number of abortions performed on women usually resident in the Trent region in the latest year for which he has figures; and what were the comparable figures for each of the last four years. [400874]

Mrs. Knight: The latest year for which abortion data by procedure are available for women usually resident in the Trent health region is 1994. The data are presented in table 18 of 1994 abortion statistics, series AB No. 21, HMSO publication 1996.

Comparable figures for each of the last four years, 1990 to 1993 inclusive, are available in table 22, in the following publications: 1990, 1991, 1992, 1993 abortion statistics, England and Wales, series AB Nos. 17 to 21 respectively; HMSO publications 1991, 1993, 1995, 1995, 1996 respectively.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give a breakdown by age of the mother of abortions carried out on women usually resident in the Trent region in each of the last five years. [40833]

Mrs. Knight: A breakdown of legal terminations by age of mother usually resident in the Trent health region, for the years 1990 to 1994 inclusive are available in the following publications: 1990, 1991, 1992, 1993, 1994 abortion statistics, England and Wales, series AB Nos. 17 to 21 respectively; HMSO publications 1991, 1993, 1995, 1995, 1996 respectively.

Taxpayers' Incomes

Mr. Winnick: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer, how many and what percentage of taxpayers, whether employed or self-employed, have a gross income (a) above £100,000 annually, (b) between £60,000 and £100,000, (c) between £30,000 and £60,000 and (d) £10,000 and below. [40988]

Mr. Jack: Latest estimates for 1996–97 are given in the table.

Gross income[1] £ per year	Number of taxpayers (thousands)	Percentage of taxpayers
£10,000 and below	9,200	36
£30,000–£60,000	1,700	7
£60,000–£100,000	260	1
Over £100,000	140	under 1

[1] Defined as total income for income tax purposes.

Economic and Monetary Union

Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the Council of Ministers of the European Community will carry out the assessment, required by article 109j of the treaty, of whether the third stage of economic and monetary union can begin in 1997; and if, in relation to that process, the United Kingdom is required to notify its intentions. [41214]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: Article 109j of the EC treaty requires that a formal assessment by the Council of Ministers of which member states meet the necessary conditions for the adoption of the single currency in 1997 should take place by the end of 1996. The European Council agreed at its meeting in Florence in June that member states will not be ready to adopt the single currency in 1997 and confirmed its commitment to the third stage of economic and monetary union starting in 1999 in line with the EC treaty. However, in accordance with its obligation under the EC treaty, the Council will carry out the assessment procedure under article 109j before the end of 1996.

Paragraph 1 of protocol No. 11 to the treaty requires the United Kingdom to notify its intentions in relation to the third stage before this assessment under article 109j is carried out. Accordingly, the Council has been notified by the United Kingdom's permanent representative that the United Kingdom does not intend to move to the third stage in 1997. A copy of the notification has been placed in the Library of both Houses.

This notification does not prejudge or affect in any way the future decision on the United Kingdom's participation in the third stage. Under the treaty, the United Kingdom is not committed and cannot be obliged to move to the third stage without a separate decision to do so by the Government and Parliament. The Government's policy remains that no decision will be taken either way on participation in the third stage during the lifetime of the current Parliament because sufficient information to make a full assessment of the implications for the United Kingdom will not be available.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Nuclear Test Ban Committee

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will arrange for a report on the outcome of the negotiations in the Nuclear Test Ban Committee of the Untied Nationals Conference on Disarmament, which resumed on 29 July, to be put in the Library as soon as it becomes available. [39917]

Mr. David Davis: The Conference on Disarmament issued a report on 12 September. A copy will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

EU Directives

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the numbers of (a) regulation and (b) directives which have been (i) operative in United Kingdom law since 1 January 1973, (ii) introduced between 1973 and 1986 and (iii) introduced since 1986. [40411]

Mr. David Davis: I shall write to the hon. Member shortly. Copies of the letter will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Embassies

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what facilities have been provided to Prince Michael of Kent for business visits by British embassies over the past five years; and what is the estimated cost of those facilities; [40455]

(2) if he will make a statement on the policy of Her Majesty's Government in the provision of facilities by British embassies to private individuals on business trips. [40456]

Mr. Rifkind: The detailed information sought could be provided only after considerable research, which would involve disproportionate costs. The facilities offered by British embassies to Prince Michael of Kent and those accompanying him have been similar to those available for other British business visitors. These generally include advice on programmes and briefing on political background and commercial opportunities in the relevant market sectors. When appropriate, senior officers also accompany and sometimes lobby on behalf of senior British visitors during calls on local authorities. Hospitality is at times provided in order to effect introductions.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what facilities were provided to Prince Michael of Kent on his business visit to Beijing in September; who approved the provision of such facilities; under what arrangements such facilities were provided; to what other citizens of the United Kingdom such facilities are made available; and if he will make a statement. [40457]

Mr. Rifkind: Prince Michael of Kent was invited by the People's Institute of Foreign Affairs in Peking to lead a delegation of senior representatives of British companies active in China. PIFA was responsible for the arrangements, including travel and accommodation in China. The delegation met its own costs for travel to and from China.

The embassy provided briefing and assistance consistent with the seniority of the group and the reception accorded by the Chinese Government. The ambassador accompanied His Royal Highness on his call on the Premier, Li Peng, and the group was accompanied during the visit by a commercial officer on his staff.

Our embassy in Peking seeks to provide appropriate assistance to all British business delegations visiting China. The facilities the embassy provides to business visitors are tailored to their programme and their individual requirements.

Pakistani Diplomats

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many diplomats have been expelled from the Pakistani high commission in 1996 as a result of their procurement on nuclear technology. [40494]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: No diplomats of the Pakistan high commission have been expelled from the UK in 1996. However, a member of the high commission's local staff was deported in July of that year.

Lockerbie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what invitation he had for the International Bar Association to be represented at its conference in London on 9 September on Lockerbie; and why he declined. [40707]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: My right hon. and learned Friend the Foreign Secretary was not invited. A number of officials were invited, but did not attend. The Government's position on the trial of those accused of the Lockerbie bombing is well known: the two accused must stand trial in Scotland or in the United States.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many answers to (a) written and (b) oral parliamentary questions have required correction by his Department in each of the past two years. [40632]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: This is a matter of public record.

Sudan

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make representations to the Government of Sudan about the lack of religious tolerance in their country, with particular reference to the persecution of Christians; and if he will make a statement. [40763]

Dr. Lian Fox: Freedom of worship is a fundamental human right. We are very concerned by disturbing reports of forced islaminisation in Sudan. We frequently make clear our concerns, and those of the British Parliament and people, about human rights and abuses in Sudan. The Minister of State Foreign and Commonwealth Office, my right hon. Friend the Member for Richmond and Barnes (Mr. Hanley), did so most recently to the Sudanese ambassador on 2 July.

Promotional Expenditure

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how much his Department has spent on (a) publicity, (b) promotions, and (c) hospitality in each of the last six years. [40625]

Dr. Liam Fox: (a) and (b): Total expenditure on publicity—that is, promotional material and recruitment advertising—in the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, diplomatic wing and Overseas Development Administration, in each of the last six years was:

1990–91: £1,825,882

1991–92: £1,785,388

1992–93: £2,033,000

1993–94: £2,130,264

1994–95: £2,320,000

1995–96: £2,442,763.

(c) I refer the hon. Member to the answer the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, my right hon. Friend the Member for Richmond and Barnes (Mr. Hanley) gave to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) on 1 February, Official Report, column 857-58.

Acts of Parliament (Updating)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs by what means a citizen of the United Kingdom can refer to any Act of Parliament in force to which is added, or incorporated, the texts of amendments to current law occasioned by regulations of the European Economic Community, stating by whom such updating is maintained, where it is done, what is its cost and which vote of the estimates defrays this expenditure. [40797]

Mr. David Davis: I shall write to the hon. Member shortly. Copies of the letter will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Li Langing (Visit)

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are the dates and purpose of the visit planned by the Chinese Vice-Premier Li Langing to the United Kingdom. [41062]

Dr. Liam Fox: The Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs Office, my right hon. Friend the Member for Richmond and Barnes (Mr. Hanley), shall write to the hon. Member shortly. Copies of the letter will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Tibet

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what considerations led him not to raise the issue of Tibet at his recent meeting with the Chinese Foreign Minister; and if he will make a statement. [41064]

Dr. Liam Fox: The Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, my right hon. Friend the Member for Richmond and Barnes (Mr. Hanley), shall write to the hon. Member shortly. Copies of the letter will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Unidentified Flying Objects

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) what consultation has taken place in each of the last five years by his Department with the French Service de Documentation Exterieur et de Contre-Espionnage in respect of unidentified flying objects; and if he will make a statement; [40970]

(2) if he will list by month for each of the last 10 years, and this year to date, the number of occasions that MI6 has monitored unidentified flying objects investigations; and if he will make a statement; [40981]

(3) if he will list by month for each of the last 10 years and this year to date the number of occasions on which the Government Communications headquarters has monitored unidentified flying object investigations; and if he will make a statement. [40922]

Mr. David Davis: I shall write to the hon. Member shortly. Copies of the letter will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what are his latest estimates of the expenditure on all external consultants, including management consultants, for each year since 1992, in 1996 prices, for his Department and its agencies; and what are the quantified annual cost savings which such expenditure has resulted in. [41178]

Dr. Liam Fox: The Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs Office, my right hon. Friend the Member for Richmond and Barnes (Mr. Hanley), shall write to the hon. Member shortly. Copies of the letter will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

New Buildings and Premises

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what was the total expenditure on new buildings and premises by his Department and its agencies; and if he will indicate the square footage of new office space purchased or newly rented in each of the last five years. [41144]

Dr. Liam Fox: The Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, my right hon. Friend the Member for Richmond and Barnes (Mr. Hanley), shall write to the hon. Member shortly. Copies of the letter will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Telephone Interceptions

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list for each of the last 12 months the number of (a) interceptions and (b) monitorings of telephone calls (i) entering or (ii) leaving the United Kingdom, through the joint Government Communications headquarters—National Security Agency agreement; and if he will make a statement. [40972]

Dr. Liam Fox: The Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, my right hon. Friend the Member for Richmond and Barnes (Mr. Hanley), shall write to the hon. Member shortly. Copies of the letter will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Nuclear Weapons

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what assessment he has made of the implications for United Kingdom policy on the use of nuclear weapons of the decision of the International Court of Justice on nuclear weapons. [41224]

Mr. David Davis: I shall write to the hon. Member shortly. Copies of the letter will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

Combined Heat and Power

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what capacity of electricity used in his Department's buildings is generated in a combined heat and power plant; and what plans he has to increase that capacity. [41321]

Dr. Liam Fox: The Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, my right hon. Friend the Member for Richmond and Barnes (Mr. Hanley), will write to the hon. Member shortly. Copies of the letter will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

DEFENCE

Religious Discrimination (Caterick Camp)

Mr. Gabraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what reports he has received of religious discrimination at Catterick camp during June and July; and if he will make a statement. [40766]

Mr. Soames: There have been no reported incidents of religious discrimination at Catterick Camp during June and July. However, we treat any allegations of discrimination extremely seriously and if the hon. Member can provide any information which suggests that religious discrimination has taken place at Catterick Camp it will, of course, be fully investigated.

Suicides

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence pursuant to his answer of 16 May to the hon. Member for South Shields (Dr Clark), Official Report, column 559, if he will break down the number of suicides in the armed forces by (a) year and (b) service for each year since 1991. [40767]

Mr. Soames: Since January 1991 the total number of service personnel who have been confirmed as committing suicide is 130, which is broken down as follows:

Year	Army	Royal Navy[1]	RAF
1991	22	5	7
1992	19	6	5
1993	18	1	4
1994	17	6	5
1995	12	1	2

[1] Includes the Royal Marines.

Figures are not yet available for 1996.

The total figure given in the answer to the hon. Member for South Shields of 16 May, Official Report, column 559, was 135. This original figure has subsequently been amended to reflect the rulings of coroners courts.

Beef Purchases

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what proportion of beef supplied to service personnel in the British armed forces in the last year and purchased by his Department was purchased (a) from United Kingdom sources, (b) from other European Union sources and (c) from the rest of the world; and if he will make a statement. [40440]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Since 1 October 1994 the supply of food for the armed services has been the responsibility of the Navy, Army and Air Force Institutes, NAAFI. My Department does not specify sources from which meat should be obtained, but NAAFI is required to meet the specification and achieve best value for money. The majority of our requirements are, however, for frozen beef which is not readily available from the British market and on cost grounds the majority of meat is sourced from south America and eastern Europe. Nevertheless, some beef including sirloin, foreribs, minced and diced and a range of manufactured products are normally procured from UK sources.

Prior to 1994, beef was purchased directly by my Department, but no records were kept of the quantities sourced by a particular country, although the majority was imported from south America.

Gulf War Syndrome

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will now make it his policy to investigate media allegations of cases of the Gulf war syndrome if invited to do so in parliamentary questions from hon. Members. [40734]

Mr. Soames: Our first duty, and prime concern, is to the health of those veterans who served in the Gulf, and we will of course explore any information made available which may have affected the health of those veterans. The proper means for the medical examination of Gulf veterans who are concerned about their health, is the medical assessment programme which we established in 1993. I urge any veteran who has such concerns and has not yet been seen by the MAP to come forward as soon as possible.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what new assessment his Department has made of the possible effects of fluorine on Gulf war military and medical veterans since the reply of 24 October 1994, Official Report, column 500. [40750]

Mr. Soames: No assessment has been made of the possible effects of fluorine on Gulf war veterans. No evidence of the effects of fluorine has been found among any of the UK Gulf war veterans examined under my Department's medical assessment programme.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if the memorandum on the discovery of mustard gas during the Gulf war by the commander of the 54 Chemical Troop, dated 4 January 1994, has now been discovered and assessed. [40751]

Mr. Soames: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of the letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what information on the environmental effects of organophosphates his Department has received from the United States Government in regard to the joint research being conducted on the implications of organophosphate use in Operation Granby in the Gulf war. [40736]

Mr. Soames: My Department is liaising closely with the United States Government on all aspects of research into the health of Gulf war veterans. It has received information on the United States Government's assessment of the health effects on US forces of organophosphate use during the Gulf war, and on associated work being conducted as part of their research programme into Gulf war illnesses. No joint US-UK research is being conducted into organophosphate use during the Gulf war.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what quality control was conducted on the organophosphate pesticides purchased by his Department to combat fly-borne diseases in the Gulf war; and what post-war assessment has been made on the effect on the local environment in Kuwait and southern Iraq of the use of pesticides during Operation Granby. [40738]

Mr. Soames: The organophosphate pesticides, malathion and fenitrothion, were approved for use at the time of Operation Granby under the Control of Pesticides Regulations 1986. ALFACRON, containing the organophosphate azamathiphos, and purchased locally in the Gulf, was also approved for use under these regulations. SNIP, a similar product purchased locally containing azamathiphos, was licensed for use in the United States, but it is understood that no application has been made for approval in the UK. A further organophosphate pesticide purchased locally, neocidal, is understood to have been supplied in error in response to an order for a non-organophosphate pesticide.

My Department is not aware of any post-war assessment of the effect of the use of pesticides on the local environment in Kuwait and southern Iraq during Operation Granby.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many Gulf war veteran service people and medical support staff have been found to suffer from brainstem encephalitis; and what assessment has been made of the relationship between incidences of brainstem encephalitis in Gulf war veterans and the environment of the Gulf war. [40746]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 15 October 1996]: There have been no reported cases of Gulf war veterans suffering from brainstem encephahlitis. No assessment has therefore been made of a possible link between brainstem encephalitis and the environment of the Gulf.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what medical studies have been conducted by his Department on the effects on human health and the environment of the organophosphate pesticides malathion, diazinon, azamathiphos and dimethyl phosphorothionate prior to their use in Operation Granby in the Gulf war. [40745]

Mr. Soames [holding answer 15 October 1996]: No medical studies on the organophosphate pesticides malathion, diazinon, azamathiphos and dimethyl phosphorothionate were conducted by my Department prior to the Gulf war.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many (a) written and (b) oral parliamentary questions have required correction by his Department in each of the past two years. [40628]

Mr. Soames: The information requested is not collected.

Exercises (Ebford)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 4 December 1995, Official Report, column 2, what members of the armed forces were deployed in the vicinity of Ebford village during autumn 1988; and if he will make a statement. [40645]

Mr. Soames: No personnel of the Royal Marines Command were deployed for any purpose in the vicinity of Ebford village during the autumn of 1988.

Promotional Expenditure

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how much his Department has spent on (a) publicity, (b) promotions, and (c) hospitality in each of the last six years. [40621]

Mr. Soames: Details of central MOD expenditure on publicity and service recruitment advertising for 1990–91 to 1993–94 are published in the annual MOD departmental reports, Cm 2201 (page 31), Cm 2501 (page 36) and Cm 2801 (page 39). The outturn for 1994–95 and the latest estimate for 1995–96 have been published in the MOD performance report for 1994–95, Cm 3055 (page 43). Copies of the relevant publications are available in the Library of the House.

In respect of hospitality, I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) on 30 January 1996, Official Report, columns 604–605. The outturn for 1995–96 was £5.13 million.

Nuclear Materials (Transport)

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what environmental assessments his Department has conducted on the transport of nuclear materials to and from the United States of America from the United Kingdom undertaken within the provisions of the 1958 mutual defence agreement on atomic energy matters as amended. [40747]

Mr. Soames: I am not aware of any requirement for environmental assessments in this context; none has therefore been carried out. Whenever nuclear materials are transported by the UK, they are carried in containers which are designed, manufactured and tested in conformity with the appropriate International Atomic Energy Agency regulations.

Biological Warfare Agents

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will now review his policy regarding the release of details of the countermeasures taken against biological warfare agents by Her Majesty's armed forces during conflict. [40733]

Mr. Soames: The protection of British personnel is our prime concern in times of conflict. Details of the medical countermeasures taken by the armed forces against biological warfare agents during conflicts, therefore, remain appropriately classified, in order to avoid informing potential adversaries of the UK's strengths and weaknesses in dealing with the threat of biological weapons. We are, however, considering whether any information can be released after conflicts have ended.

War Graves (Singapore)

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the desecration of war graves in Singapore. [40933]

Mr. Soames: My Department is unaware of the desecration of any war graves in Singapore. Where war graves are disturbed or sullied, the Commonwealth War Graves Commission, which is responsible for the marking and continuing maintenance of all such graves, should be contacted. It will arrange for the grave to be restored to its previous standard with all due care and respect.

SCOTLAND

Parole System

12. Mr. Matthew Banks: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on his proposals to reform the parole system in Scotland. [38717]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: We are determined that criminals should serve the sentences given by the courts and should be allowed reductions only if they earn it. Our proposals were outlined in our White Paper and we will introduce legislation at an early date.

16. Mr. Worthington: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about the future financing of further education. [38723]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: Our policies have created a strong further education sector. Levels of student activity rose by 6 per cent. in the year following incorporation and present funding plans allow for continuing growth in student numbers through increasingly efficient colleges.

Forest Roads

18. Mr. Maclennan: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has received about weight restrictions imposed on forest roads in the highlands; and if he will make a statement. [38725]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Office Development Department received five representations in 1995 concerning proposed weight restriction orders published by the former Highland regional council.

Newmilns Bypass

19. Mr. McKelvey: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when work is planned to start on the Newmilns bypass; and what plans he has to involve the private finance initiative in the project. [38726]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The A71, on which Newmilns stands, is a local road. Proposals for improvements at Newmilns are therefore a matter for East Ayrshire council as the local roads authority for the area.

Unemployment

20. Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he expects to meet Scottish Enterprise to discuss unemployment in Scotland. [38727]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend and I regularly meet Scottish Enterprise to discuss a wide variety of issues concerning the Scottish economy.

Inward Investment

21. Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement about inward investment in Scotland. [38728]

Mr. Kynoch: Inward investment in Scotland has been running at record levels over the past two years and this success is continuing. Firms like Hyundai, Chunghwa, Lite-On, Simple Technology and Rohr recognise that locating in Scotland means locating in one of Europe's most competitive business locations.

"Crime and Punishment"

22. Mr. Gallie: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what responses he has received to his White Paper, "Crime and Punishment", Cm 3302; and if he will make a statement. [38729]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: A considerable number of detailed and helpful submissions were received in response to the White Paper. My right hon. Friend is currently giving careful consideration to all the views expressed and plans to bring forward legislation at an early date.

Nursery Voucher Scheme

23. Mr. Rathbone: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to extend the operation of nursery vouchers in Scotland. [38730]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The pre-school education voucher initiative is currently being piloted in four local authority areas in Scotland. It will be extended to the whole of Scotland from August next year.

30. Mr. Ian Bruce: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what assessment he has made of pilot schemes for nursery vouchers in Scotland. [38739]

Mr. Robertson: The pilot schemes of the pre-school education initiative in Scotland have been under way for barely two months, but already there are indications that they are progressing well: over 150 centres have been admitted to the system, and vouchers have been issued for over 95 per cent. of eligible children. My right hon. Friend's final assessment will be informed by the implementation evaluation conducted by Stirling university, and also by the findings of HM inspectors of schools in the course of their inspections during the pilot phase.

Crofting

24. Mr. Hayes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what measures he is pursuing to promote crofting in Scotland. [38731]

Mr. Robertson: On 10 October my right hon. Friend announced the publication of draft legislation which would give all crofters on his estates a unique opportunity to control their own land.

Waste Disposal

25. Mr. McAvoy: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what proposals he has to encourage local authorities to find alternatives to landfill as a method of waste disposal. [38733]

Mr. Kynoch: The Government have introduced measures to encourage recycling and waste reduction as alternatives to landfill. These include the recycling credits scheme operated by local authorities and the landfill tax, which will encourage waste producers to examine their option for dealing with waste.

Departmental Employees

26. Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many people are currently employed in the Scottish Office; what was the figure in May 1979; in each case at what cost in 1996 prices; and if he will make a statement. [38734]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Eight thousand two hundred and thirty–three people were employed in the Scottish Office, excluding the Scottish Prison Service, at 1 April 1996. In the same period, numbers in the Prison Service rose from 2,582 to 4,439.

The current staff costs are £109 million for the Scottish Office, excluding the Scottish Prison Service, and 85.3 million for the Scottish Prison Service: it is not possible except at disproportionate cost to produce accurate figures for 1979 on a fully comparable basis.

Housing (Glasgow)

27. Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next intends to meet Glasgow city council to discuss the housing situation in the city. [38735]

Mr Raymond S Robertson: I have met representatives of Glasgow city council on several occasions during the past year and officials from the Department are due to meet the council at the end of the month to discuss housing matters.

Economic Prospects

28. Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what recent representations he has received from businesses in Scotland about prospects for the Scottish economy. [38736]

Mr. Kynoch: Business confidence in Scotland remains high and economic prospects are excellent.

Fishing Industry

29. Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the future of the Scottish fishing industry. [38738]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The Scottish fishing industry makes a vital contribution to the social and economic welfare of Scotland's coastal communities. With fish stocks under increasing pressure, we need to safeguard the industry's future through better management and conservation. The Government are determined to secure whatever improvements in the common fisheries policy may be necessary to that end.

NHS Employees

31. Sir Hector Monro: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many nurses, doctors and dentists were employed by the national health service in Scotland in 1980 and in 1995. [38740]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The whole-time equivalent number of nurses and midwives has increased from 27,398 in 1980 to 35,378 in 1995, a rise of 29 per cent.; hospital and community medical staff have increased from 5,629 in 1980 to 6,849 in 1995, a rise of 22 per cent.; hospital and community dental staff have reduced from 525 in 1980 to 446 in 1995, a drop of 15 per cent.

Feudal Superiors

32. Mr. Eric Clarke: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what changes in legislation he proposes to limit the powers of feu superiors in Scotland. [38741]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish Law Commission is considering proposals to abolish or amend the remaining aspects of the feudal system and will report in due course. The Government are committed to completing the reform of the feudal system, but would not wish to proceed in advance of the commission's report.

General Practitioner Fundholding

33. Mr. Wray: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how may GP fundholding practices there are in Scotland. [38742]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Three hundred and eighty-one.

Prison Sentences

34. Mr. Jacques Arnold: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on his proposals to make prisoners liable to serve the full terms of their sentences in Scotland. [38743]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: We are determined that criminals should serve the sentences given by the courts and should be allowed reductions only if they earn it. Our proposals were outlined in our White Paper and we will introduce legislation at an early date.

Local Government Finance

Mr. Kirkwood: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when he next expects to meet the Convention of Scottish Local Authorities to discuss local government finance. [38724]

Mr. Kynoch: My right hon. Friend and I will next meet COSLA on 8 November.

Lockerbie

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what invitation the Crown Office had from the International Bar Association to be represented at its conference on Lockerbie on 9 September; and why he declined. [40706]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: My noble and learned Friend the Lord Advocate, or in his place a representative from the Crown Office, did receive an invitation to attend this conference. It was, however, inappropriate for my noble and learned Friend, as head of the independent prosecution service in Scotland or anyone on his behalf, to attend the conference. The Government's position on the trial of those accused of the Lockerbie bombing is, in any event, well known. Trial of the two Libyan accused should be in Scotland or the United States.

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what initiatives between July and October 1996 the Crown Office has taken to resolve the issues raised by the destruction of Pan Am 103 over Lockerbie. [38901]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Crown Office has maintained its preparedness for the trial of the two accused in the Lockerbie case.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many answers to (a) written and (b) oral parliamentary questions have required correction by his Department in each of the past two years. [40640]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: This is a matter of public record.

Ministerial Visits (Catalonia)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make an official visit to Catalonia in order to study its system of government. [38716]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: I will bear the hon. Member's suggestion in mind.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Publicity

Ms Hodge: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the cost of staff employed full-time or part-time (i) to provide information and publicity and (ii) to work on the press and media in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1994–95 and (c) 1993–94. [39434]

Mr. Boswell: The budget allocations for staff employed full-time or part-time (i) to provide information and publicity and (ii) to work on the press and media in (a) 1995–96, (b) 1994–95 and (c) 1993–94 was as follows:

	Publicity £	Press £
1995–96	680,592	262,645
1994–95	539,099	300,933
1993–94	592,048	298,104

Ms Hodge: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the cost budgeted for staff, employed full-time or part-time, to provide information and publicity in 1996–97. [39438]

Mr. Boswell: The budget allocation for staff employed full-time or part-time to provide information and publicity in 1996–97 is £632,600. The figure does not include those working on press and media, nor administration support staff.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his Department's budget in 1996–97 for consultants to assist with information, publicity, press and media. [39354]

Mr. Boswell: Nil.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many staff are assumed in his Department's budget to be employed (i) full-time and (ii) part-time, (a) to work on press and media and (b) to provide information and publicity in 1996–97. [39382]

Mr. Boswell: The number of MAFF staff being employed (i) full-time and (ii) part-time, (a) to work on press and media and (b) to provide information and publicity in 1996–97 are as follows:

Press: 7

Publicity: 22.

Administration support staff are not included.

Ms Hodge: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many staff were employed full-time or part-time (a) to provide information and publicity and (b) on press and media in (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1994–95 and (iii) 1993–94. [39414]

Mr. Boswell: The number of staff employed by MAFF, both full-time and part-time, to (a) provide information and publicity and (b) on press and media in (i) 1995–96, (ii) 1994–95 and (iii) 1993–94, were as follows:

	Press	Publicity
1995–96	7	25
1994–95	9	22
1993–94	9	23

Administration support staff are not included.

Beef Sales

Mr. Quentin Davies: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the level of beef sales in Britain, and in each of the other EU countries on (a) 1 April and (b) the latest available date in each case. [30152]

Mrs. Browning: According to a consumer survey conducted on behalf of the Meat and Livestock Commission, overall household purchases for the four-week period ending 10 March were 19,561 tonnes valued at £90,519. This was the last consumer survey produced before the Minister's announcement on the 20 March. For the latest available four-week period ending on 22 September, overall household purchases of beef were 15,893 tonnes valued at £71,862.

For other member states, information on beef consumption is not held centrally and can be obtained only at disproportionate cost. However, anecdotal evidence suggests that beef consumption in France, Germany, Italy, Belgium and Holland, and across the EU, is well below normal levels.

Computerised Cattle Database

Mr. Tyler: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to introduce a national computerised cattle database; and if he will make a statement. [32963]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 17 June 1996]: The Government are working with urgency on plans for the accelerated introduction of a national cattle movements database. A feasibility study is underway.

Animal Feed (Advice)

Mr. Campbell-Savours: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) how many of the advisers and consultants who advised his Department on policy and regulatory requirements in relation to the composition of animal feed were (a) full-time Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food officials, (b) part-time Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food officials or (c) outside appointment; [32329]

(2) if he will list the names of the advisers and consultancies who advised his Department on policy and regulatory requirements in relation to the composition of animal feed in each year since 1986. [32328]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 17 June 1996]: The information requested on all advisors and consultants including Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food officials could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The interdepartmental Committee on Animal Feedingstuffs advises on the composition and labelling of feedingstuffs. Eleven of its members are full-time officials—including technical experts—of MAFF or its agencies and five members are full-time officials of other Government Departments. The interdepartmental group on new feed developments reviews new developments concerning animal feed materials, manufacturing processes and animal feeding practices. It also draws its expertise from officials in MAFF and other Government Departments.

The Veterinary Products Committee and the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee provide independent expert advice on certain aspects of the composition of animal feedingstuffs.

Independent committees which have completed their work are the working party on bovine spongiform encephalopathy—the Southwood committee—and the Consultative Committee on Research into Spongiform Encephalopathies—the Tyrrell committee. In addition, the expert group on animal feedingstuffs under the Chairmanship of Professor Eric Lamming reviewed the regulatory framework covering the animal feed industry and reported in 1992.

I will write separately to the hon. Member with membership details of the independent committees and the expert group.

Rendering Processes (Canterbury)

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food for what reasons his Department has not responded to Canterbury city council's statutory consultation procedures concerning rendering processes at Canterbury Mills; and if he will make a statement.[33135]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 18 June 1996]: A letter on this matter was sent to Canterbury city council on 26 July, following detailed and extensive assessment of the processes employed at Canterbury Mills.

Bovine Spongiform Encephalopathy

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from the French Government alleging that French cattle have contracted BSE from eating feedstuffs supplied from the United Kingdom; and what evidence he has evaluated on this matter. [35714]

Mrs. Browning: We have received no representations from the French Government about the possibility that French cattle have contracted BSE from eating feedstuffs supplied from the UK or containing UK-sourced raw materials.

Mammalian-derived meat and bonemeal could legitimately be used in feed for pigs and poultry up to 29 March 1996. It was in free circulation and could quite legitimately be exported to other member states for similar use. The UK informed the Commission and other member states of the measures it was taking to introduce a ruminant feed ban in July 1988 and the reasons for this. It was, however, for the Commission to introduce controls across the Community, and for other member states to introduce their own domestic regulations. The feeding of meat and bonemeal to bovines was prohibited in France from July 1990 and extended to include all ruminants in December 1994.

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of (a) how long the prions involved in BSE survive (i) in water, (ii) in soil and (iii) in stored meat and bonemeal and (b) their general stability or degradation characteristics. [34508]

Mrs. Browning: The Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee, which advises Government on all aspects of the spongiform encephalopathies, has reviewed all the environmental aspects and issued a statement following its meeting on 29 May. This was published under cover of a Ministry of Agriculture press notice of 7 June. A copy of that press notice is available in the Library of the House.

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to the answer to the hon. Member for Wakefield of 19 June, Official Report, column 499, what research he has evaluated indicating how gelatin processed from bovine skin and bone is free from risk of contamination; and what account this research took of the resistance of the BSE agent to (a) heat and (b) caustic soda. [34779]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 1 July 1996]: Considerable research effort has gone into determining the extent to which various bovine tissues may harbour the BSE infective agent. No infectivity has ever been detected in bovine hides or bones, and the raw materials from which gelatin is made would not therefore be expected to be contaminated with BSE agent. Published research has examined the ability of various stages in the manufacture of gelatin to remove or inactivate the infective agent, in the unlikely event that any were present in the raw materials. The application of caustic substances and heat are only elements in the overall process, which must be examined as a whole in determining the likely reduction in infectivity which would result. All the available evidence, along with full details of the processes employed in producing gelatin and information provided on a confidential basis by the gelatin manufacturers of Europe, was considered by the Spongiform Encephalopathy Advisory Committee in arriving at its conclusions about the safety of gelatin.

Mr. Hardy: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he will take to ensure that smaller beef producers are not made bankrupt by the present BSE eradication arrangements; and what assessment he has made of the extent to which beef producers are making a loss when steers are marketed. [38096]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 22 July 1996]: I am fully aware that current market prices for all beef cattle are substantially lower than those at the same time last year and am conscious of the enormous strain this has put on beef producers.

The Government agreed a package of addition support measures for beef producers at the June Agriculture Council worth some £110 million in the UK. Most of the money, some £81 million, is being paid as supplements under the beef premium schemes. A large proportion of the income of beef producers comes from suckler, cow premium, beef special premium and HLCA payments. Increases in these payments are therefore reducing the impact of lower cattle prices on producers incomes. Over 90 per cent. of claimants will have already received their supplements. The remainder will be paid by early October.

The Government have also arranged for beef producers to receive 80 per cent. rather than the normal 60 per cent. rate of advance payments under the beef premium schemes from 1 November. This should ensure additional funds are in the pockets of beef producers in the crucial autumn period.

In addition, some £29 million has been made available under the 1996 beef marketing payment scheme. This money is being distributed to beef producers according to the number of adult clean cattle—including steers, heifers and young bulls—sold in the period 20 March to 30 June (inclusive) for slaughter for human consumption. The application period for this scheme closed on 23 August and payment will be at a flat rate of £66.76 per eligible animal. The first payments under this scheme began earlier this month and it is hoped they will be completed by 15 October.

While the measures that I have outlined should relieve some of the financial pressures currently facing the beef industry, they are not designed as compensation for the fall in market prices. They are market support measures designed to ensure the survival of the industry. In the longer term, we would hope that as public confidence increases and the market adjusts to the situation, the incomes of beef producers will gradually recover.

Mr. Marlow: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what powers he has to prevent imports of beef from EU countries where he believes BSE is endemic and where the brain and spinal column are not removed from the carcase. [23998]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 2 April 1996]: Member states of the EU have power to take interim protective measures under article 9 of Council Directive 89/662/EEC pending the adoption of EU legislation where there is an outbreak of disease in the territory of another member state.

The United Kingdom has asked the Commission to adopt Community-wide controls on the removal of specified bovine offal from cattle carcases.

Mr. Heppell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he took to inform abattoirs and renderers (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) in the EU of the decision to ban the use of thymus and intestines of calves under six months old. [35750]

Mrs. Browning: In the United Kingdom, the trade associations representing abattoir owners and renderers were consulted on the Government's decision to extend the specified bovine offal ban to include thymus and intestines of calves under six months of age. Renderers and abattoirs in other member states were not informed directly by the Ministry of the changes. The Commission was, however, notified of the Government's intention in accordance with EC directive 83/189 (as amended) laying down a procedure for the provision of information in the field of technical standards and regulations.

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to assist farmers who are caught by the BSE culling backlog with the cost of winter feed; and if he will make a statement. [40813]

Mrs. Browning: A number of representations have been received about the introduction of a feed subsidy for cattle awaiting slaughter under the over 30-month scheme, which are being studied.

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the level of under-reporting of cases of BSE in those countries which export cattle to the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement. [40128]

Mrs. Browning: BSE is a notifiable disease in all member states.

Apart from the UK, BSE has been confirmed in homebred cattle in France, Portugal, Switzerland and the Republic of Ireland. Since 1986, the UK has imported cattle from three of these countries: France, Switzerland and the Republic of Ireland. We have no evidence that under-reporting of BSE cases occurs in these countries.

Specified Bovine Offal

Miss Emma Nicholson: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the extent to which local control adequately ensures that mechanical recovery of meat takes place with the minimum possible contamination from specified bovine offal; and if he will make a statement. [34108]

Mrs. Browning: Specified bovine materials have to be removed from all cattle at slaughter and are destroyed. In addition, in December 1995 the use of the bovine vertebral column for the production of mechanically recovered meat was prohibited. This was a precautionary measure to prevent a risk of potential contamination of MRM by small lengths of spinal cord accidentally left attached to the vertebral column. This ensures that no specified bovine material can enter mechanically recovered meat, even accidentally.

Farming Population

Mrs. Gorman: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the farming population of the European Union. [35779]

Mr. Boswell [holding answer 10 July 1996]: The Community survey on the structure of agricultural holdings in 1993 showed that there were some 15 million farming jobs—excluding casual workers and contractors—in the 12 member states. Some workers will hold jobs on different holdings. Further information is contained in "Statistics in Focus—Agriculture, forestry and fisheries" published by Eurostat.

Herds

Mr. Gordon Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what estimate he has made of the number and percentage of herds in the United Kingdom which are closed. [37389]

Mrs. Browning: There are currently no accurate statistics available on the number of closed herds. The Agricultural Development and Advisory Service estimates that the percentage of UK herds that are closed (i) in the beef and dairy sectors are:

Dairy herds 45–55 per cent closed

Beef herds (suckler cows): 5–10 per cent. closed

(i) that is herds which have not brought in any female animals in the last five years.

Internet

Mr. Rowe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to ensure that major publications from his Department are accompanied by a simultaneous electronic release of the text on the Internet. [37228]

Mr. Boswell: MAAF has published a number of documents electronically to coincide with the release of the printed publication. The Department is looking at expanding the range of information which it places on the Internet.

Beef Farmers

Mr. Pickthall: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what measures he is taking to ensure that beef farmers who have been selling steers, heifers and young bulls since March, receive a share of the £29.4 million agreed for distribution to United Kingdom producers in special difficulties. [36743]

Mr. Baldry [holding answer 15 July 1996]: Some £29 million has been allocated to a system of national aid measures. This money will be distributed to beef producers and under the beef marketing payment scheme, according to the number of adult clean cattle sold in the period 20 March to 30 June for slaughter for human consumption. The application period for this scheme closed on 23 August 1991. More than 29,000 claims were submitted in respect of some 450,000 animals throughout the United Kingdom. All of these claims have now been processed and the rate of payment has been fixed at £66.76 per eligible animal. The first payments began earlier this month and it is hoped they will all be completed by 15 October.

Sheep Dips

Mr. Ieuan Wyn Jones: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment his Department has made of the safety and effectiveness of lindane-based sheep dips with particular reference to their performance relative to organophosphorus dips; what conclusions he has drawn from the recent pesticides safety directorate review of lindane (gamma HCH); and if he will make a statement. [37802]

Mrs. Browning: Licences authorising the use of lindane-based sheep dips were revoked in 1984. There has been no application for a marketing authorisation for lindane-based sheep dips since then and no assessment of the safety or effectiveness of such veterinary medicines have been undertaken subsequently in the United Kingdom.

The independent Advisory Committee on Pesticides concluded, in February, a very thorough review of the uses of lindane as an agricultural pesticide regulated under the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985. The Committee recommended that all approvals of lindane for such agricultural uses should continue subject to certain further steps being taken to protect lindane users, improvements to product labelling and the subsequent submission of further data. Ministers in all the regulatory Departments have accepted these recommendations which are being implemented.

Ketamin

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if the veterinary anaesthetic drug ketamin is available in the United Kingdom; what safeguards he has issued to ensure that the drug does not become available to young people; and if he will make a statement. [38327]

Mrs. Browning: Ketamine hydrochloride is the active ingredient in three veterinary medicines with current marketing authorisations. It is authorised, for use as an anaesthetic for cats—two products—and sub-human primates—one product. In each of these cases, the product is authorised in the category of veterinary medicine available only on prescription, and as such would be used only under the direct control of a veterinary surgeon. The Royal College of Veterinary Surgeons has published a code of practice for storage and dispensing of medicines by veterinary surgeons which includes a requirement that premises in which medicines are stored and dispensed should be capable of being secured to exclude the public and to deter unlawful entry.

European Fisheries Council

Mr. Harris: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the European Fisheries Council in Luxembourg. [41157]

Mr. Baldry: I represented the United Kingdom at the meeting of the Fisheries Council in Luxembourg on 14 October together with my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Scotland.

The Council discussed the principles underlying Commission proposals for substantial further capacity reductions in Community fishing fleets in the next series of multi-annual guidance programmes to run from 1997–2002. Most member states expressed concern about the rates of reduction proposed, the way these would impact on particular fleet segments and the consequences for employment and the economy of coastal communities. I also made it clear that the UK could not implement further compulsory fleet reductions while the quota-hopping problem remained unresolved and drew attention to the burning sense of injustice which the present situation caused in the British fishing industry.

It was concluded that further detailed examination of all elements of the Commission proposal would be needed before decisions could be taken. There was, however, general recognition of the need for fishing mortality to be reduced to acceptable levels for critical stocks and for this to be done in ways which are appropriate, equitable and soundly based. This would include consideration of policies other than capacity reduction, such as technical conservation and enforcement. It would also include careful assessment of the effects of reductions in fishing activity on the industry and those dependent on it.

The Council also took note of the Commission's report on implementation to date of the existing multi-annual guidance programmes, with the proviso that the figures for a number of member states, including the UK, needed correction, in particular in relation to tonnage measurement.

Ministers had a first exchange of views on the Commission's proposal for new technical conversation measures. There were many reservations about the proposal but general agreement on the need to improve the current measures in order to conserve stocks and reduce discards. It was also accepted that the measures eventually agreed must command the confidence of the industry and therefore be based on sound scientific advice, easily understood and enforceable.

The Council discussed the Commission proposal on satellite monitoring. I pressed for harmonised implementation by all member states and the need to guard against fishermen being unfairly penalised in respect of genuine equipment failures. I also requested that the Commission should explore ways in which satellite monitoring could reduce the regulatory burden on fishermen. In the light of the many detailed concerns raised by member states, it was concluded that the matter should be referred for further detailed examination.

The Council agreed unanimously a proposal consolidating regulations laying down common marketing standards for fish and fisheries products. It makes minor modifications to grading standards. It also provides for the ending of Community financial compensation for lower quality 'B' grade fish with effect from 1 January 2000 and subject to a review after one year.

The Under-Secretary of State for Scotland reminded the Council of the difficulties that salmon farmers are facing in the critical marketing period before Christmas as a result of low prices. He emphasised the importance of the Commission's investigation of complaints about dumping and unfair subsidies in Norway resolving these recurring difficulties.

The Council also agreed by qualified majority, with Italy and Spain voting against, a measure raising the ceiling on beef intervention purchases for 1996 by 60,000 tonnes and providing new intervention arrangements for store cattle until December.

Gelatine (Parliamentary Questions)

Mr. Hinchliffe: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when the hon. Member for Wakefield can expect answers to his questions for answer on 4 June, 19 June and 25 June in respect of gelatine. [38092]

Mrs. Browning: I have replied to the hon. Member for Wakefield's questions in respect of gelatine on 18 July, columns 638, and 24 July, column 628.

Equines

Mr. Harry Greenway: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many equines were exported for slaughter for food in the past year; and if he will make a statement. [36684]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 18 July 1996]: I very much regret that my hon. Friend has had to wait so long for a reply.

No equines were exported for slaughter for food in the past year.

EU Standing Veterinary Committee

Dr. Strang: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish the minutes of the meeting of the EU Standing Veterinary Committee of 9 and 10 October 1990. [37867]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 22 July 1996]: I have deposited in the Library of the House the report of this meeting as issued to member states by the EC Commission.

Beef

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the independence of the members of the EU Committee of Experts nominated to examine United Kingdom proposals on beef. [37487]

Mrs. Browning: The Government have no reason to question the independence of the members of the various EU expert scientific committees on BSE.

Isle of Wight (Coastal Erosion)

Mr. Barry Field: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what studies his Department has evaluated in respect of ways of stabilising the cliff erosion alongside the military road on the Isle of Wight; [36029]

(2) what representations he has received from the Isle of Wight council about funding coastal protection works to preserve the military road between Freshwater and Brightstone. [36027]

Mr. Boswell: It is the responsibility of the Isle of Wight council, as the coastal protection authority, rather than the Ministry, to commission and evaluate any such studies which they consider to be necessary. At this stage, the Ministry has received no formal representations from the council about funding works to protect the military road. If any works were designed solely to protect a road, funding would be the responsibility of the relevant highway authority and grant aid would not be available from this Department.

Live Domestic Animal Imports

Mr. Robert G. Hughes: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list those countries which currently accept imports from the United Kingdom of live domestic animals. [39704]

Mrs. Browning: So far as we are aware, the following third countries, territories, states and so on, are willing to accept cats and dogs exported from Great Britain, subject to certain animal health conditions being met.

Beef Ban

Mr. Alan W. Williams: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will hold discussions with the European Agriculture Commissioner and at the Council of Ministers to ensure that the restrictions that apply in Britain to abattoirs and rendering plants to ban the use of specified bovine offal and to ban the use of meat and bone meal in animal feeding are also applied in European countries. [39839]

Mrs. Browning: The European Commission has already produced proposals which, if adopted, would introduce a Community-wide ban in animal and human food of:

(a) any material from mammals which had not received ante-mortem inspection;

(b) the skill, vertebral column and spinal cord of cattle, sheep and goats aged over 12 months and the spleen of sheep and goats of any age.

Subject to detailed negotiation on the coverage of the proposal in relation to sheep and goats, the UK is supporting these proposals, which have been referred to the Commission's Scientific Veterinary Committee for further consideration.

As regards the use of meat and bonemeal, there has been a prohibition on the feeding of mammalian protein to ruminants throughout the EU since Commission decision 94/381 of 27 June 1994. There is an exemption for member states which can demonstrate that non-ruminant protein is processed separately from ruminant protein which we believe applies to Denmark which has plants dedicated to processing only porcine material.

Pesticides

Mr. Dafis: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the impact of climate changes in the United Kingdom on trends in the use of agricultural pesticides. [40070]

Mrs. Browning: There are many uncertainties in terms of the nature, extent and timing of climate change, the consequent changes in prevalence and behaviour of pests, weeds and diseases and the response of farmers to these changes. However, studies support the view that it is unlikely that climate change will lead to rapid change in the pattern or volume of pesticide use.

The Government continue to fund related research. The Government will ensure that the regulation of pesticides continues to protect people and the environment as pesticide usage alters in response to climate change and other developments.

Bovine Tuberculosis

Sir Michael Spicer: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he expects to receive the report from Professor John Krebs on the relationship between tuberculosis in cattle and diseased badgers. [40812]

Mrs. Browning: It is expected that Professor Krebs will report in the early summer of 1997.

Milk Quota Transfers

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what level of allowance the Intervention Board sets when (a) a lessee and (b) a transferee acquires a multi-lot milk quota transfer from the same (i) leasor and (ii) transferor; and if he will make a statement. [40893]

Mr. Baldry: The Intervention Board has informed milk producers, purchasers and quota agents of its intention to round calculations of permanent butterfat percentages in transfers or leases of milk quota to six places of decimal. This change will take effect from 1 April 1997. In the meantime, transfers and leases presented in multi-lotted form, which the board considers will have the effect of achieving a higher butterfat percentage than would have arisen from a single lot movement of the same quantity, will have the individual transactions rounded to six places of decimal at each stage and the final figure to two places. This measure is necessary to ensure that the butterfat level of the national quota is not distorted in a way which would leave the United Kingdom open to financial correction of its accounts by the European Commission.

Quarantine Regulations

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement regarding the Government's current policy towards quarantine regulations. [40898]

Mrs. Browning: The Government's first priority is public health and our current strict quarantine controls have ensured that the UK is rabies free. The Government are determined that should remain the case. The Government recognise that the current restrictions are onerous for some people and agree that they should be replaced if alternatives offering the same protection become available. The Government would, however, never support any change which increased the likelihood of rabies entering the UK.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many (a) written and (b) oral parliamentary questions have required correction by his Department in each of the past two years. [40627]

Mr. Boswell: This is a matter of public record.

Milk (Dioxins)

Mr. Denham: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food when he will publish the results of his Department's survey of dioxins in milk in the vicinity of Hampshire incinerators. [40873]

Mrs. Browning: A summary of the results currently available, including dioxins in milk from the vicinity of four incinerators in Hampshire, will be published in this month's issue of the MAFF/Department of Health food Safety–Information Bulletin.

Forestry Commission Land

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he will list the plots of Forestry Commission land in South Yorkshire which are (a) currently for sale and (b) being considered for sale; and in each case (i) what is the size of the plot, (ii) what consultation is planned in advance of the sale and (iii) how many representations he has received to date for and against the proposed sale; [40904]

(2) if he will list the plots of land which have been sold by the Forestry Commission in South Yorkshire in each of the last five years; and in each case (a) what was the size of the plot, (b) what consultation was made in advance of the sale and (c) how many representations he received (i) for and (ii) against the sale. [40905]

Mr. Boswell: The subjects of the questions relate to matters undertaken by Forest Enterprise. I have asked its chief executive, Mr. Gordon Cowie, to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Gordon M. Cowie to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 16 October 1996:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply to your Questions about Forestry Commission land in South Yorkshire.

In answer to your questions I enclose the following information:—

Annex A—a list of land sold since 1991

Annex B—a list of land currently for sale, either on the Open Market or by Negotiation, or currently being considered for sale.

All the properties listed were notified in the Estates Gazette, added to which the local authority have been advised of our intention to sell.

For Annex A, we have no detailed records of any representations.

For Annex B, there has only been one representation received to-date, and that is against the sale of Owston & Duck Holt Woods and Wadworth Woods. The matter is being dealt with separately via Ministerial Correspondence between yourself and the Rt Hon. John Gummer MP which has since been redirected to the Scottish Office to be replied to in due course.

Annex A: Forestry Commission cases sold in South Yorkshire from 1991 to date

Year	Name of property	Area (ha)
1991	Bagger Wood (pt)	0.1
	Broom Royd	8.3
	Crane Moor Wood	1.0
	Top Pit Wood	5.6
1992	Bagger Wood	26.8
	Lower Lee Wood	5.0
	Melton Wood	100.5

	Hugset Wood	34.0
	Millerhill/Wigfield Wood	5.0

Forestry Commission land currently being considered for sale in South Yorkshire

There are no cases being considered at present.

Thirty-month Scheme

Mr. Nicholas Baker: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what action he is taking to reduce the backlog of cull cattle under the 30-month scheme in Dorset. [41217]

Mr. Baldry: A telephone survey of producers carried out by my Department and those in Wales and Northern Ireland revealed a much larger backlog of animals awaiting entry to the 30-month scheme than we had previously estimated. It also showed that some areas, including the south-west of England, were much more seriously affected than others. The Intervention Board is taking urgent steps to increase the weekly slaughter from a level at the end of August of about 23,000 animals a week to 55,000 as quickly as possible. A new rendering mix will allow more animals to be slaughtered for a given amount of rendering capacity by consigning more material to cold store. More cold storage space is being contracted and the renderers are making significantly greater capacity available from next week. About 42,000 animals are expected to be slaughtered this week and the number is planned to increase to more than 50,000 next week. In increasing abattoir allocations, the Intervention Board is giving priority to those serving markets and producers in the particularly disadvantaged areas including those in Dorset.

Buildings and Premises (Expenditure)

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total expenditure on new buildings and premises by his Department and its agencies; and if he will indicate the square footage of new office space purchased or newly rented in each of the last five years. [41152]

Mr. Boswell: The information is as follows:

New buildings and premises (including specialised buildings)

1991–92	25,042,934
1992–93	20,303,048
1993–94	27,631,496
1994–95	42,176,564
1995–96	49,969,517

New office space

	sq.ft.
1991–92	17,190.10
1992–93	1,199.74
1993–94	10,579.35
1994–95	6,528.73
1995–96	18,445.76

Mr. Luff: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make it his policy to impose a reciprocal ban on the import of beef from any country that bans the import of British beef until such time as that country's Government can satisfy him that its cattle herds are entirely free of BSE. [23148]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 28 March 1996]: I very much regret that my hon. Friend has had to wait so long for a reply.

Member states of the EU have power to take interim protective measures under article 9 of Council directive 89/662/EEC pending the adoption of EU legislation where there is an outbreak of disease in the territory of another member state.

The United Kingdom has asked the Commission to adopt Community-wide controls on the removal of specified bovine offal from cattle carcasses.

All fresh meat imported into the UK, whether from other member states or third countries, must have been produced in accordance with harmonised Community rules laid down in Council directive 64/433/EEC. In addition, the Fresh Meat (Beef Controls) Regulations 1996 prohibit the sale for human consumption of all bovine meat derived from bovines which, at the time of slaughter, were more than 30 months old. This measure applies to all bovines slaughtered on or after 29 March 1996, whether in the UK or overseas, other than those born, reared and slaughtered in those third countries listed in the schedule to those regulations, and those aged between 30 and 42 months from herds registered under the beef assurance scheme. The list of countries is confined to those where the Government are satisfied we can import beef without risk.

The imposition by the UK of any unreasonable barriers to trade would be contrary to our World Trade Organisation commitments. It would not therefore be appropriate for us to take retaliatory action in respect of those countries which have imposed a ban on exports of beef from the UK in advance of the general prohibition on exports introduced under Commission decision 96/239/EC of 27 March.

Driftnets

Mr. Olner: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) if he intends to review the current maximum lengths of driftnets in respect of the finding of the recent report, cetacean by-catch in the UK tuna driftnets fishery 1995; and what proposals he has to ban the use of driftnets; [24842]

(2) what response he has made to the proposals for a ban on the use of driftnets from the European Parliament and the European Commission; and if he will make it his policy to support an EU-imposed ban on driftnetting; [24580]

(3) what assessment he has made of the scientific evidence for a ban on high seas driftnets. [24581]

Mr. Baldry [pursuant to his reply, 16 April 1996, c. 464-65]: The current maximum length of driftnets permitted on UK and other Community fishing vessels is set at 2.5 km in line with the precautionary approach and in response to United Nations resolutions. I am not aware of scientific evidence that justifies a different maximum length or a ban on the use of drift nets. I do not therefore support the European Commission's proposal but I do think that means should be sought to reduce by-catches of cetaceans in high seas driftnet fisheries.

Live Sheep Traders (Ireland)

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the current position in respect of the case brought by MAFF against Live Sheep Traders (Ireland); and what arrangements have been made by Mr. Roger Ernest Mills to pay the damages awarded to MAFF. [28438]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 7 May 1996]: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Nottingham, East (Mr. Heppell) on 15 February 1996, Official Report, column 675.

Animal Feed

Mr. Morley: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what regulatory monitoring there is in place to check on the antibiotic content of farm animal feed and its possible cumulative effect on the human consumer. [30724]

Mrs. Browning [holding answer 4 June 1996]: The use of additives in animal feedingstuffs is subject to directive 70/524/EEC, as amended. No feed additive may be authorised unless it satisfies criteria set out in the directive, including a requirement that, at the level permitted in feedstuffs, it does not adversely affect human or animal health or the environment.

Surveillance for the use of residues of veterinary medicines including antibiotics in food producing animals is carried out under the national surveillance scheme for residues in meat, which implements EC Directive 86/469. About 40,000 samples are collected in GB each year from randomly selected slaughterhouses by the Meat Hygiene Service and tested for the presence of these substances.

The results show that the incidence of residues found in 1995 was very low. Only 99 samples out of some 47,000 tested were above the action level. Because of the considerable margins of safety involved, none of these samples was likely to have posed a health risk to consumers. The results of this surveillance are published in the Veterinary Medicines Directorate's annual report on surveillance for veterinary residues and updated quarterly in its Medicines Act veterinary information newsletter, copies of which have been placed in the Library of the House.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

European Movement

Mr. Neil Hamilton: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what grants his Department made to the European Movement in each year since 1985 to 1996; and what plans he has to offer financial assistance in future years. [40080]

Mr. Page: The Department of Trade and Industry made a grant of £40,000 in 1989 towards an education campaign on the single market. A further £32,000 was granted in 1990 and approximately £20,000 in 1991.

The Department has no plans to offer financial assistance to the European Movement in future years.

Radio Spectrum

Mr. Timms: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what progress his Department has made in increasing co-operation with Europe over the management and distribution of the radio spectrum. [40316]

Mr. Ian Taylor: My Department continues to participate actively in all areas of European radio spectrum management in order to provide the maximum opportunities and benefits for UK manufacturers, operators and users through, in particular, the harmonisation of European radio usage. My officials have led in many European developments including the formation of the European Radiocommunications Committee of CEPT, the Conference of European Posts and Telecommunications administrations, and in the current discussions on the future management of the radio spectrum arising from our White Paper, Cm 3252, published last June.

Additionally, on 27 September, the EU Telecommunications Council reached political agreement on a proposed decision to facilitate the introduction of satellite personal communications services. The appropriate framework is to be developed by CEPT.

Internet (Ethical Issues)

Mr. Timms: To ask the President of the Board of Trade when the final report of the Government's study into ethical issues and the Internet will be published and placed in the Library. [40344]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The CCTA work on ethical issues and the Internet provides an input to the relevant Departments as they take forward their various responsibilities in this area. The CCTA itself has no policy responsibility in this field.

The work will not be made more widely available, because it does not reflect a full account of the Government's policies in this area and was a contribution to advice to Ministers. The Government's considered views on the subject were set out in my speech to the Internet Services Providers Association on May 21, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House. In support of these policies, we have worked with the Internet industry, the Home Office and the police, towards the agreement of industry proposals—"R^3 Safety-Net"—to combat the problems of illegal material on the Internet. Copies of the industry proposals were distributed to the Trade and Industry Select Committee, and I have also deposited copies in the Library of the House.

British Energy

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many shares in British Energy are held by Her Majesty's Government following privatisation. [40501]

Mr. Page: Approximately 85.9 million shares in British Energy plc are presently held by the Government.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the factors underlying the decision not to sell 12.3 per cent. of British Energy shares during the privatisation of the company. [40503]

Mr. Page: In line with previous privatisations, and as set out in detail in the British Energy share offer prospectus, up to 90 million shares in British Energy plc were retained by the Secretary of State at the time of the offer to cover the over-allotment option granted to BZW. Following settlement of that option on 13 August, the Secretary of State retained approximately 85.9 million shares, of which approximately 5 million represent shares retained to satisfy potential entitlements to bonus shares under the UK public offer.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what percentage and cash value of the shares in British Energy remain held on behalf of the Government; and if he will make a statement. [40709]

Mr. Page: Up to 90 million shares were retained at the time of the share offer to cover the over-allotment option granted to BZW. Following settlement of that option on 13 August, the Secretary of State retained approximately 85.9 million shares, of which approximately 5 million shares are retained to cover potential entitlements to bonus shares under the UK public offer. The shares retained by the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry on behalf of the Government represent approximately 12⅓ per cent. of the total shares.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what discussions he has had, or his officials have had, regarding (a) reviewing the contributions made by British Energy to the segregated fund and (b) assessing British Energy's ability to meet its operational liabilities; and what staff and mechanisms are to be deployed to monitor (a) and (b) above. [40727]

Mr. Page: British Energy's contributions to the segregated fund are determined by British Energy and the Nuclear Generation Decommissioning Fund Ltd., owned by the trustees of an independent trust, under the terms of the contractual arrangements between them. It is for British Energy to deal with its operational liabilities.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what has been the total sum raised for the Exchequer by the sale of British Energy to date; and what further moneys are forecasted. [40721]

Mr. Page: Proceeds from the British Energy Share Offer to date have been £630 million from the first instalment paid for the shares sold and £60 million of debt repayment. A further £100 million of debt is expected to be repayed later in this financial year. In the financial year 1997–98, it is anticipated that the proceeds from payment of the second instalment on the shares sold will be £590 million. British Energy will continue to have a debt to the Government, in the form of bonds to the value of £440 million, and the Government hold shares in British Energy which have a value of about £183 million at the issue price. In addition, liabilities of £3.7 billion have been transferred to the private sector.

Fissile Materials (Verification)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, pursuant to part 2(3) of his Department's management information system for Ministers—MINIS—return, what proposals he has to ensure that the verification regime established for the fissile materials cut-off convention is proportionate to the security gains and that the United Kingdom contribution to the costs is not disproportionate. [40508]

Mr. Nelson: We are preparing for prospective negotiations on a fissile material cut-off treaty. A ban on the future production of fissile material for nuclear weapons or other nuclear explosive devices would be a significant contribution to non-proliferation and international security, provided that it enjoyed wide support from countries including those which have not yet signed the nuclear non-proliferation treaty. The nature and scope of the proposed FMCT and its associated verification regime have still to be negotiated.

National Grid

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of trade what assessment he has made of the effect on safety of the national grids of the implementation of the recommendation by the electricity regulator made on 13 August, in respect of reduction in transmission costs charged by the National Grid. [40502]

Mr. Page: The Director General of Electricity Supply issued his fourth consultation document of the review of transmission price controls on 13 August. On 3 October he issued his final proposals which included some modifications. The Director General of Electricity Supply, in making his final proposals, was required to have regard to his statutory duties. These include, among other duties, exercising his functions in a way best calculated to protect the public from dangers arising from the transmission of electricity, and to secure that National Grid is able to finance the carrying on of its licensed activities. The National Grid is required to operate its transmission system in accordance with regulations relating to safety which are made under part 1 of the Electricity Act 1989.

Trade Mission (China)

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade who accompanied him on his recent trade mission to China; what cities were visited; what was the outcome of the visit; and if he will make a statement. [40453]

Mr. Nelson: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade visited Dalian and Beijing during his recent visit to China. In Dalian he promoted the opportunities for British business there and in particular, supported the close links between Dalian and the city of Glasgow with which it is twinned. In Dalian, my right hon. Friend was accompanied by: the Lord Provost and representatives of Glasgow city council; Bass International Brewers; China Britain Trade Group (Scotland); Commercial Union Assurance Co. plc; GEC Alsthom; Ian Dickson Travel Service; Koo and Partners; Lawrence Graham; Prudential Corporation Asia Ltd.; Robert Flemming and Co. Ltd.; Robert Gordon University; Royal and Sun Alliance Group plc; Siemens Traffic Controls; Silleck Mouldings (Scotland) Ltd.; Standard Chartered Bank; and Strachan and Henshaw.

In Beijing, my right hon. Friend's discussions with senior Chinese leaders continued the series of high-level bilateral exchanges which have promoted closer two way business relations. He was accompanied in Beijing by senior representatives from: British Petroleum Co. plc.; Commercial Union Assurance Plc; Eagle Star Asia; General Accident plc; Kvaerner Corporate Development Ltd; Lucas Braking Systems; Prudential Corporation Asia Ltd.; Robert Fleming and Co. Ltd.; Rolls Royce plc; Royal and Sun Alliance Insurance Group Plc; Shell Transport and Trading Co.; Standard Chartered Bank; Varity Perkins; and Zeneca China Ltd.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what consultations his Departments held about the business visit to China by Prince Michael of Kent in September; what was the nature of this visit; how its related to the trade mission which he led to China; and if he will make a statement. [40454]

Mr. Nelson: The Department of Trade and Industry was not involved in the arrangements for Prince Michael of Kent's visit to China in September. This was a business trip by private companies, unrelated to my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade's official visit to China in the same month.

Nuclear Reprocessing

Mr. Meacher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade which countries with which British Nuclear Fuels has reprocessing contracts have agreed to accept the return of reprocessing waste using the substitution formula developed since 2 May 1986. [40778]

Mr. Page: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Newport, West (Mr. Flynn) on 20 February 1995, Official Report, columns 34–35.

Nuclear Energy

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what were the reasons for, and the amounts of, increased spending on back-end fuel costs in years 1994–95 and 1995–96 by Nuclear Electric and British Nuclear Fuels. [40724]

Mr. Page: Increased spending by Nuclear Electric on back-end fuel costs in 1994–95 and 1995–96 included partial payments of outstanding moneys due to BNFL from the period between 1989 when contract negotiations began until 1995, when fixed price contracts between Nuclear Electric and BNFL were finalised. The exact value of these payments is a commercial matter for the companies concerned.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the difference in the discounted advanced gas-cooled reactor and pressurised water reactor liabilities between the figures announced in (a) February and (b) British Energy's prospectus. [40722]

Mr. Page: The difference between the figures for discounted AGR and PWR liabilities discussed in February in, for example, submissions to the Trade and Industry Committee and the figures published in the prospectus is mainly attributable to the change in the discount rate from 2 per cent. to 3 per cent.

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on current Government policy on the time scale for decommissioning and dismantling nuclear power stations. [40725]

Mr. Page: Government policy on the decommissioning of nuclear power stations is set out in paragraphs 124 to 127 of last year's final conclusions of the "Review of Radioactive Waste Management Policy", Cm 2919, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the result of the nuclear installations inspectorate investigations into the cause of spent fuel damage in advanced gas-cooled reactors at (a) Hunterston, (b) Hinkley Point, (c) Torness, (d) Heysham (i) 1 and (ii) 2 and (e) Hartlepool; and if he will make a statement. [41035]

Mr. Page: I understand that Nuclear Electric and Scottish Nuclear are currently carrying out an investigation into the causes and implications of a small amount of unexpected wear to the external ribbing of some fuel pins recently discharged from some AGR nuclear power stations. The Health and Safety Executive's nuclear installations inspectorate, which is closely monitoring this investigation, is satisfied that the unexpected wear raises no immediate safety concerns and that the installations can continue to operate.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the arrangements for payment of the AGR reprocessing costs. [40838]

Mr. Page: This is a commercial matter between British Energy and BNFL.

Magnox

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the increase in the undiscounted Magnox liabilities between the figures given in evidence to the Trade and Industry Select Committee and the figure accepted in Magnox's recent report and accounts. [40723]

Mr. Page: The figures for nuclear liabilities published by the Trade and Industry Committee were for the year ending 31 March 1995. The detailed movements in Magnox Electric's undiscounted liabilities in the year ending 31 March 1996 are set out in the table on page 6 of Magnox Electric's report and accounts for that year. The main changes concerned recognition of inflation and the acquisition of Hunterston A.

Inward Investment

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what have been the 10 inward investment decisions of most financial value since January 1993; which companies were concerned; where the inward investment is to be made; and what is its value. [40762]

Mr. Greg Knight: According to figures notified to my Department's Invest in Britain Bureau, since January 1993, the 10 inward investment decisions of most financial value are as follows:

	Year	Company	Country	£'s	Investment to be made
1	1996	Hyundai	Korea	2.4 billion	Scotland
2	1996	LG	Korea	1.7 billion	Wales
3	1995	Siemens	Germany	1.1 billion	North-east
4	1995	Fujitsu	Japan	816 million	North-east
5	1994	Toyota	Japan	800 million	East Midlands
6	1996	UPS	USA	£784 million	East Midlands
7	1994	NEC	Japan	£530 million	Scotland
8	1994	Samsung	Korea	£450 million	North-east
9	1995	Jaguar	USA	£370 million	West Midlands
10	1994	Newport Wafer FAB	Hong Kong	£340 million	Wales

Regional Services

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what plans he has to transfer the responsibility for designing and delivering regional services currently provided by Government Departments or regional offices to business-led partnerships between training and enterprise councils and business links. [40756]

Mr. Page: The Government's new approach to support for business, including the delegation of design and delivery of such support to business-led partnerships at local and sectoral level, was set out in the replies given yesterday by my right hon. Friend the Deputy Prime Minister to my hon. Friend the Member for East Hampshire (Mr. Mates) and my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade to my hon. Friend the Member for Eastbourne (Mr. Waterson).

Social Chapter

Mr. Byers: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many copies of "The Social Chapter-British and Continental Approaches" have been printed; and what is the total cost including research, printing and distribution. [40761]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Forty thousand copies of the booklet have been printed. It is planned that a smaller number of copies will be produced in French, German, Italian and Spanish for distribution in other EU member states.

The text was prepared internally, so no external costs for research were incurred. It is not possible to quantify the staff time involved. The final cost of design, printing and distribution is expected to be in the region of £25,000.

Porterbook Leasing

Mr. Dykes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what conclusions he has reached in his discussions with (a) the Rail Regulator and (b) the Department of Trade and Industry in respect of a referral of the proposed takeover of Porterbook Leasing plc by the Stagecoach Group plc and its subsidiaries. [40990]

Mr. John M. Taylor: My right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade is considering the advice received from the Director General of Fair Trading on this takeover under the merger provisions of the Fair Trading Act 1973. He will announce his decisions in due course on whether or not to refer it to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission.

Promotional Expenditure

Mr. Flynn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how much his Department has spent on (a) publicity, (b) promotion and (c) hospitality in each of the last six years. [40611]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Expenditure on publicity and promotions from centrally managed budgets and hospitality has been as follows:

£000

	Publicity and promotions	Hospitality
1990–91	15,869	[1]392
1991–92	10,203	535
1992–93	9,923	548
1993–94	8,468	690
1994–95	8,112	712
1995–96	9,211	[2]670

[1] Information not readily available for Companies House prior to October 1991.

[2] Work previously carried out by the Accounts Services Agency and National Physical Laboratory was contracted out on 1 April and 1 October 1995 respectively. The National Engineering Laboratory and Laboratory of the Government Chemist were privatised on 31 October 1995 and 31 March 1996 respectively. Information for the National Engineering Laboratory and the Laboratory of the Government Chemist is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many answers to (a) written and (b) oral parliamentary questions have required correction by his Department in each of the past two years. [40642]

Mr. John M. Taylor: This is a matter of public record.

Steel Industry

Mr. Hardy: to ask the President of the Board of Trade what action he is taking to ensure that the British steel industry does not face unfair competition within the European Union; and what steps are being taken in regard to subsidies of production by (a) national and (b) regional governments in Belgium. [40074]

Mr. Greg Knight: The Government have made their opposition to illegal subsidies to EU steel producers very clear to both the Commission and other member states. The UK Steel Subsidies Monitoring Committee has also played a part in maintaining the pressure to end these subsidies. Following a complaint from the UK and others, the Commission recently opened an investigation into the state aid element of the Forges de Clabecq rescue package. If a British company is able to provide evidence of illegal subsidies to other steel producers, we will pursue the matter vigorously with the Commission.

Pay Rates

Mr. Hardy: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what action he is taking to persuade employers to increase rates of pay. [40145]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Pay is a matter to be resolved by the employer and employees concerned in light of local circumstances, without Government intervention. The Government's role is to create the conditions for a growing economy and to remove barriers to employment. Our policy of keeping inflation and interest rates at low levels is aimed at securing an improved standard of living for all. Since 1979, pay at all levels has increased in real terms.

Industrial Tribunals

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will publish industrial tribunal statistics for 1994–95, indicating which proportion of applications to industrial tribunals come from companies which employ fewer than 24 people, broken down by jurisdiction in the same format as those made available for 1993–94. [41129]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Industrial tribunal statistics for 1994–95, in the same format as those previously made available for 1993–94, were published in the July 1996 issue of "Labour Market Trends". The industrial tribunals do not collect information on the number of people employed by companies involved in cases before them.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what statistical evidence was supplied by his Department to the deregulation task force on industrial tribunal cases for their 1995–96 report; and if he will publish this evidence. [41130]

Mr. Taylor: The information on industrial tribunal performance and work load supplied to the deregulation task force was that published in departmental reports, the Green Paper "Resolving Employment Rights Disputes: Options for Reform" and "Labour Market Trends". In addition, in the first three months of this year the tribunals have met their main performance target of bringing 80 per cent. of cases to a first hearing within 26 weeks of the date of registration.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what assessment he has made of the advantage of the proposal made by the Trades Union Congress in the consultation on the draft Employment Rights (Dispute Resolution) Bill to allow directions hearings on test cases where there are multiple applications to industrial tribunals. [41131]

Mr. Taylor: The rules of procedure already allow the tribunal judiciary to hold directions hearings on test cases in multiple applications. However, I shall consult both presidents of the industrial tribunals about the TUC proposals to see whether any changes in the rules are appropriate.

Lead Imports

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the amount of lead imported into the United Kingdom in each of the last five years. [41124]

Mr. Page: The information is published by HM Customs and Excise in "Overseas Trade Statistics of the United Kingdom", which is available in the Library of the House.

Laboratory of the Government Chemist

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he has anything further to add to the answer given on 2 April, Official Report, column 149, regarding the sale of the Laboratory of the Government Chemist. [41233]

Mr. Ian Taylor: In my reply to the hon. Member for Birmingham, Hall Green (Mr. Hargreaves) of 2 April about the completion of the sale of the Laboratory of the Government Chemist, I explained that the consideration—a payment to the Department of £360,000—was to be adjusted in the light of the level of net current assets at completion. The closing accounts for LGC in its last year as an executive agency of the Department have been laid before Parliament today. The adjustment to the sale consideration will be £729,000, resulting in a net payment by the Department to the purchaser of £369,000.

The payment arises principally because LGC's trading performance was not as good as expected and because the Department benefited from advance receipts for work which LGC would have to undertake after the sale. The payment by the Department takes account of LGC's purchase of employee debts. The fact that the sale of LGC represented value for money is not affected by this payment because changes to the level of net current assets and the purchase of employee debts have an equal impact on the benchmark.

Allied Medicare Ltd.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his current estimate of the publication date of the investigation into Allied Medicare Ltd.'s discharge of its functions as a registered employment agency, pursuant to the Huw Evans case. [40752]

Mr. John M. Taylor: The information obtained by my Department during its investigation under the Employment Agencies Act 1973 into the supply of Mr. Huw Evans as a nursing auxiliary by Allied Medicare Ltd. cannot be disclosed without the consent of the persons concerned in consequence of section 9(4)(a) of the Act. A copy of my letter of 15 October 1996 to the hon. Gentleman about this matter is being placed in the Library of the House. The licensing of agencies under the Employment Agencies Act 1973 ceased on 3 January 1995. Agencies supplying registered nurses and certain other persons continue to be licensed by local authorities under the Nurses Agency Act 1957.

Import and Export Control Act 1990

Ms Quin: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on his Department's current policy towards the replacement of the Import and Export Control Act 1990. [41072]

Mr. Nelson: The consultation document, "Strategic Export Controls", Cm 3349, presented to Parliament in July 1996 sought views on whether there should be new primary export control legislation. When responses to that document have been fully considered, I shall inform Parliament of my conclusions.

Internet

Mr. Spellar: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is his Department's estimate of the number of households in the UK connected to the Internet. [40938]

Mr. Ian Taylor: Six hundred and seventy-six thousand. This is an 87 per cent. increase on the 1995 figure, 362,000.

British Coal Land

Mr. Tipping: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what recent discussions he has had with the chairman of British Coal about the transfer of land to English Partnerships; if he will list the sites involved; if he will account for delays in the transfer of this land; and when he estimates the transfer will be concluded. [40764]

Mr. Page: The disposal of British Coal property is a matter for the corporation. My Department maintains regular contact with British Coal as discussions on this matter continue.

British Coal Enterprise

Mr. Tipping: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what sums were received in respect to the (a) loan, (b) training and (c) workshop elements of British Coal Enterprise. [40430]

Mr. Page: The sale of British Coal Enterprise is a matter for British Coal. I understand that the corporation has not yet completed the sale of all of the activities of BCE.

Atolls (Radioactivity)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the President of the Board of Trade pursuant to his answer of 2 May, Official Report, column 601, if he will make a statement on the work of the task groups and the working groups established by the International Atomic Energy Authority to assess the radiological situation of the atolls of Iluvovou and Fangataufa. [40379]

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 14 October 1996]: In a report to the recent International Atomic Energy Agency general conference, the secretariat of the agency gave details to member states of the progress made so far in the study of the radiological situation at the atolls of Mururoa and Fangataufa. I have instructed that a copy of this report be placed in the Libraries of the House.

The report gives details of the participation of United Kingdom experts mentioned in my answer of 3 April to the hon. Member, Official Report, columns 309–10.

The report of the international advisory committee is expected in early 1998.

Sellafield

Mr. Meacher: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what representations he has received from the United States Government in respect of making use of spare production capacity at the mixed oxide plutonium fuel production plant at Sellafield for the recycling of plutonium form dismantled nuclear warheads; and what new authorisations would be required for such recycling. [40445]

Mr. Page [holding answer 14 October 1996]: None. It is not possible to comment in detail on what authorisations might be necessary were any such contacts to be contemplated. However, British Nuclear Fuels did wish to conclude a contract for the fabrication of MOX fuel from weapons grade plutonium, then an appropriate revision to the Sellafield site safety case would be required, and would need to be agreed with the regulator, the Health and Safety Executive's nuclear installations inspectorate.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on the implications for the DRAWMOPS—decommissioning and waste management operational programmes—arrangements for nuclear waste management of the proposals for privatisation of the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority. [40513]

Mr. Page [holding answer 14 October 1996]: The separation of the science and engineering services business, AEA-Technology, from UKAEA and its subsequent privatisation has no implications for DRAWMOPS nuclear waste management arrangements. DRAWMOPS will remain under the direct control of the UKAEA. There are no plans to privatise the residual UKAEA.

Cambertown Ltd.

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the nature of the arrangement his Department has with Cambertown Ltd. concerning the distribution of letters to hon. Members; what is the cost of the contract; and if he will make a statement. [40680]

Mr. John M. Taylor: My Department makes arrangements from time to time with a number of companies, including Cambertown Ltd. for the storage and distribution of specific Government publications. The detailed costs of these arrangements are commercially confidential.

Hon. Members are sometimes included in the distribution of such publications, but there is no separate arrangement for this.

Departmental Staff (Energy Matters)

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade how many staff in his Department spend 50 per cent. or more of their time on energy-related matters; and how many of them work on press and publicity and public relations. [41288]

Mr. Page: Within the Department I estimate that there are 412 staff spending 50 per cent. or more of their time on energy-related matters, including those staff employed in the oil and gas projects and supplies office. Six of these staff work on publicity, press and other media relations activity.

Coal Stockpiles

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what tonnages of stockpiled coal are currently held by power generators in England, Scotland and Wales; and what assessment he has made of the likelihood of their meeting demand over the next six months. [41290]

Mr. Page: Latest available data are for the end of July 1996 when electricity generators in the United Kingdom held 7.7 million tonnes of coal in stock. Separate figures for England, Scotland, and Wales are not available.

I expect stocks to be adequate to maintain generation at coal-fired stations over the next six months.

Link Programmes

Mr. Martyn Jones: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what priorities to improve competitiveness have been revealed since March 1995 as a result of the link programmes on (a) genetic and environmental interactions in health, (b) waste minimisation through recycling, reuse and recovery in industry, (c) competitive industrial materials from non-food crops, (d) sustainable livestock production and (e) integrated approaches to healthy aging. [41226]

Mr. Ian Taylor: These programmes are all addressing priorities identified by technology foresight panels. However, collaborative research projects funded through these programmes are only just beginning. These and subsequent projects will provide for research partnerships between companies and the science and engineering base, lasting several years. Based on experience from earlier Link programmes, they can be expected to take forward the development of new technology in high priority areas.

There are currently 15 Link programmes addressing foresight priorities and there has been extensive dissemination of information about each programme, with encouragement given to industry—including to small and medium-sized companies—to develop research partnerships with academic institutions, across a range of sectors.

Companies which become involved in the programmes the hon. Gentleman mentions can be expected to improve their competitiveness by exploiting the outcomes of their collaborative research projects in a range of markets.

New Buildings and Premises

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what was the total expenditure on new buildings and premises by his Department and its agencies; and if he will indicate the square footage of new office space purchased or newly rented in each of the last five years. [41149]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Within my Department, management of property is delegated to a series of property centres to maximise synergy with business operation. The DTI headquarters property centre has acquired only one new building over the past five years. To replace premises on which the lease had expired, we acquired in March 1995 about the same amount of new space—20,094 sq.ft.—at a total annual cost of £461,000.

I have asked the chief executives of the DTI's executive agencies to respond direct to the hon. Member.

Combined Heat and Power

Mr. Battle: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what capacity of electricity used in his Department's buildings is generated in a combined heat and power plant; and what plans he has to increase that capacity. [41313]

Mr. John M. Taylor: Nil. My Department keeps under review the opportunities for using combined heat and power, but currently there are no firm plans to install such a system in our buildings.

Dowdon and Fox Cover Enterprise Zones

Mr. Cummings: To ask the President of the Board of Trade if he will make a statement on progress made in the transfer of Dowdon and Fox Cover enterprise zones to English Partnerships. [41223]

Sir Paul Beresford: I have been asked to reply.

I hope that an announcement can be made shortly.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the President of the Board of Trade, what are his latest estimates of the expenditure on all external consultants, including management consultants, for each year since 1992, in 1996 prices, for his Department and its agencies; and what are the quantified annual cost savings which such expenditure has resulted in. [41188]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

ATTORNEY GENERAL

Butte Mining and Plateau Mining

Mr. Byers: To ask the Attorney-General (1) on what dates since January 1990 the Serious Fraud Office sent letters to the Department of Trade and Industry concerning the activities of (a) Butte Mining and (b) Plateau Mining; [40757]

(2) at what date the Serious Fraud Office began its investigation into (a) Butte Mining and (b) Plateau Mining; when the investigations were completed; what action was subsequently taken; and if he will make a statement. [40758]

The Attorney-General: The Serious Fraud Office commenced investigation into the affairs of Richmond Oil and Gas plc on 29 June 1992. Matters emerging during that investigation caused the Serious Fraud Office to begin an investigation into Butte Mining plc on 9 September 1993. Between May 1995 and March 1996 four people were charged with conspiracies to defraud and the case is awaiting trial before the central criminal court.

During the course of its investigations, the Serious Fraud Office liaises as necessary with the Department of Trade and Industry. It is my practice not to give details of steps taken in the course of individual criminal investigations.

The Serious Fraud Office has not conducted an investigation into the affairs of Plateau Mining.

Promotional Expenditure

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Attorney-General how much his Department has spent on (a) publicity, (b) promotion and (c) hospitality in each of the last six years. [40617]

The Attorney-General: The amounts spent on publicity, promotion and hospitality in the departments and agencies for which I am responsible are set out in the following tables. Information for the Treasury Solicitor's Department, lawyers management unit and the legal secretariat to the Law Officers for financial years before 1993–94 could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. It is not possible to distinguish between expenditure on publicity and promotion.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Attorney-General how many (a) written and (b) oral parliamentary questions have required correction by his Department in each of the past two years. [40635]

The Attorney-General: This is a matter of public record.

"Barbecue in Rostock"

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Attorney-General what consideration has been given to prosecuting the band No Remorse, and the producers and distributors of the CD "Barbecue in Rostock"; and if he will make a statement. [41065]

The Attorney-General: I understand that Gwent police are conducting an investigation into the production of a compact disk by a band calling themselves No Remorse during which they have sought legal advice from the Crown Prosecution Service. When the investigation has been completed, it is expected that the police will submit a file of evidence to the Crown Prosecution Service for advice as to whether criminal proceedings should be instituted.

Combined Heat and Power

Mr. Battle: To ask the Attorney-General what capacity of electricity used in his Department's buildings is generated in a combined heat and power plant; and what plans he has to increase that capacity. [41324]

The Solicitor-General: The departments and agencies for which my right hon. and learned Friend is responsible have no electricity generating plant. The question of energy sourcing is kept under review.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Terrorist Organisation (Funding)

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many bank accounts have been investigated under anti-terrorist legislation in each of the last five years. [40665]

Sir John Wheeler: It is policy not to comment in detail on these matters. I can, however, assure the hon. Gentleman that the legislation is vigorously applied and used to good effect.

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what plans he has to improve legislation in respect of funding of terrorist organisations. [40664]

Sir John Wheeler: The Proceeds of Crime (Northern Ireland) Order 1996, which came into force on 26 August, incorporates, builds upon and extends the terrorist finance provisions which previously existed in the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act 1991 and would have been used to good effect against terrorist racketeers. The order strengthens and improves the measures available to confiscate the proceeds of drug trafficking and other serious crime, much of which is believed to be terrorist linked.

The new powers extend at least as wide as the Emergency Provisions Act terrorist finance investigation and confiscation powers which they replace and are capable of being used to assist in tracing the ill-gotten gains of all racketeers, whether terrorists or not.

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the operation of legislation in respect of the funding of terrorist organisations. [40662]

Sir John Wheeler: The Government and the police recognise the importance of illegal finance and in the fight against terrorism a range of measures has been taken to counter it. The police have established specialist resources which have successfully investigated a wide variety of illegal terrorist funding activities including exploitation of social clubs to raise money through fraud and scams, extortion rackets, counterfeiting and tax exemption fraud.

The Government have taken measures to counter terrorist finance in Northern Ireland and these provisions are contained in the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1989 and the Proceeds of Crime (Northern Ireland) Order 1996.

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people have been charged under funding of terrorist organisations legislation. [40663]

Sir John Wheeler: The number of persons against whom proceedings have commenced for offences contrary to sections 9 to 11 of the Prevention of Terrorism (Temporary Provisions) Act 1989, between 1991 and 1995 was 217; but there have been few convictions for contravention of part III of the Act primarily because of the lack of evidence to prove a terrorist link to finance offences. However, the absence of convictions is not a true indicator of the value of the legislative provisions. The existence of the powers deters the terrorists; it causes them unease and it disrupts their activities.

Marches

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what discussions he had concerning the re-routing of the marches in the Lower Ormeau road on 9 August and in Derry on 10 September with the local residents and marchers. [40267]

Sir John Wheeler: None. The routing of parades is primarily a matter for the Chief Constable. The RUC met on many occasions with local residents and marchers to discuss individual parades. On occasions, officials also met with these groups. The RUC however, have no records on the dates given of parades at these locations.

Plastic Baton Rounds

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many people were injured by plastic baton rounds in Derry from 11 to 14 July; and what was the nature of the injuries. [40268]

Sir John Wheeler: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Altnegelion Hospital (Incident)

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will establish a public inquiry into the events involving the Royal Ulster Constabulary in Altnegelion hospital on 12 July. [40269]

Sir John Wheeler: I have no plans to establish an inquiry, but the House may wish to note that one complaint has arisen out of this incident and is currently under investigation by the RUC.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many answers to (a) written and (b) oral parliamentary questions have required correction by his Department in each of the past two years. [40638]

Sir John Wheeler: This is a matter of public record.

Promotional Expenditure

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how much his Department has spent on (a) publicity, (b) promotion, and (c) hospitality in each of the last six years. [40613]

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested for the Northern Ireland Office and Northern Ireland Departments is listed.

£ thousand

	Publicity and promotion[1,2]	Hospitality
1990–91	8,369	728
1991–92	10,604	807
1992–93	9,564	872
1993–94	8,162	921
1994–95	8,397	832
1995–96	10,953	564

[1] To identify separately publicity and promotion costs would incur disproportionate cost.

[2] The Department of Agriculture is excluded as it could provide figures only at disproportionate cost.

TRANSPORT

Rail Franchise

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those rail franchises which have been re-sold since initial privatisation together with their original purchase price and subsequent selling price. [40682]

Mr. Watts: None of the franchises so far sold to the private sector has been re-sold.

Railway Claims Ltd.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will list the total amounts paid by Railways Claims Ltd. to claimants since its creation; [40692]

(2) how many claims have been received by Railways Claims Ltd., for each year since its creation. [40691]

Mr. Watts: This is a matter for the board of Railway Claims Ltd.

Coastguard

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list by coastguard station the number of additional staff provided as a result of the introduction of the 2182 Khz system. [39478]

Mr. Bowis: As a result of the introduction of monitoring the 2182 Khz system by Coastguard, the agency agreed that an additional auxiliary operations room assistant should be made available to assist in maintaining the distress watch at the 10 designated 2,182 stations. This is in addition to the normal 24-hour watchkeeping complements at each rescue centre and is a temporary arrangement pending the introduction of coastguard watchkeeping assistants. At some of these stations it has proved difficult to find the additional auxiliary ORAs from the pool of trained auxiliaries locally, but this has not affected the ability to respond to 2182 Khz distress calls.

Driver Training

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what have been the quarterly totals of new car drivers completing pass plus courses since their introduction; and what percentage of the numbers passing the driving test take such courses. [40444]

Mr. Bowis: Pass plus was launched on 6 February 1995. Up to the end of September, completion certificates have been issued to 18,823 successful participants. This represents about 2 per cent. of successful test candidates. The quarterly figures are:

	Number of certificates issued
1995
January to March	976
April to June	3,659
July to September	3,149
October to December	2,873

1996
January to March	2,817
April to June	2,831
July to September	2,518

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of state for Transport how many answers to (a) written and (b) oral parliamentary questions have required correction by his Department in each of the past two years. [40643]

Mr. Bowis: This is a matter of public record.

West Coast Main Line

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 6 March to the hon. Member for Cunninghame, North (Mr. Wilson), Official Report, column 211, if he will instruct Railtrack to hold details of past speed restrictions centrally. [40908]

Mr. Watts: No.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the number of speed restrictions currently in operation on the west coast main line, together with the reason for the restriction. [40710]

Mr. Watts: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 6 March, Official Report, column 211. This is an operational matter for Railtrack and any update should be sought from it.

Rail (Highlands)

Mr. Charles Kennedy: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will require Railtrack to carry out a comprehensive review of unmanned level crossings and automatic half-barriers in the highland rail network; and if he will make a statement. [40737]

Mr. Watts: No. Level crossing protection is a matter for Railtrack, subject to statutory approval by the Health and Safety Executive on behalf of the Secretary of State.

Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement on the level of (a) security and (b) accuracy of the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Agency's computer database. [40432]

Mr. Bowis: The Driver and Licensing Agency has a computer database security policy which meets Government requirements. The controls in place fully recognise the sensitivities of the date held.

The agency meets its targets of between 96 per cent. and 98 per cent. accuracy of data input to the driver and vehicle registers.

The principal cause of inaccuracy in the DVLA databases is the failure of those who change their name or address, or buy or sell vehicles, to notify the agency promptly. New and improved vehicle registration procedures to be introduced in 1997 will require the buyer and seller to notify DVLA at the same time on the same form.

Air Traffic Control

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimate he has made of the likely number of jobs to be created as a result of the establishment of a second air traffic control centre in Scotland. [40695]

Mr. Bowis: The proposed construction of the new Scottish centre and the replacement of the Oceanic flight data processing system, as envisaged in the invitation to tender of autumn 1995, would result in staff levels at Prestwick being maintained at approximately their current levels.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when he expects to make an announcement of the future privatisation of the National Air Traffic Service and on the future of the second air traffic control centre in Scotland. [40694]

Mr. Bowis: I refer the hon. Member to my right hon. Friend's reply of 29 November 1995, Official Report, columns 783-84, to the hon. Member for Wyre (Mr. Mans). The timetable for privatisation has not yet been decided.

The future of the proposed air traffic control centre in Scotland is the subject of a review by the Civil Aviation Authority and I expect recommendations emerging from the review to be presented to Ministers later this year.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the occasions over the last 12 months when the air traffic control centre covering the United Kingdom has failed, the length of time the system failed and the estimated number of flights affected. [40689]

Mr. Bowis: The air traffic control centres at West Drayton and Prestwick cover the UK flight information regions. Over the last 12 months there have been a total of five failures resulting in delays to aircraft as follows:

Prestwick (Oceanic Data Processing System)

23 August 1996—at 1005 with delays to aircraft peaking at over 2 hours.

12 September 1996— at 1110 with 40 aircraft delayed in excess of 1 hour.

West Drayton (Host Computer System)

6 October 1995—at 0810—flow restrictions introduced.

5 November 1995—at 1221 resulting in 50 minute outbound delays from Heathrow.

25 January 1996—at 1520—flow restrictions imposed.

New En Route Centre

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list for each contractor currently employed on the NERC project the number of staff involved and the number of hours of overtime worked for each of the last 12 months. [40686]

Mr. Bowis: Lockheed Martin is the prime contractor for the provision of operational software for the new en route centre at Swanwick. It has employed roughly 400 full-time staff on the project throughout the last 12 months. The contract with Lockheed Martin is on a fixed-price basis and no additional overtime costs have therefore been borne by the Civil Aviation Authority.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the number of overtime hours worked by Civil Aviation Authority or National Air Traffic Services staff involved on the NERC project for each of the last 12 months. [40687]

Mr. Bowis: I have asked the chairman of the Civil Aviation Authority to write to the hon. Member.

Roads Programme

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if the contractor building the road is liable for damages, should an accident occur on a design, build, finance and operate system financed road as a result of poor construction or design. [40705]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mrs. Gwyneth Dunwoody, dated 16 October 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent question asking if the contractor building the road is liable for damages, should an accident occur on a design, build, finance and operate system financed road as a result of poor construction or design.

Design, build, finance and operate contracts for roads place the responsibility for dealing with claims for damages resulting from poor construction or design on the contractor.

Roads Programme

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those road schemes removed from the main roads programme to the long-term programme in the last 12 months. [40698]

Mr. Watts: The review of the roads programme of November 1995, published in the document "Managing the Trunk Road Programme", categorised schemes according to their status. The list of longer-term schemes in that publication has not changed.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will estimate the annual cost to his Department of contracts currently let for road building under the design, build, finance and operate system. [40704]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mrs Gwyneth Dunwoody, dated 16 October 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent question about the cost of contracts currently let for road building under the design, build, finance and operate system.

The following figures illustrate the estimated range of annual cost (over a 5 year period), based on the Highways Agency's forecast of traffic volume for the 8 DBFO contracts awarded so far. These figures which are cash price estimates will be influenced by the usage of the DBFO road and the performance of the DBFO Company. The figures below do not include additional but relatively minor future lump sum payments covering for the example archaeological works, which because of their uncertain nature are extremely difficult to estimate.

1997/98: £68m

1998/99: £82m

1999/00: £163m

2000/01: £189m

Motorways

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is the expected road life of the existing motorways in the north-west of England; and if he will make a statement. [39959]

Mr. Watts: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Jim Callaghan, dated 15 October 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent question asking about the expected road life of the existing motorway in the North West of England.

Regular inspections and surveys are carried out to determine maintenance needs and timing of the trunk motorway network. The latest assessment of the residual life of the carriageways shows that 7.6 per cent. of the trunk motorway network in the North West, including Cumbria, will within the next four years reach the point where future performance becomes unpredictable and maintenance needs to be considered. The equivalent figure nationally is 12.7 per cent. These figures show that the motorway network is in good structural condition. Roads are generally designed to last for 20 years before they require major maintenance and, at any time, about 20 per cent. of the motorway network could be expected to fall within the above category.

These figures exclude carriageways constructed wholly of concrete for which there is currently no reliable method of measuring residual life.

Railways (Complaints)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those train operating companies that have been subject to enforcement action by the Rail Regulator as a result of complaints received regarding improper advice in relation to ticket sales. [40697]

Mr. Watts: The enforcement of train operators' licence obligations is a matter for the independent Rail Regulator. He has recently completed a public consultation on accurate and impartial retailing and will wish to consider the outcome of that consultation before deciding what enforcement action, if any, is warranted.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how many complaints have been received in each of the last 12 months by the Rail Regulator regarding (a) the sale of tickets and (b) the telephone inquiry service. [40696]

Mr. Watts: The numbers of complaints received by the Rail Regulator regarding (a) the sale of tickets and (b) the telephone inquiry service are as follows—separate monthly figures are not available prior to 31 March 1996:

Period	Tickets and fares	Telephone enquiry bureau
Year to 31 March 1996	121	10
April	1	1
May	3	0
August	12	6
September	9	2
October	3	1

Road Traffic Signs

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what progress he is making with the development of proposals for public consultation on options for amending legislation to allow business sponsorship of, and advertising on, road traffic signs. [40828]

Mr. Bowis: I am considering the road safety and environmental implications of including sponsorship information on road traffic signs.

Roads and Rail (Capital Value)

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what estimates he has made of the capital value of (a) all motorways, (b) the trunk road network and (c) the property of Railtrack, together with the percentage of such sums payable annually to HM Treasury. [40798]

Mr. Bowis: The Highways Agency is currently undertaking a valuation of the motorway and trunk road network in England, including associated land and structures for future inclusion in its commercial accounts. Railtrack's annual report and accounts 1995—96 include a total net book value of tangible fixed assets—investment properties, stations, depots, other land and buildings, track, signalling systems, electrification, other infrastructure and plant and machinery—at 31 March 1996 of £4,554 million. No payment is made to HM Treasury specifically in relation to these assets.

Shepherds Bush Flyover

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what report he has received on the recent accident that took place on the Shepherds Bush overhead intersection with the Westway that resulted in a lorry shedding its load on to the travellers, site situated beneath the flyover; and what additional safety precautions he is proposing. [40935]

Mr. Bowis: I have asked the chief executive of the Highways Agency to write to the hon Member.

Letter from Lawrie Haynes to Mr. Clive Soley, dated 16 October 1996:

The Secretary of State for Transport has asked me to reply to your recent question about an accident on the Shepherds Bush overhead intersection with the Westway.

The accident involved a lorry carrying industrial rolls of paper. The vehicle struck the parapet on an elevated stretch of road. The parapet, which conforms to the Highways Agency's latest standards, successfully restrained the vehicle but unfortunately parts of the load were shed and fell onto the ground below.

It would not be realistic or cost effective to make provisions such that no vehicles or their loads ever left elevated structures after an accident, and so no specific extra precautions are planned in the light of this accident. The Highways Agency is nevertheless committed to delivering a safe trunk road network and if other measures are identified that might improve the safety of this road they will be carefully considered.

Jubilee Line Extension

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what is his latest estimate of the in-service date of the Jubilee line extension. [40937]

Mr. Bowis: London Transport is aiming to open the Jubilee line extension on 28 March 1998.

Rail Network (Incidents)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list for each of the last 12 months the number of incident reports submitted to the railway inspectorate. [40712]

Mr. Watts: This information is not readily available in the form requested. The total number of reports for the period 1 April 1995 to 31 March 1996 is set out in the following table:

	Number
Train incidents	989
Failures of rolling stock and permanent way	1,960
Movement accidents	3,003
Non movement accidents	8,673

These figures will be reproduced in the HM chief inspecting officer of railways' annual report on the safety record of the railways in Great Britain 1995–96, which will be published before the end of the year. A copy will be placed in the House of Commons Library.

Rail Network (Unqualified Contractors)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport on how many occasions in the last 12 months reports have been made to the railway inspectorate regarding unqualified contractors found to be working on the rail network. [40711]

Mr. Watts: Instances of unqualified contractors working on the rail network are not reportable under the statutory reporting requirement. From time to time, Health and Safety Executive inspectors receive information or complaints alleging that unqualified contractors are working on the rail network, and these are invariable followed up by HSE's railway inspectorate. However, no central record exists and the information requested could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

Rail Freight (Accidents)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the number of occasions when rolling stock operated by private freight companies has been involved in accidents since rail privatisation. [40690]

Mr. Watts: This information is available in the form requested only at disproportionate cost.

Bridge Strengthening

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport is he will list for each of the last five years the budget for bridge strengthening. [40684]

Mr. Watts: Each year, the Government provide the Highways Agency with an overall budget for the maintenance of trunk road structures and, through transport supplementary grant and credit approvals, support to local highway authorities in England for the assessment and strengthening of their structures. Details for the last five years are set out in the table. In neither case are funds specifically earmarked for bridge strengthening.

£ million

	Highways agency structures capital maintenance	Local highway authorities assessment and strengthening approved expenditure
1992–93	130	111
1993–94	150	137
1994–95	150	137
1995–96	135	122
1996–97	130	103

Road Re-signing (London)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport when the decision was taken to cancel the re-signing project in London; what were the reasons; and if ministerial approval was sought. [40699]

Mr. Bowis: It has not been cancelled.

Promotional Expenditure

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport how much his Department has spent on (a) publicity, (b) promotion and (c) hospitality in each of the last six years. [40612]

Mr. Bowis: The information is as follows:

Publicity

1991–92: £8,270,000

1992–93: £8,730,000

1993–94: £8,275,000

1994–95: £8,039,000

1995–96: £7,525,000

Hospitality

1991–92: £102,000

1992–93: £127,000

1993–94: £220,000

1994–95: £123,000

1995–96: £106,000

(a) Figures are not yet available for the current year.

(b) Publicity includes promotions.

(c) Hospitality includes teas, working lunches and entertainment by both Ministers and officials in the United Kingdom and abroad.

Vehicle Excise Duty

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those vehicle registration offices where interviews are unable to be held as part of investigations into vehicle excise duty evasion. [40702]

Mr. Bowis: The information is as follows:

Bangor

Carlisle

Lincoln

Northampton

Portsmouth

Shrewsbury.

Road Fund Tax Fraud

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will set up a free phone-in hotline for the reporting of suspected road-fund tax fraudsters; and if he will make a statement. [40831]

Mr. Bowis: I have no plans to do so. To obtain a conviction a court must be satisfied that a vehicle has been used or kept on a public road without a licence. The police, traffic wardens and officials who currently report unlicensed vehicles are best equipped to supply this evidence and to appear in court when required. It is, of course, open to any member of the public to alert the police to a suspected offence.

Heavy Goods Vehicles

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those structures owned by Railtrack plc that fail to meet the standards for 44 tonne heavy goods vehicles. [40685]

Mr. Watts: Railtrack is currently undertaking a programme to assess the ability of those of its bridges which carry highways to bear 40 tonne lorries from 1999. There is no separate programme to assess the ability of structures to bear 44 tonne vehicles.

Consumer Protection (Channel Ferries)

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what proposals he has to ensure that consumers are protected from excessive price rises as a result of the proposed merger between P and O and Stena Sealink on some cross-channel ferry routes. [40681]

Mr. John M. Taylor: I have been asked to reply.

The Director General of Fair Trading is considering the matter and will advise my right hon. Friend the President of the Board of Trade in due course. All representations on this matter should therefore be submitted directly to the DGFT.

Bicycle Lights

Mr. Callaghan: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what measures he intends to take to prevent adult cyclists riding their bicycles without the necessary lights after dark. [39958]

Mr. Maclean: I have been asked to reply.

Enforcement of the law on pedal cycle lighting is an operational matter for individual chief constables. The Road Vehicles Lighting Regulations 1989 require that all bicycles which are used on roads at night must be fitted with a front and rear lamp, which must be kept lit and unobscured, and a rear retro reflector which must be kept unobscured. Fixed penalty notices can be issued to cyclists who fail to comply with these requirements.

The Department of Transport continues to encourage cyclists to comply with the law on pedal cycle lighting through the highway code and the cycle safe publicity campaign.

WALES

Students

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of (a) 16, (b) 17 and (c) 18-year-olds in (i) Wales and (ii) each EU member state are in full-time education or training. [40488]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Information on the participation of 16, 17 and 18-year-olds in education and training for Wales and 11 of the EU member states is presented in the following table. Information given is for full and part-time education and training, as figures for full-time education and training alone are not directly comparable between the countries; 1991–92 is the latest year for which information is available on a consistent basis for these states.

Participation in education and training of 16 to 18-year-olds by age in 1991–92[1]

Percentage

	Age 16	Age 17	Age 18
Wales	87	77	48
United Kingdom	91	77	52
Belgium	99	97	78
Denmark	92	80	69
Finland	95	86	82
France	92	89	79
Germany, Fed.	96	94	84
Greece	88	62	45
Ireland	89	77	58
Netherlands	98	94	81
Spain	76	67	54
Sweden	90	88	64

Source: Welsh Office, OECD (Education at a Glance, 1995).

[1] Includes apprenticeships and similar schemes such as YT. Also includes an estimate of participation in part-time higher education.

Single Currency

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what recent assessment he has made of the impact on employment in Wales of preparations made for the single currency and economic and monetary union. [40492]

Mr. Hague: I refer the hon. Member to the oral reply I gave the hon. Member for Cardiff, Central (Mr. Jones) on 19th February 1996, Official Report, column 5.

Promotional Expenditure

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how much his Department has spent on (a) publicity, (b) promotion and (c) hospitality in each of the last six years. [40610]

Mr. Hague: Welsh Office expenditure on publicity, promotions and hospitality for the last six years is as follows:

£ thousand

	Publicity and promotion[1]	Hospitality
1990–91	1,429	45
1991–92	1,957	36
1992–93	1,974	38
1993–94	1,358	27
1994–95	1,725	29
1995–96	1,929	22

[1] Spending is shown at outturn prices and cannot be disaggregated between publicity and promotion.

Buildings (Public Access)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the current level of access to public buildings with particular reference to (a) post offices, (b) banks and (c) building societies in Wales for the physically disabled. [40539]

Mr. Hague: I have seen a copy of Disability Wales's recent report "Access to Financial Premises".

The Disability Discrimination Act 1995 will require all service providers, including post offices, banks and building societies, to make reasonable adjustments to their premises, to the way they go about their business and to provide additional help in order to make it easier for disabled people to use their services. The employment rights and the first of the rights of access to goods, facilities and services come into force on 2 December 1996. The remaining rights of access will be phased in following decisions on the consultation exercise carried out earlier this year.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many answers to (a) written and (b) oral parliamentary questions have required correction by his Department in each of the past two years. [40644]

Mr. Hague: This is a matter of public record.

Health Authority Budgets

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales who in his Department is responsible for monitoring shortfalls in Welsh health authority budgets; and if he will make a statement. [40749]

Mr. Hague: My officials in the Welsh Office Health Department are responsible for monitoring the financial position of health authorities in Wales. This is undertaken on a monthly basis through a financial information system, and comprises cash as well as income and expenditure monitoring.

Landfill Tax

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what arrangements he has made to monitor the implementation of the landfill tax in Wales; and what plans he has to liaise with local authorities over the financial implications for their planning in respect of the liabilities of the landfill waste tax. [40540]

Mr. Hague: Implementation of the tax is a matter for my right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer.

I discussed the Welsh Local Government Association's assessment of spending needs, including its assessment of landfill tax costs, at a meeting of the Welsh Consultative Council on Local Government Finance on 23 September. I will give careful consideration to the assessment in making my 1997–98 local government revenue settlement decisions.

Buildings (Steel Frames)

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the value of steel frames for use in the construction of buildings; and what plans he has to promote the marketing of Welsh-manufactured steel frames. [40784]

Mr. Hague: I have made no such assessment. I continue to promote the interests of all Welsh industry at home and overseas.

Skill Shortages

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the major areas of employment where there will be skill shortages over the next five years; and what assessment he has made of the impact of these shortages on manufacturing industry. [41096]

Mr. Hague: The Welsh employers surveys, commissioned regularly by the Welsh Office in partnership with others, produces information on vacancies which are hard to fill because there is a shortage of applicants with the requisite skills. The training and enterprise councils in Wales build on this and other sources of information in making their assessments of the local labour market and skills priorities. "People and Prosperity: an Agenda for Action in Wales" underlined the importance of addressing the skill needs of manufacturing industry and sets out an action plan to meet these.

Agenda 21

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what guidance he has published to support local authorities in their efforts to meet the requirements of Agenda 21 arising out of the Rio treaty. [41161]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The Welsh Office has published advice and guidance on various issues relevant to sustainable development and to the involvement of local authorities in undertaking local Agenda 21 processes. Recent examples include "Planning Guidance (Wales): Planning Policy" and "A Working Countryside for Wales", and the Department is shortly to publish its "Environment in Wales", and the Department is shortly to publish its "Environment in Wales", fifth report. The Welsh Office has provided financial support to the Local Government Management Board to assist it in preparing advice to local authorities on local Agenda 21.

New Buildings and Premises

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total expenditure on new buildings and premises by his Department and its agencies; and if he will indicate the square footage of new office space purchased or newly rented in each of the last five years. [41151]

Mr. Hague: The Welsh Office estate has been reduced over the last five years from 50 to 23 properties, a reduction of 104,543 sq ft.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list (a) the budgeted provision, (b) the actual spending, (c) the places available, (d) the actual places provided and (e) the number of schools participating for each year of operation of the assisted places scheme. [41165]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The information requested is set out in the following table:

Year	Provision £	Spend £	New places available	New places taken up	Schools in scheme
1981–82	—[1]	160,783	150	113	9

Mr. Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list in descending order, for each year the assisted places scheme has been in operation, the fees charged by schools participating in the scheme and the average fee charged each year. [41163]

Mr. Evans: The information requested is not readily available from the start of the scheme. For 1991–92 and subsequent years the fees charged are set out in the following tables:

Education Statistics

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will list the number and percentage of pupils in primary school classes of 31 or more in each year since 1986 (a) by local education authority and (b) for Wales; [41155]

(2) if he will list the number and percentage of teachers who completed training courses in 1994, broken down by subject and in total, who were in posts by March 1995. [41097]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

Departmental Staff

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list the staff numbers in full-time equivalent employed by his Department as at (a) 1 April 1995, (b) 1 October 1995, (c) 1 April 1996 and (d) 1 October 1996; and what is his estimate of the numbers who will be in post at 1 April 1997. [41030]

Mr. Hague: The number of full-time equivalent staff employed in my Department on the specified dates were:

(a) April 1995: 2,481

(b) October 1995: 2,406

(c) April 1996: 2,295

(d) October 1996: 2,248.

Staffing plans for 1997–98 will be published in the departmental report early next year in the usual way.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what are his latest estimates of the expenditure on all external consultants, including management consultants, for each year since 1992, in 1996 prices, for his Department and its agencies; and what are the quantified annual cost savings which such expenditure has resulted in. [41191]

Mr. Hague: Expenditure, in 1996–97 prices, on external consultants engaged by the Welsh Office is as follows:

1991–92	1,267
1992–93	1,553
1993–94	1,550
1994–95	843
1995–96	1,212

There are no central records of the savings resulting from consultancy work.

M4

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list each contract for repair and improvement works on the M4 since 1979, indicating the overall cost and cost per mile. [41158]

Mr. Hague: This information is not readily available and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

School Ballots

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how many schools have held opt-out ballots since 1988, indicating those which were successful; and what percentage this constitutes of (a) pupils and (b) schools in the maintained sector in Wales. [41162]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Since 1988, 40 schools have held ballots of which 19 were in favour of applying for grant-maintained status. The schools at which ballots have been held represent 5.1 per cent. of the January 1996 pupil population and 1.9 per cent. of the total number of maintained schools in Wales.

Village Halls and Community Centres

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the total grant paid in 1991–92, and each subsequent year, from the voluntary youth service, village halls and community centres programme. [41010]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The information requested is in the following list:

Expenditure, by the Welsh Office and plans from 1991–92 to 1996–97, in pounds thousands.

1991–92: 724

1992–93: 551

1993–94: 399

1994–95: 519

1995–96: 509

1996–97: 472.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what estimate he has made of the amount of funding that will be allocated to Welsh local authorities in 1997–98 when the responsibility for the voluntary youth service, village halls and community centres is transferred to them. [41012]

Mr. Evans: This will be the subject of consultation with the Welsh Local Government Association.

Millennium Exhibition

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what representations he has received in relation to his fund-raising lunch for leaders of the Welsh business community in relation to the Greenwich millennium exhibition; and if he will make a statement. [41071]

Mr. Hague: I have received several letters of thanks for the lunch, with expressions of interest in the exhibition, and one letter expressing scepticism about the value of Welsh participation. I believe that the exhibition will provide an important marketing opportunity to project Welsh achievements to the wider world.

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what consultations he has had with the chairman of the Welsh Development Agency concerning the arrangement for lending the agency chief executive to the Greenwich Millennium Exhibition plc for 90 days; what representations he has received concerning this arrangement; what assessment he has made of the principal advantages and disadvantages of the agency; and if he will make a statement. [41069]

Mr. Hague: I have discussed the arrangement with the chairman of the WDA and I have not received any representations concerning the appointment of Mr. Hartop as chief executive designate of the Millennium Exhibition Company. With the appointment of an acting chief executive with 12 years experience in the agency, I have been assured that the WDA will continue to operate successfully.

GCSE Scores

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what was the average GCSE point score, where A*=7, for English language and mathematics for (a) girls and (b) boys in the maintained sector in (i) 1994, (ii) 1995 and (iii) 1996. [41166]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The information requested is available for 1994 and 1995 only, and is contained in the following table. Average GCSE point scores for English language and mathematics are given per 15-year-old pupil—age as at 31 August—in maintained schools.

Average GCSE point scores per 15-year-old pupil in maintained schools

	Girls	Boys
English language
1994	4.2	3.7
1995	4.2	3.4
Mathematics
1994	3.4	3.3
1995	3.4	3.3

1. Age as at 31 August.

2. Includes pupils in LEA maintained, grant maintained, special schools and pupil referral units.

3. Points have been allocated on the following basis A*=7, A=7, B=6, C=5, D=4, E=3, F=2, G=1.

Direct Labour and Service Organisations

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list by authority, the surplus achieved on trading accounts of each service delivered by local authority direct labour or service organisations within the terms of the Local Government Act 1988. [41156]

Mr. Hague: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

Nursery Places

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the estimate for unmet need for nursery places in Wales. [41053]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Some 90 per cent. of four-year-olds and 50 per cent. of three-year-olds attend maintained schools in Wales and some 1 per cent. of each, schools in the independent sector. Details of take-up of places in day care provision and in playgroups are not available. Provision in the maintained sector varies between and within local education authorities—from quarter to full time, and between places in nursery schools and nursery or reception classes in primary schools. There is no readily available information that this provision reflects parental choice.

Disabled People

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to improve transport facilities for disabled people. [41095]

Mr. Hague: I am keen to improve the accessibility of public transport services for disabled people. Under the Railways Act 1993, the Rail Regulator is responsible for protecting the interests of disabled rail passengers. All train and station operators are required to submit for the regulator's approval, a disabled people's protection policy, as a condition of being granted a licence to operate. In addition, the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 provides my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport with powers to make regulations to require that new public transport vehicles are accessible to disabled people. The Act will apply to new rail vehicles, as well as to buses, coaches and taxis.

I understand that discussions are under way with the rail industry and the Disabled Persons Transport Advisory Committee about the shape of the new regulations.

Discretionary Education Awards

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will list for each of the last six years the amount spent by each local education authority on discretionary awards and the number of students receiving them by LEA and year. [41164]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The information requested for the academic years 1989–90 to 1994–95, the latest year for which data are available, is given for the LEAs current at the time in the following table.

Discretionary awards: students domiciled in Wales[1]

Child Care Facilities

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what provision he is currently making to develop child care facilities (a) in the workplace and (b) elsewhere; and what plans he has to extend such provision. [41098]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The Welsh Office is supporting the development of child care for children of school age through the out of school child care grant initiative, and, for younger children, through the under-fives child care demonstration projects. The Government are currently consulting publicly on how child care might be developed, through the document "Work and Family: Ideas and Options for Child care", published by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Employment.

School Transport

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what plans he has to ensure that all vehicles used to transport children to and from school during school hours meet the standards of safety demanded by parents. [41154]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The provision of school transport is a matter for local education authorities. I have advised authorities that I expect the transport they provide to be appropriate to ensure that pupils travel in safety and reasonable comfort, and that they should take such steps as they consider necessary to satisfy themselves of the appropriateness of both vehicle and driver. The Government have now made regulations which require seat belts to be fitted on minibuses and coaches used specifically for transporting children, which should further reassure parents who are concerned for the safety of their children.

Nursery Voucher Scheme

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make it his policy to ensure that providers of places under the nursery voucher scheme will be under the same obligations as maintained schools to provide parents with information about Office of Her Majesty's Chief Inspector inspections. [41160]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: As a condition of grant, all nursery voucher scheme providers will be under the same obligations to make inspection reports available to parents, without charge.

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what is his estimate of the number of nursery vouchers required in each of the local education authorities in Wales; and if he will make a statement; [41266]

(2) how many nursery vouchers he expects to issue on the start-up of the scheme; and if he will make a statement. [41270]

Mr. Evans: All four-year-olds in Wales will be entitled to a nursery voucher, to be issued on a termly basis. The nursery voucher scheme contractor will identify the number of eligible children from the child benefit database and will send the parents or carers an application form for vouchers. A publicity campaign will alert parents or carers to the need to apply if they have not received a form. In exceptional circumstances, schools will hold a supply of forms for eligible children who have not received a voucher.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what amounts of public money are earmarked for the nursery voucher scheme in Wales; and if he will make a statement. [41267]

Mr. Evans: The total cost of the scheme in Wales, including the cost of inspection and administration, is expected to be some £43 million. A final decision on the relevant levels of additional provision and present expenditure funding will be taken in the context of the public expenditure settlement for 1997–98.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales how he proposes to make available to local education authorities in Wales the findings of the nursery voucher scheme's pilot schemes in England; and if he will make a statement. [41268]

Mr. Evans: Welsh Office officials are having on-going discussions with representatives of the local education authorities in Wales on all aspects of the detailed operation of the voucher scheme, which will include discussions on phase 1. My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Education and Employment will be making a statement to the House on the evaluation of phase 1 during the autumn.

Mr. Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if, as a consequence of representations made to him concerning nursery vouchers, he will exempt Wales from the scheme; and if he will make a statement. [41269]

Mr. Evans: I have already written to the hon. Member and informed him that I have no such plans. To do so would deny parents throughout Wales the opportunity for choice in the type of education they want for their four-year-old children.

School Budgets

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proportion of the potential schools budget has been delegated by each local authority for its schools in each of the last five years; and what was the total of the potential schools budget in (a) cash and (b) real terms in each of these years in each local authority. [41195]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

School Inspections

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what estimate she has made of the savings from increasing the length of the inspection cycle from four to six years; and if she will reinvest those savings in local advice services to back up Office for Standards in Education inspection; [39923]

(2) what estimate she has made of the savings from focusing secondary school inspections after September 1997 on English, mathematics and science and up to four additional subjects only; and if she will reinvest those savings in local inspection and advice services to back up Ofsted inspections. [39924]

Mr. Robin Squire: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State has accepted Her Majesty's chief inspector's recommendation that all school inspections should be on the basis of the existing framework for inspection, covering all national curriculum subjects. Some schools will be inspected more frequently and some less frequently than at present, and the total volume of inspections in any given year is therefore likely to be of a similar order as at present. Hence, it is unlikely that significant savings will arise. Provision for Ofsted will continue to be reviewed annually as part of the public expenditure survey.

Assisted Places Scheme

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many children in England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland have been awarded an assisted place since 1990; what is the cost for each year since 1990; and how much is proposed to be spent on the assisted places scheme for the years 1996–97 and 1997–98. [40591]

Mrs. Gillan: The number of children awarded assisted places in England in each academic year from 1990–91 to 1995–96, and the total cost of the scheme for each financial year, are given in the following table. Present spending plans for the financial years 1996–97 and 1997–98 are £117 million and £139 million respectively. Questions on the assisted places scheme in Scotland and Wales are matters for my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Scotland and for Wales. There is no assisted places scheme in Northern Ireland.

Assisted places scheme

Year	Number of first year assisted places taken up	Total cost (£ million)
1990–91	4,948	63.4
1991–92	5,602	75.8

1993–94	5,775	92.3
1994–95	5,813	101.5
1995–96	5,744	104.8

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list in descending order the fees charged by schools participating in the assisted places scheme in the last academic year; indicating the average fee charged. [40584]

Mrs. Gillan: The average fee charged for assisted pupils in England in the academic year 1995–96 was £4,346. The average fee charged by each school participating in the scheme is given in the following table.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many assisted places are available for the academic year 1996–97 in (a) the primary and (b) the secondary sector; and how many have been taken up. [40581]

Mrs. Gillan: The number of assisted places available for children below age 11 entering participating schools in England in academic year 1996–97 is 855. For children aged 11 to 13 there are 6,915 entry places and a further 1,899 places for direct entry into sixth forms. The total number of assisted places available in 1996–97, including places allocated in previous years, is 37,816. Final figures for take-up are not yet available, but preliminary indications are that take-up at entry continues to be high.

Student Grants

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the average grant received by students in (a) 1992–93, (b) 1993–94, (c) 1994–95 and (d) 1995–96; and if she will make a statement. [40578]

Mr. Forth: The average net maintenance grants after means testing received by mandatory award holders in England and Wales in the academic years 1992–93 to 1994–95, the latest year for which data are available, are set out in the following table. Since 1990–91, eligible students have also had access to non-means-tested students loans.

School Funding

Mr. Don Foster: To ask the Secretary of State for education and Employment what is the education budget and what proportion has been delegated to schools in the current financial year, in each English and Welsh local education authority; and if she will make a statement. [40590]

Mr. Robin Squire: The following table shows, for each local education authority in England, the amount of the potential schools budget and the percentage delegated to schools. The figures related to the financial year 1996–97. Information regarding the funding os schools in wales is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

1. The Potential Schools Budget (PSB) is the yardstick usually employed to measure the level of delegation achieved by LEAs. The PSB represents the total planned expenditure on schools maintained by an LEA less certain items which have been considered impracticable or undesirable to delegate.

2. The figures are derived from those provided by each LEA in its statement of planned financial expenditure produced under section 42 of the Education Reform Act 1988 and incorporate revisions notified to the Department up to 30 September 1996.

Nursery Vouchers

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what representations she has received from pre-school providers whose rolls have decreased as a result of competition from other providers in phase one of the voucher scheme; and if she will list those providers. [40538]

Mr. Robin Squire: Of more than 640 private and voluntary providers registered for the voucher scheme at April 1996, I am aware of six that have asked to withdraw, citing competition from other providers. These are:

Long Stratton Playgroup, Norwich

Bradwell Plagroup, Great Yarmouth

Marsham Playgroup, Norwich

Lingwood Pre-School, Norwich

Busy Bees, North Walsham

Sandringham and West Newton Pre-School.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many four-year-olds were in (a) private, (b) voluntary and (c) local education authority pre-school provision, in each of the phase 1 areas of the nursery voucher scheme, at the latest date for which figures are available before 1 April 1996; and how many are provided for in each sector, in each phase one area, at the latest date for which figures are available. [40527]

Mr. Squire: The available information is shown in the following table. Information on pupils in voluntary and private provision is not collected centrally.

Pupils aged four[1] in maintained schools in phase 1 local education authority areas—January 1996

LEA	Primary schools: Nursery schools	Primary schools: Nursery classes	Primary schools: Infant classes[2]	Special schools	Total
Wandsworth	70	729	1,666	9	2,474
Westminster	66	449	538	0	1,053
Kensington and Chelsea	96	269	368	0	733
Norfolk	134	537	5,490	26	6,187

[1] Pupils born between 1 January and 31 December 1991.

[2] Includes pupils in reception classes.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many eligible children in each of the four pilot authorities have not taken up their entitlement to apply for a nursery voucher; and what research she proposes to identify which parents and children are not currently receiving vouchers. [40529]

Mr. Squire: The estimated number of children eligible for vouchers in each of the phase 1 authorities and the number of children for whom vouchers have been issued is shown in the following table. Estimates of population are less reliable when broken down both by local authority area and by year group. Non-take-up of vouchers will be analysed in the evaluation statement to be provided in the autumn.

	Estimated number of eligible children	Number of children for whom vouchers have been issued
Norfolk	9,300	8,976
Kensington and Chelsea	1,650	1,151
Wandsworth	3,300	3,170
Westminster	1,900	1,414

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what advice she has issued to the pilot authorities in respect of the admission of four-year-olds who do not have a voucher. [40531]

Mr. Squire: Guidance has been issued to the phase 1 authorities on the procedure by which headteachers can, in exceptional cases, apply for vouchers on behalf of their pupils. Guidance on the interaction of nursery education vouchers and admissions arrangements is currently being sent to all local education authorities and maintained primary schools.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her answer of 26 June Official Report, column 158, how much has been spent on publicity, in each of the four pilot authorities and overall, at the latest date for which figures are available; and what was the projected publicity budget in phase one of the voucher scheme. [40574]

Mr. Squire: The original budget for providing information to parents and providers in the financial year 1995–96 in the phase 1 areas was £750,000. This was revised to £1.1 million to meet the unexpectedly high demand for information nationwide. The estimated budget for the financial year 1996–97 is £300,000, of which £175,000 has been spent to date.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her answer of 16 July, Official Report, column 466, how many four-year-olds in each local authority participating in the pilot phase of the voucher scheme to date have been enrolled who did not have a voucher at the time of their enrolment; and how many applications have been made by providers on behalf of such children. [40576]

Mr. Squire: Of the 14,711 vouchers issued for the summer term, 1,166 were issued after the start of that term. Of these, 300 were issued in response to applications by maintained schools on behalf of eligible children.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the average unit cost per pupil for provision in (a) nursery schools, (b) nursery classes in primary schools, (c) reception classes in primary schools (d) and playgroups, at the latest date for which figures are available. [40537]

Mr. Squire: The average unit cost per full-time equivalent pupil in 1994–95 for those categories of under fives' provision for which estimates are available nationally are as follows:

1994–95 estimates for England

Nursery schools	3,500
Nursery classes in primary schools	2,880
Primary classes (including under 5s)	1,640
Average	2,150

Comparable data for playgroups are not collected centrally.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what estimate she has made or received of the cost of administration arising from the voucher scheme, in respect of (a) each of the pilot local education authorities, (b) providers in each area and (c) her Department. [40530]

Mr. Squire: Grant aid was made available to the four local education authorities taking part in the first phase of the voucher scheme in respect of the extra costs incurred in participating in phase 1 compared to joining phase 2. Details were set out on 29 April 1996, Official Report, column 348. No detailed estimate of administration costs has been made in respect of providers in each area. The estimated cost of administering the nursery voucher scheme from April 1997 is not expected to exceed 2.7 per cent. of the total cost of the nursery voucher scheme. Some two-thirds of the administration costs are expected to cover the new system of inspection.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what notification she has received in respect of pre-school providers who have gone out of business as a result of competition from other providers in the phase 1 areas of the nursery voucher scheme; and if she will list those organisations notified to her. [40532]

Mr. Squire: Of more than 640 private and voluntary providers registered for the voucher scheme at April 1996, four have notified the nursery voucher centre that they have since closed, but none gave a reason.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many providers have received initial validation to accept voucher-bearing children, in the (a) maintained, (b) voluntary and (c) private sectors; and how many, in each sector, consequent to initial validation (i) have already been inspected, (ii) will be inspected during the autumn term and (iii) will be inspected during the spring term. [40533]

Mr. Squire: A total of 494 providers in the maintained sector and 647 providers in the private and voluntary sectors are participating in phase 1 of the scheme. I understand from the chief inspector of schools that approximately 300 providers will be inspected in the autumn term and approximately 350 in the spring term.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment her Department has made during the first term of the pilot phase of the impact of the voucher scheme on children with special educational needs. [40535]

Mr. Squire: The nursery education voucher scheme brings the prospect of earlier identification and intervention for children with special education needs. To achieve this end, providers who are not maintained schools will have a duty to have regard to the code of practice on the identification and assessment of special educational needs and associated guidance. Following discussions with the National Portage Association, and a trial in phase 1, portage services registered with the National Portage Association will be allowed to redeem nursery vouchers in phase 2.

National Vocational Qualifications

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the latest estimate of the development costs for establishing national vocational qualifications; and if she will make a statement. [40755]

Mr. Paice: Expenditure through the Department's programmes on development costs of national vocational qualifications between 1988 and March 1996 is £106 million. This figure includes £83 million from the standards programme and £23 million grant in aid to the National Council for Vocational Qualifications.

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is her Department's estimate of the number of people who have obtained a national vocational qualification. [40754]

Mr. Paice: According to the National Council for Vocational Qualifications and the Scottish Vocational Education Council, there have been 1,203,159 national vocational qualifications and 33,707 Scottish vocational qualifications awarded respectively up till 30 June 1996.

Provisional estimates from the spring 1996 Labour Force Survey show that 1.2 million people reported that they held an NVQ or SVQ.

Anti-drugs Programmes

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment she has made of the impact of the (a) DARE—drug abuse resistance education—and (b) other anti-drugs programmes in reducing the use of illegal drugs. [40605]

Mrs. Gillan: The 16 innovative drug education and prevention projects supported under the Department's grants for education support and training programme in 1995–96 have been independently evaluated. The Department intends to publish a booklet later this year summarising the findings. One project, in Kirklees local education authority, dealt with, among other things, an evaluation of a pilot of the DARE—drug abuse resistance education—programme.

In addition, the Office for Standards in Education is undertaking a specific study of provision for drug education in schools during this academic year. A report will be published shortly.

Promotional Expenditure

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much her Department has spent on (a) publicity, (b) promotions, and (c) hospitality in each of the last six years. [40623]

Mr. Robin Squire: The following figures are given in financial years.

Before the merger in July 1995, the Department operated separately funded programmes of publicity. This continued until the end of the financial year 1995–96. Figures for promotional work are not separately available.

Department for Education

	Publicity £ million
1990–91	5.3
1991–92	9.0
1992–93	8.0
1993–94	10.1
1994–95	9.4
1995–96	5.4

Department of Employment

	Publicity £ million
1990–91	2.6
1991–92	18.3
1992–93	7.2
1993–94	11.1
1994–95	11.1
1995–96	11.0

The first year for which figures for expenditure on hospitality are available is 1993–94. Figures for the earlier years could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

The combined figures for the two Departments are:

1993–94: £121,000

1994–95: £88,000

1995–96: £98,000.

Nursery Education Inspectors

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) how many people have embarked on a course to become a nursery education inspector; how many have successfully completed that course; what is the total number of qualified nursery education inspectors; and what were the recruitment targets; [40528]

(2) if she will require that inspections of voucher-bearing institutions be carried out during term time, when voucher-bearing children are present. [40534]

Mr. Robin Squire: These are matters for Her Majesty's chief inspector of schools, who heads the Office for Standards in Education. I have asked Mr. Chris Woodhead to write to the hon. Member.

Student Loans Company

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment when the Student Loans Company's 1996 annual report and accounts will be available. [41202]

Mr. Forth: I have today placed copies of the report and accounts in the Library.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what revisions she proposes in respect of the framework document, setting out the aim and objectives of the Employment Service, with particular reference to the roles and responsibilities of the Secretary of state and the chief executive, following the introduction of the jobseeker's allowance. [41203]

Mr. Forth: The framework document for the Employment Service has been revised to take account of the recommendations of the prior options review and the changed responsibilities and objectives of ES following the introduction of the jobseeker's allowance. Copies of the new framework document have been placed in the Library.

Mr. Deva: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what revisions she proposes in respect of the agreement between herself and the Secretary of state for Social Security on the administration of benefits for unemployed people, in respect of the introduction of jobseeker's allowance. [41201]

Mr. Forth: The agreement on the administration of unemployment benefit and income support for unemployed people became obsolete when jobseeker's allowance replaced those benefits on 7 October. A new agreement on jobseeker's allowance and related issues came into force. Copies of this agreement have been placed in the Libraries of both Houses.

Social Affairs Council

Mr. Peter Bottomley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will make a statement on the outcome of the EU Social Affairs Council on 24 September. [41204]

Mr. Paice: My noble Friend the Minister of State attended the Social Affairs Council in Brussels on 24 September.

There was a discussion of a draft decision setting up an Employment and Labour Market Committee. General support for the principle of establishing a committee was expressed.

The posted workers directive was adopted as an "A" point. The UK and Portugal voted against the directive. Common position was reached unanimously on an amendment to the carcinogens directive.

There was a series of presentations, including a Commission presentation on a Commission communication on information and consultation of workers, a presidency progress report on the single report on employment for the second Dublin European Council in December, information on the burden of proof directive, which is being taken forward by the other member states under the social protocol and a Commission Green Paper on the social and societal aspects of the information society.

School Transport

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list those schools in Staffordshire which have been inspected by the Health and Safety Executive, indicating their findings in respect of health and safety in respect of school transport arrangements. [40742]

Sir Paul Beresford: I have been asked to reply.

HSE inspectors have limited enforcement responsibilities for school transport. The safety of school transport vehicles, on the road are covered by various Road Traffic Acts which are enforced by the police or Department of Transport.

However, HSE inspectors will normally discuss during school inspections the management arrangements for health and safety during school activities, and this might include discussion on the arrangements in place for managing health and safety during school trips in the school's own transport or in that from a contractor, and for the movement of vehicles on school premises.

In Staffordshire, policies on school transport and trips have been discussed by HSE inspectors with individual schools and centrally with Staffordshire education authority. The education authority produced a comprehensive policy on school transport in 1995 and this appears to have been implemented at schools recently visited. These include:

Thomas Alleyne's High School, Uttoxeter
Paulet High School, Burton on Trent
Mary Hill Comprehensive, Kidsgrove
Leek High School, Leek
Merryfields Special School, Newcastle under Lyme
Flash Ley County First School, Stafford
Haywood High School, Burslem
Leasowes County Infants, Stafford
Clayton High School, Newcastle
St. Nicholas CE First School, Codsall
Marshlands Special School, Stafford
St. Dominics Independent Girls School, Stafford
St. Chads Cathedral School, Lichfield.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Metropolitan Police

Mr. Simon Hughes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his plans for the location of the pay and pensions branches of the Metropolitan police. [40221]

Mr. Maclean: Between May and August 1996, the Metropolitan police conducted a review of the provision of police and civil staff pay and pension services. The Metropolitan police policy board will shortly be deciding whether to accept the review report's recommendations that pay and pension services should be contracted out, subject to the approval of the Secretary of State as police authority. If contracting out were to take place, the successful contractor or contractors, and the location or locations at which the work would be carried out, would not be identified until the middle of 1997 at the earliest.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will extend the remit of the Metropolitan police committee to include reporting on any matters which they consider requires his attention. [40402]

Mr. Maclean: Mr right hon. and learned Friend announced to this House on 9 February 1995 the appointment of the Metropolitan police committee. He gave details of the terms of reference of the MPC. There are no plans to change these terms of reference.

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to reduce the number of civilian staff employed by the Metropolitan police. [40818]

Mr. Maclean: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that as well as on-going efficiency savings, he has recently initiated a specific review of central support services within the Metropolitan police. The review focused on posts primarily held by civilian staff. Following a consultation period, the Commissioner will discuss the recommendations with his senior colleagues. Final proposals are expected shortly.

Metropolitan Police

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the recent report by Her Majesty's chief inspector of constabulary on the No. 3 area (north-east) of the Metropolitan police. [41280]

Mr. Maclean: Yes. I have today placed in the Library a note of the recommendations from the report, together with the Commissioner's responses and the police authority responses, which take into account the advice my right hon. and learned Friend and I have received from the Metropolitan police committee.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions over the past 12 months there were two or fewer traffic division cars, other than those dedicated to work on the M25, operating in the Metropolitan police area. [40332]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 14 October 1996]: Records prior to January 1996 do not show this precise information. The Commissioner tells me that from January 1996 to August 1996—inclusive—records show that on no occasion were there two or fewer traffic division cars, other than those dedicated to work on the M25, operating in the Metropolitan police district.

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the number of police officers dedicated to traffic division operations in the past 10 years in the Metropolitan police area. [40339]

Mr. Maclean: No records were kept of the number of police officers dedicated to traffic division operations prior to 1994. Figures since then are as follows:

Rank	1994 (as at 31 December)	1995 (as at 31 December)	1996[1] (as at 31 August)
Superintendent	8	0	0
Chief Inspector	8	5	5
Inspector	30	30	27
Police Sergeant	101	108	109
Police Constable	670	689	685
Total	817	832	826

[1] The 1996 figures are provisional.

Police (M25)

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department to what extent the number of police officers dedicated to policing the M25 has varied over the past 10 years, to take account of the changing traffic flows on the motorway; and if he will make a statement.[40331]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 14 October 1996]: Allocation of police resources to the M25 is an operational matter for the chief officers concerned. They are represented on a dedicated M25 group within the national motorway conference of the Association of Chief Police Officers Traffic Committee. I understand that resources are used in a flexible way to match them to anticipated demands and that a number of factors are taken into account including the time of day, the season and the sector of the motorway.

Operation Bumble Bee

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the change in the number of burglaries in Greater London since the introduction of Operation Bumble Bee. [40458]

Mr. Maclean: Operation Bumble Bee was launched, on 1 June 1993, as a Metropolitan police initiative against burglary. Comparison of the 12-month rolling recorded burglary figures, incorporating both residential and non-residential burglary offences, for the Metropolitan police district for the years to May 1993 and to August 1996 are as in the following table:

	Offences
June 1992 to May 1993	189,514
July 1995 to June 1996	165,566
Variation	–23,948
Percentage change	–13

Amyl-Nitrate

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to restrict over-the-counter sales of amyl-nitrate to juniors; and if he will make a statement. [40768]

Mr. Sackville: I understand from the Medicines Control Agency that products containing amyl-nitrate are not legally available over the counter. They are medicinal products and are controlled by the Medicines Act 1968. Only doctors and chemists can supply this type of medicine to the public and their sale from other outlets is illegal.

The Advisory Council on the Misuse of Drugs has considered on a number of occasions whether alkyl-nitrates, of which amyl-nitrate is one, should be controlled under the Misuse of Drugs Act 1971. On the last occasion, in 1995, the council concluded that they did not give rise to a social problem justifying their control under the provisions of the 1971 Act. That remains the present position, but the situation will continue to be monitored.

Civil Defence Grant

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement concerning the planned levels for local authority civil defence grant for 1997–98 and subsequent financial years. [40819]

Mr. Sackville: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mortgage Fraud

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to amend the criminal law in relation to mortgage frauds following the decision of the House of Lords in R v. Preddy, R v. Slade and R v. Dhillon (1996) 3 All ER 481; and if he will make a statement. [40434]

Mr. Maclean: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Croydon, North-East (Mr. Congdon) on 15 October 1996.

Military Corrective Centre, Colchester

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what procedures have been adopted to designate the military corrective centre at Colchester a young offender institution; when the procedures were implemented; and if he will make a statement [40431]

Miss Widdecombe: The building at the military corrective training centre which we intend to use as a young offender institution will be declared to be such in the normal way by the Director General of the Prison Service acting on behalf of the Secretary of State under section 33(2) of the Prison Act 1952.

Promotional Expenditure

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much his Department has spent on (a) publicity, (b) promotion and (c) hospitality in each of the last six years. [40616]

Mr. Howard: The information requested is provided in the table.

Financial years	Publicity £	Promotion £	Hospitality £
1990–91	9,982,136	69,340	30,080
1991–92	10,570,379	305,849	28,094
1992–93	12,745,124	228,493	55,651
1993–94	14,028,929	123,620	49,017
1994–95	14,034,417	67,941	27,468
1995–96	10,731,655	57,454	38,604

Metropolitan Police Brass Band

Ms. Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has (a) to reduce the funding of or (b) to disband the Metropolitan police brass band. [40817]

Mr. Maclean: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that a recent review of the Metropolitan police central support services has recommended replacing the current full-time civilian Metropolitan police band with a less expensive alternative. Following a consultation period, the Commissioner will discuss this and other recommendations with his senior colleagues. Final proposals are expected shortly.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many answers to (a) written and (b) oral parliamentary questions have required correction by his Department in each of the past two years. [40634]

Mr. Howard: This is a matter of public record.

Wheel Clamping

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what representations he has received on proposals to regulate the activities of firms engaging in wheel clamping vehicles on private land. [40442]

Mr. Maclean: My right hon. and learned Friend has received representations from the hon. Member for Christchurch (Mrs. Maddock), the Automobile Association, the British Parking Association, and legislation on car clamping.

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to announce proposals arising from his consultation on wheel clamping. [40296]

Mr. Maclean: The Government are still considering what action should be taken to regulate wheel clamping on private land. We shall make an announcement as soon as possible.

Asylum Seekers

Mr. Alton: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will issue further guidance on the position of female asylum seekers from China who base their claim for asylum on Chinese laws specifying forced abortion, contraception and sterilisation; [41086]

(2) if asylum caseworkers have been instructed to take into account the threat of forcible abortion or sterilisation; [41085]

(3) if asylum caseworkers have now been instructed to take into account forced contraception, with particular reference to the forced insertion of intra-uterine devices. [41084]

Miss Widdecombe: A copy of the guidance which has been issued to asylum caseworkers on applications involving allegations of forcible abortion, sterilisation or genital mutilation has been placed in the Library. Where other forms of physical abuse are alleged, these are considered in the light of the circumstances of each case.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many people who had applied for asylum were deported from (a) Doncaster prison and (b) The Wolds prison during each month from May to September; and what were the nationalities of those deported; [40869]

(2) how many people who had applied for asylum were detained in (a) Doncaster prison and (b) The Wolds prison during each month from May to September; and what were the nationalities of those detained. [40868]

Mr. Kirkhope: I will write to the hon. Member.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what are his latest estimates of the expenditure on all external consultants, including management consultants, for each year since 1992, in 1996 prices, for his Department and its agencies; and what are the quantified annual cost savings which such expenditure has resulted in. [41180]

Mr. Howard: I will write to the hon. Member.

Buckley Hall Prison

Mr. Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what is the current full complement by grade of (a) part-time and (b) full-time staff, employed by Group 4 at HMP Buckley Hall; and what changes to staffing levels have occurred in the last three months; [40980]

(2) what percentage of temporary release decisions have resulted in temporary release failures at (a) HMP Buckley Hall and (b) other male category C training prisons since (i) 9 July 1996 and (ii) 14 December 1994; [40976]

(3) if he will specify (a) what injuries were sustained by the prisoner Keith Tierney following his assault by another prisoner at HMP Buckley Hall in August, (b) what level of medical treatment was received by Keith Tierney following the assault, (c) how soon after the assault Keith Tierney's family were informed of his injuries, (d) what knowledge HMP Buckley Hall had at the time of this assault of assaults already received by Keith Tierney at other prisons, (e) what measures had been adopted at HMP Buckley Hall at the time of the assault and to minimise the risk of assault for Keith Tierney; [40982]

(4) if he will list the number and types of incidents reported to the Prison Service in relation to Buckley Hall since (a) 12 June 1996 and (b) 14 December 1994; [40974]

(5) what is the current staffing ratio for non-health staff to prisoners at (a) HMP Buckley Hall and (b) other male category C training prisons; [40978]

(6) if he will list the representatives of (a) overseas Governments and (b) ministries of justice that have visited HMP Buckley Hall since 14 December 1994; and on what dates the visits occurred. [40977]

(7) how many serious assaults have occurred on prisoners in HMP Buckley Hall since 14 December 1994; [40975]

(8) how many serious assaults have occurred on staff in HMP Buckley Hall since 16 July 1995; and what is the total number of assaults on staff that have occurred at the prison since 14 December 1994. [40979]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for replies to be given.

Letter from Hugh Taylor to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 16 October 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Questions about Buckley Hall prison.

The information requested is not immediately available and the Director General will write to you in full as soon as possible.

Criminal Cases Review Commission

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department for what reason Recruitment and Assessment Services was asked to delay the processing of applicants for appointments to the board of the Criminal Cases Review Commission; on what date it was given clearance to proceed; and if he will make a statement. [41060]

Mr. Kirkhope: Recruitment and Assessment Services was not asked to delay the processing of applicants for the posts of members of the Criminal Cases Review Commission. It was unable to inform applicants about the outcome of their applications until all the applications had been considered and sifted. This process took longer than anticipated due to the large number of applications received. Preliminary interviews for the posts began on 3 September; the final interviews will be held during the next few weeks.

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the current budget for the Criminal Cases Review Commission; and how much has so far been spent. [41059]

Mr. Kirkhope: The provisional budget for setting up and operating the Criminal Cases Review Commission in 1996—97 is £5 million. Up to 30 September, £104,000 had been spent, although much more has been committed in terms of accommodation and equipment for the commission.

Ms. Sandra Gregory

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what provision exists to enable Ms Sandra Gregory, currently serving a 22—year sentence in Klong Prem womens' prison, Bangkok, to serve the rest of her sentence in a British prison. [40936]

Miss Widdecombe: I will write to the hon Member.

Doncaster Prison

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what plans he has to place a safety net in the open space between the first floor landing and the ground floor at Doncaster prison to prevent (a) self-harm by prisoners and (b) harm to prison staff by prisoners; and if he will make a statement; [40864]

(2) how many prisoners and from which of Her Majesty's prison establishments worked at Goodwood racecourse during its July meetings; how they were selected; if they were recompensed for the work; what was the total cost of the service; what proportion of this was borne by (a) the racecourse executive and (b) from public funds; and if he will make a statement; [40866]

(3) what is the (a) current number and (b) percentage of the current prison population at HMP Doncaster who have been imprisoned for (i) rape, (ii) murder, (iii) armed robbery, (iv) manslaughter and (v) arson; and what were the equivalent figures for 12 months ago; [40853]

(4) how may prisoners and from which of Her Majesty's prison establishments have worked at Doncaster racecourse during the last 12 months; how they were selected; if they were recompensed for the work; what was the total cost of the service; what proportion of this was borne by (a) the racecourse executive and (b) from public funds; and if he will make a statement; [40867]

(5) which trade unions are recognised by Premier Prison Services at Her Majesty's prison, Doncaster; and in respect of which issues the company is prepared to consult and negotiate with each trade union. [40854]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for replies to be given.

Letter from Hugh Taylor to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 16 October 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Questions about Doncaster prison and prisoners working at Goodwood.

The information requested is not immediately available and the Director General will write to you in full as soon as possible.

Prisoners (Closed Visits)

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners are subject to closed visits; how long this policy has been in force; and how often it is reviewed. [40847]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for this matter has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Hugh Taylor to Mr. Jeremy Corbyn, dated 16 October 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent question about closed visits.

The information requested is not immediately available and the Director General will write to you in full as soon as possible.

Detainees

Mr. Richmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many people detained in (a) Doncaster prison and (b) The Wolds prison under

Immigration Act powers were deported in each month from May to September; and what were the nationalities of those deported; [40871]

(2) how many people were detained in (a) Doncaster prison and (b) the Wolds prison, under Immigration Act powers, in each month from May to September; and what were the nationalities of those detained. [70870]

Miss Widdecombe: Responsibility for these matters has been delegated to the Director General of the Prison Service, who has been asked to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Hugh Taylor to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 16 October 1996:

The Home Secretary has asked me, in the absence of the Director General from the office, to reply to your recent Questions about people deported under Immigration Act powers.

The information requested is not immediately available and the Director General will write to you as soon as possible with a full reply.

Closed Circuit Television

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many schools in South Yorkshire to date have applied for funding for closed circuit television; and what percentage of them were successful; [40865]

(2) how much money his Department contributed towards each project in South Yorkshire which was successful for closed circuit television this year and what percentage this was of the total cost of each project. [40993]

Mr. Maclean: I will write to the hon. Member.

New Buildings and Premises

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the total expenditure on new buildings and premises by his Department and its agencies; and if he will indicate the square footage of new office space purchased or newly rented in each of the last five years. [41142]

Mr. Howard: I will write to the hon. Member.

Dassault Aviation

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the visit by police to the chalet of Dassault Aviation during the Farnborough air show. [40943]

Mr. Kirkhope: I will write to the hon. Member.

Traffic Division Operations

Mr. Mackinlay: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers have been dedicated to traffic division operations in (a) Thames Valley, (b) Hertfordshire, (c) Essex, (d) Surrey and (e) Sussex in each of the last 10 years. [41194]

Mr. Maclean: I will write to the hon. Member.

James Hanratty Case

Miss Lestor: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he plans to take following receipt of the Scotland Yard report into the A6 James Hanratty murder case; and if he will make a statement. [41200]

Mr. Kirkhope: I will write to the hon. Member.

Stalking

Ms Janet Anderson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department, pursuant to his answer of 13 February, Official Report, column 523, if he will now give details of the number of people prosecuted for stalking under the Criminal Justice and Public Order Act 1994 as it related to crimes of intentional harassment. [41240]

Mr. Maclean: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Brazier: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he intends to announce his conclusions in the light of responses to the consultation document "Stalking: The Solutions." [41275]

Mr. Maclean: I shall be making an announcement on Friday.

Combined Heat and Power

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what capacity of electricity used in his Department's buildings is generated in a combined heat and power plant; and what plans he has to increase that capacity. [41323]

Mr. Howard: I will write to the hon. Member.

London Fire and Civil Defence Authority

Lady Olga Maitland: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has reached a decision on the application from the London fire and civil defence authority under section 19 of the Fire Services Act 1947. [41279]

Mr. Howard: I have approved proposals put to me by the London fire and civil defence authority for the removal of one of two pumping appliances at each of 14 fire stations in London, the removal of a fire rescue unit and a reduction in establishment of 316 posts. The pumping appliances are in the fire stations at Barnet, Chiswick, Deptford, East Greenwich, Fulham, Hendon, Millwall, Sidcup, Silvertown, Southwark, Twickenham, Wimbledon, Woodford and Woodside. I have rejected the proposal by the authority to remove one of the appliances from the fire station at Battersea on the grounds that I am not satisfied that adequate consideration has been given to the representations that have been made to the authority about the arrangements for dealing with special fire risks.

The primary responsibility for deciding what resources are needed to provide an efficient and effective fire service in London and how those resources should be deployed rests with the fire authority. In reaching a decision on its application, very careful consideration has been given to the representations that have been received. I have also sought the views of Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Fire Services. I have accepted his firm professional advice that if those proposals which I have now agreed are implemented by the fire authority, nationally recommended fire cover standards will still be maintained throughout London.

Ministry of Transport Certificates

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prosecutions there have been in each of the last five years against private individuals or companies for forging their MOT certificates. [40351]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 14 October 1996]: The following table gives the readily available information:

Total number of proceedings for the offence of fraud, forgery etc. of test certificates, England and Wales, 1990–94

	Number
1990	638
1991	732
1992	676
1993	978

Statistics for 1995 are due to be published at the end of October 1996.

Juries (Fraud Trials)

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to review the use of juries in fraud trial cases; and if he will make a statement. [40553]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 15 October 1996]: The Government are keeping the handling of long and complex fraud trials under close review in the light of changing circumstances and recent developments.

An examination of the role of the jury is one of the important issues which arises in this context and the Government are considering carefully the merits of any potential change.

Prison Releases

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps he is taking to ensure that prison release dates are calculated correctly; how many prisoners were recently wrongly released; how many reoffended or in other ways breached the conditions of their release; and if he will make a statement. [40560]

Miss Widdecombe [holding answer 15 October 1996]: The Government had proposed in March that there should be new arrangements in England and Wales for determining the effect on release dates of time spent on remand. These proposals, set out in the White Paper "Protecting the Public" provide that in all cases the judge will determine, when passing sentence, how much remand time will count against the sentence.

Following the recent clarification of existing law by the High Court in the case of R v. Naughton, governors have been issued with fresh guidance stating that remand time in relation to consecutive sentences cannot be counted more than once.

Of the 541 prisoners serving consecutive sentences who were released early, figures for the period ending 11 October show that nine prisoners have been returned to prison either for breach of their licence or following commission of further offences, or both. Information about any prisoner who may have been arrested for alleged further offences and has not been remanded in custody is not available.

Witnesses (Cross-examination)

Mr. Wareing: To ask the Secretary of State for the Home Department what plans he has to amend the law as it applies to the cross-examination of prosecution witnesses in cases of alleged sexual assault and related areas; and if he will make a statement. [40550]

Mr. Maclean [holding answer 15 October 1996]: The Criminal Justice Act 1988 already prohibits a defendant from questioning a child witness in cases of sexual offences and cruelty. My right hon. and learned Friend announced on 8 October that he would like to see similar protection extended to protect victims of alleged sexual assault. A review is being undertaken to look at ways in which this might best be achieved.

SOCIAL SECURITY

Reduced Earnings Allowance

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people to date have lost their reduced earnings allowances in each of the benefit districts in Wales. [40465]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of reduced earnings allowance is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Ted Rowlands, dated 15 October 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary question asking how many people to date have lost their Reduced Earnings Allowances (REA) in each of the benefit districts in Wales.

I have assumed this question refers solely to Adjudication Officer's decisions to transfer over pensionable age (as at 24 March 1996) REA recipients to retirement Allowance following the coming into force of the Social Security (Industrial Injuries and Diseases) (Miscellaneous Amendments) Regulations 1996 on 24 March 1996.

As at 31 August 1996, the number of people whose entitlement to REA has been transferred to Retirement Allowance by each District in Wales is detailed in the table below:—

Benefits agency district	Number of cases transferred
West Wales	242
Gwent Borders	57
Swansea Bay	266
Mid Glamorgan	690
Wrexham and North Wales	176
Cardiff and Vales	82
Gwyneddigion Maldwy	102
Eastern Valleys	335

Figures are provisional and subject to amendment.

I hope this reply will be helpful.

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the additional costs of holding the appeals against the withdrawal of the reduced earnings allowance. [40462]

Mr. Evans: Assuming that approximately 25 per cent. of the reduced earnings allowance recipients transferred to retirement allowance following the introduction of amending legislation will appeal against the adjudication officer's decision, the total cost of the processing and holding the appeals is estimated to be in the region of £1 million.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what estimate he has made of the number of people who have suffered a reduction in the related earnings allowance with the introduction of the retirement allowance in the benefit offices covering (a) Doncaster and (b) Mexborough. [40836]

Mr. Burt: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Martin Redmond, dated 16 October 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what estimate he has made of the number of people who have suffered a reduction in the reduced earnings allowance with the introduction of the retirement allowance in the benefit offices covering (a) Doncaster and (b) Mexborough.

The information is not available in the format requested. This is because statistics are collected by Benefits Agnecy Districts and not by individual benefit offices. I have provided below the figures for Doncaster District which includes Doncaster Castle House and Doncaster St Peters House and Rother and Dearne District which includes Goldthorpe, Mexborough, Rotherham North, Rotherham South and Wathon Dearne. These figures are provisional and may be subject to amendment.

In order to assess these people who might be transferred to Retirement Allowance under amending legislation (Social Security (Industrial Injuries and Diseases) (Miscellaneous Amendments) Regulations 1996) which came into force on 24 March 1996, the Benefits Agency identified all Reduced Earnings Allowance recipients over pensionable age as at 24 March 1996. As a result of assessing all those cases identified in the Doncaster and Rother and Dearne Districts the numbers whose benefit has been reduced are as follows:–

(a) Doncaster District: 291

(b) Rother and Dearne District: 349

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people covered by the Seaham and Peterlee Benefits Agency offices have had retirement allowance substituted for reduced earnings allowance. [41221]

Mr. Evans: I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Appeals

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) if he will place in the Library a copy of the correspondence between his Department and the Council on Tribunals regarding the draft of the Social Security (Adjudication) and Child Support Amendment (No. 2) Regulations 1996; [40594]

(2) if members of social security appeal tribunals, disability appeal tribunals and child support appeal tribunals will receive the documents relating to appeals in advance of the hearing in cases where an oral hearing is not requested; [40781]

(3) if he will ensure that, before the chairman of a tribunal gives notice for the determination forthwith of an appeal which he believes has no reasonable prospect of success, the appellant has been given an opportunity to request an oral hearing and any such request has been complied with; [40783]

(4) what assessment he has made of the percentage of successful appeals to a social security appeal tribunal if the appellant (a) requests and (b) does not request an oral hearing; [40786]

(5) if he will defer the coming into force of the Social Security (Adjudication) and Child Support Amendment (No. 2) Regulations 1996 to allow time for a debate on the proposed changes in the rights of appellants; [40816]

(6) what assistance will be provided to ensure that appellants from tribunal decisions are able to comply with the requirement to include in their appeal a summary of the arguments relied on by them. [40782]

Mr. Roger Evans: I refer the hon. Member to the reply my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State gave the hon. Member for Southport (Mr. Banks) on 23 July, Official Report, column 299.

We do not intend to postpone the introduction of these regulations. They are essential to allow for improvements to the service offered appellants and any delay in their coming into force will only delay the point at which improvements can be made. Copies of subsequent correspondence between departmental officials and the Council on Tribunals concerning these amendments have been placed in the Library.

The appeal leaflet is being re-written to tell appellants the type of information required to support their appeal. Staff of the relevant agencies and other advice agencies will continue to provide advice as they do now. The independent tribunal service will tell the appellant if the information given is insufficient.

The right to an oral hearing is not modified by the power of the chairman to determine the appeal forthwith. The appellant will be asked in all cases if he wants an oral hearing. Currently, success rates for those people who choose to attend their hearing are around 53 per cent. compared to 15 per cent. for those people who choose not to attend. I have made no assumption about whether these figures will change following the introduction of the requirement to opt for an oral hearing. An evaluation will be undertaken once the new procedures have been in place for a reasonable time. The requirement to opt for an oral hearing will enable the independent tribunal service arrange non-attended hearings more efficiently.

The issuing of documents to tribunal members about appeals is a question for the president of the independent tribunal service, His Honour Judge Bassingthwaighte, who will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Family Credit

Mr. Bayley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people were in receipt of family credit in (a) York, (b) North Yorkshire and (c) Yorkshire and Humberside in 1988 and in each year since then. [40238]

Mr. Roger Evans: The administration of family credit is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Hugh Bayley, dated 15 October 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many people were in receipt of Family Credit (FC) in York, North Yorkshire and Yorkshire and Humberside in 1988 and each year since then.

The information is not available in the format requested. This is because the FC computer system holds records of the total number of claims received, awarded and disallowed on a national basis. Details are not broken down into individual towns or areas.

However, statistics are available which indicate the number of families in receipt of FC within a Benefits Agency (BA) office area at a particular date. The information is only available from 1993 onwards as details relating to FC claims are normally destroyed after 18 months. The details available for each BA office in the Yorkshire and Humberside area, and the date of each scan, are shown in the attached Annex.

I hope that you find this reply useful. If you would like any further information regarding the Family Credit scheme please write to Miss J Geering, Customer Service Manager, Family Credit unit, Government Buildings, Cop Lane, Penwortham, Preston, PR1 OSA.

Benefits Freeline Advisory Service

Mr. Rowlands: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many calls were received by the benefits freeline advisory service in Wales in the last year; and how many came from the Rhymney Merthyr benefit districts. [40325]

Mr. Roger Evans: This is an operational matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Ted Rowlands, dated 16 October 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking how many calls were received by the Benefits Freeline Advisory Service in Wales in the last year; and how many came from the Rhymney Merthyr benefit districts.

The information is not available in the format requested. The number of calls received has been taken to mean the number of calls answered by an advisor. The Benefits Freeline Advisory Service in Wales reeeived 12,000 calls in the year April 1995 to March 1996. This figure has been rounded to the nearest 1,000. However no records have been kept indicating where calls originated from.

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Chronic Bronchitis and Emphysema.

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security when he expects to respond to the Industrial Injuries Advisory Committee's report on chronic bronchitis and emphysema. [40714]

Mr. Roger Evans: No decision has yet been made with regard to the recommendations set out in the report, which is being given full and careful consideration. We will announce the decision as soon as we have completed our necessarily detailed examination of the issues it raises.

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list by region the number of claims that have been made for industrial injuries benefit in respect of chronic bronchitis and emphysema; how many have been successful; how many have been refused; and for what reasons. [40715]

Mr. Burt: The administration of industrial injuries disablement benefit is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Paddy Tipping, dated 16 October 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking if he will list by region the number of claims that have been made for Industrial Injuries Benefit in respect of chronic bronchitis and emphysema; how many have been successful; how many have been refused; and for what reasons.

[1] 20 year rule: these cases were disallowed because the customer had not worked underground for at least 20 years.

[2] Disablement 1–13 per cent. cases disallowed because Industrial Injuries benefit only becomes payable at 14 per cent. disablement and the customer had no other entitlements which, when added to the CB and E assessment, would result in an aggregated minimum 14 per cent. disablement.

[3] Customers failed the FEV (1) test: cases disallowed because the lung capacity test did not show that the customer's lung capacity was sufficiently restricted.

[4] Customers failed the x-ray test: cases disallowed because findings from the customer's x-rays(s) were not sufficiently conclusive in respect of dust retention.

Promotional Expenditure

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how much his Department has spent on (a) publicity, (b) promotion and (c) hospitality in each of the last six years. [40615]

Mr. Burt: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce) on 25 April, Official Report, column 249.

Unfortunately, there was a typographical error in the answer I gave relating to the total amount of expenditure on publicity for the year 1994–95.

The information is not available in the format requested as it is not possible to separate promotional activities from publicity undertaken. Such information as is available is in the lists.

TOTAL EXPENDITURE ON PUBLICITY

1990–91: £12,316,239

1991–92: £17,546,566

Benefits Agency

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proposals he has for the privatisation of the Benefits Agency; and if he will make a statement. [41169]

Mr. Lilley: There are no proposals to privatise the Benefits Agency.

Involvement of the private sector in the Benefits Agency is part of a wider programme of change to reduce running costs and improve efficiency.

Mr. Gunnell: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what is the estimated total annual saving to the Benefits Agency of the proposed closure of the advice offices in Morley, Rothwell and Otley on 31 December; [41167]

(2) what is his estimate of the numbers of people calling for information or advice at the Benefits Agency Office in Morley in each week of its operation; and how many of these he estimates will journey to Leeds for advice; [41159]

(3) what was the cost to his Department of setting up the benefits advice office in Morley; and what was the cost to the Benefits Agency of running the office in 1995–96. [41168]

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security (1) what representations he has received concerning the change programme in the Benefits Agency; and if he will make a statement; [41271]

(2) what plans he has to meet the Civil and Public Services Association to discuss the change programme of the Benefits Agency; and if he will make a statement. [41272]

Mr. Roger Evans: I will write to the hon. Members shortly.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the offices within his Department that have been closed in the (a) Doncaster and (b) Mexborough area for each of the last five years. [40856]

Mr. Burt: In the five years prior to August 1996, no offices were closed in the Doncaster and Mexborough area.

In August 1996 the Benefits Agency took occupation of a new building at Crossgate house, Wood street, Doncaster. While meeting the current future operational needs and the requirements of its customers, it enabled rationalisation of the overall DSS occupied estate in Doncaster. As a result four buildings occupied by, DSS in Doncaster were closed: St. Peters house, Castle house, Silver house medical examination centre and Arndale house medical adjudication centre.

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he is yet in a position to report on the tenders submitted to him for the Benefit Agency's telephone interpreting service; and if he will make a statement. [40987]

Mr. Evans: A framework agreement has been negotiated with Language Line Ltd. for the provision of a telephone interpretation service to the Benefits Agency and other interested Government Departments. Unsuccessful tenderers were informed by letter dated 14 October 1996. Debriefs for the unsuccessful tenderers are currently being arranged with the first debrief organised for 7 November 1996.

BA Purchasing and Supply, which let the contract on behalf of the Department of Social Security, is confident that the successful tender will provide an improved service in terms of quality of interpretation.

Lone Parents

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the total benefit expenditure on lone parents whose youngest child is over five years old. [41017]

Mr. Burt: Benefit expenditure on lone parents whose youngest child is over five years, for the main benefits paid to lone parents, has been estimated using departmental data and is set out in the table.

£ million

Year	1995–96
One parent benefit	209
Family credit	491
Child benefit	810
Housing and council tax benefits	1,950
Income support	1,881
Total benefit	5,341

Source:
Family Resources Survey and various Analytical Services Division sample data.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the benefit bill for (a) income support, (b) family credit, (c) housing benefit, (d) council tax benefit, (e) one parent benefit and (f) lone-parent premium for lone parents by English region. [41027]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available in the tables.

Information for 1995–96 for (a), (c) and (d) is shown in table 1 and for (b) is shown in table 2.

Expenditure by region for one-parent benefit and lone parent premium is not available.

Components of a benefit award cannot be separately identified. The lone-parent premium is payable with income support, housing benefit and council tax benefit. The income support lone-parent premium was worth £5.20 in April 1995. This would give implied expenditure in England for 1995–96 of £243 million for income support.

The equivalent amounts for housing benefit and council tax benefit, excluding income support recipients, are £61 million and £57 million.

However, some recipients will receive an overall amount of benefit which is less than the value of the premium.

Notes:

1. Information on income support, housing benefit and council tax benefit is provided by standard statistical region. Information on family credit is only available by social security administrative region.
2. Figures are rounded to the nearest £ million.

Sources:

1. Total expenditure figures are consistent with the 1996 Departmental Report.
2. Housing benefit and council tax benefit figures are estimates derived from the annual 1 per cent. housing benefit sample enquiry.
3. Income support figures are estimates derived from the income support statistical enquiry May 1995 (5 per cent. sample). Family credit figures are derived from the family credit statistical sample (5 per cent. sample). Expenditure has been calculated from average weekly payments and Number of claimants.
4. A recent costing suggests that relatively few lone parents receive benefit less than the value of the premium.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what is the definition of availability for work for lone parents. [41015]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: Lone parents with children aged under 16 may receive income support without being required to be available for work. However, they have full access to Employment Service advice and assistance if they wish to seek work. Lone parents if they choose may claim jobseeker's allowance at any time, rather than income support, but once their youngest child is aged 16 or over they may claim only jobseeker's allowance and must be available for work.

Lone parents who claim JSA must be willing and able to accept a job offer given 48 hours' notice. They may restrict their availability for employment provided that they are available for the maximum hours that their responsibility for the care of their children allows; that they retain reasonable prospects of securing employment despite their restrictions; and that they are available for a minimum of 16 hours a week.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what proportion of lone-parent families received income support in each of the last 10 years. [41021]

Mr. Burt: The information requested is set out in the table:

Number of Income Support Lone Parents

Year	Number of cases	Percentage of lone parent population
1986	575,000	62
1987	629,000	64

Habitual Residence Test

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what has been (a) the cost to date to the Benefits Agency of administering the habitual residence test to claimants for income support and (b) the cost to the Benefits Agency of preparing and presenting evidence for social security appeals tribunal hearings on the habitual residence test. [41032]

Mr. Burt: This is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Robin Corbett, dated 16 October 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what has been the cost to the Benefits Agency to date of administering the habitual residence test to claimants for Income Support (IS), and of preparing and presenting evidence at appeals tribunals on the test.

The information is not available in the format requested. The cost of administering the habitual residence test in District Offices, including the preparation and presentation of appeals, for the period 1 August 1994 when it was introduced to 31 March 1996, the latest date for which figures are available, is as follows:

1.8.94–31.3.95: £2,558.256

1.4.95–31.3.96: £2,612,051

It is not possible to separate the cost of the work associated with the preparing and presenting of evidence at appeals tribunals. This information could only be obtained at disproportionate cost.

I hope you find this information helpful.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will give the number of appeals heard after claimants have failed to meet the habitual residence test when applying for income support by tribunal centres by name, giving the numbers decided in the claimants' favour. [41033]

Mr. Roger Evans: The information is not available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the number of claimants tested and the number refused income support under the habitual residence test in each office site serving the Birmingham, Erdington constituency grouped according to United Kingdom nationals, European Economic Area nationals, or other nationals, for 1995–96 and for that period of 1996–97 for which figures are available. [41031]

Mr. Burt: The administration of income support is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Mr. Robin Corbett, dated 16 October 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking if he will list the number of claimants tested and the number refused Income Support (IS) under the habitual residence test in each office site serving the Birmingham, Erdington constituency grouped according to United Kingdom nationals, EEA nationals, or other nationals for 1995–96 and for that period of 1996–97 for which figures are available.

The information is not available in the format requested. This is because statistics are collected by Benefits Agency Districts and not by individual benefit offices. I have provided below the figures for Birmingham Tame Valley District, which covers the area of Birmingham Erdington, Birmingham Handsworth, Birmingham Perry Barr and Birmingham Washwood Heath. These figures are provisional and may be subject to amendment.

Child Support Agency

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the total revenue collected for each year of operation of (a) Doncaster Child Support Agency field office and (b) Rotherham Child Support Agency field office for postal code area S64; and if he will indicate for (a) and (b) the (i) total running cost budget, (ii) total number of claims received and (iii) total number of (1) casual and (2) temporary staff employed. [40890]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Mr Martin Redmond, dated 16 October 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the Doncaster and Rotherham Child Support Agency Offices.

As Field offices do not collect revenue, I am not able to provide you with any information. The assessment and subsequent collection of a maintenance is undertaken by the Child Support Agency Centres (CSACs). Once in a CSAC, it is not possible to attribute an individual case's yield to the field office at which it originated.

Since the inception of the Agency there have been several boundary changes within the Doncaster and Rotherham areas with both offices at some time being linked to others. In view of this, it is not possible to report on the running costs for these individual sites for either 1993/94 or 1994/95. This is also the case for details relating to both casual and temporary staff numbers.

In 1995/96, Doncaster and Rotherham because a combined area. For this year the running costs were £490,508 for staff and £14,415 for non staff. During the year the number of casual and fixed term contract employees fluctuated; on average one casual and one fixed term contract employee were employed. The number of claims received in the area was 5147.

In 1996/97, the staff costs are £474,279. There is no specific devolved budget for non staff costs in the current financial year as funds are allocated on a Divisional basis. The expenditure to date for the area is £10,181. There is currently one member of staff employed in the Doncaster/Rotherham area on a casual basis and there are three officers employed on fixed term contracts. The number of claims received in the current year (from April to September) is 2231.

I hope this is helpful.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what changes have been introduced or are in the process of being implemented as to grade and level of training for civil servants carrying out good cause interviews. [40973]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 16 October 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the Child Support Agency Good Cause process.

Following the Government's acceptance of the Social Security Select Committee's recommendation that there should be a review of the Good Cause process, the Child Support Agency produced the Good Cause Report on 2 April 1996 which included 24 recommendations.

The Government has accepted all 24 recommendations which included the training and grading requirements as appropriate, for staff involved in the revised Good Cause process.

Action to implement these recommendations is well under way.

I hope this is helpful.

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what procedures will exist to ensure that the opening and sorting of Child Support Agency post by Royal Mail staff will not lead to breaches of confidentiality; and what assessment he has made of the extent to which individual letters have to be read by Royal Mail staff to be effectively sorted. [40985]

Mr. Mitchell: The administration of the Child Support Agency is a matter for the chief executive, Miss Ann Chant. She will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Miss Ann Chant to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 16 October 1996:

I am replying to your Parliamentary Question to the Secretary of State for Social Security about the Child Support Agency post opening arrangements.

Following a feasibility study carried out last year, the Agency decided to contract out its post opening requirements to the Royal Mail.

Client confidentiality is of the utmost importance to the Agency, and was an important consideration in taking this decision. The Agency ran a pilot exercise to test procedures, and issues such as security and client confidentiality.

In providing a sorting service to the Agency, Royal Mail are required merely to scan items of mail to ascertain their correct destination point. This is identical to the procedure previously undertaken by Agency staff. The volumes involved and the large scale use of machinery in the process makes the reading of individual letters and forms an impractical proposition. In addition, all Royal Mail staff are required to sign the Official Secrets Act: just as staff employed by the Child Support Agency.

I hope this is helpful.

Pensioners

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in what ways his Department takes account of the needs of pensioner households mainly dependent on benefits when uprating the old age pension. [41009]

Mr. Burt: Current legislation provides for the annual uprating of the state pension in line with the rise in prices. In this way, we have maintained the value of the state pension to provide a solid foundation for retirement at a time of strong pressure on public spending.

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many pensioners were solely dependent on their old age pension and means-tested benefits in each of the last five years. [41000]

Mr. Burt: The information is in the table.

The table shows estimates of the number and proportion of pensioner couples, single pensioners and all pensioner units who are solely dependent upon income from state retirement pension and income-related benefits.

Pensioner units	1989	1990	1990–91	1992	1993
Single pensioners	790,000 (18 per cent.)	740,000 (17 per cent.)	700,000 (16 per cent.)	670,000 (15 per cent.)	500,000 (11 per cent.)
Pensioner couples	80,000 (3 per cent.)	180,000 (7 per cent.)	150,000 (6 per cent.)	140,000 (5 per cent.	120,000 (4 per cent.)
All pensioner units	880,000 (13 per cent.)	920,000 (13 per cent.)	860,000 (12 per cent.)	800,000 (11 per cent.)	610,000 (9 per cent.)

Notes:
1. Income-related benefits include housing benefit, income support and benefits to pay for local taxes (i.e. rate rebate, community charge benefit and council tax benefit). The Christmas bonus has also been included.
2. All estimates of numbers are shown to the nearest 10,000 pensioner units. A pensioner unit is defined as being either a single person aged over state pension age, or a couple where the head, or husband, is aged over SPA. Percentage estimates are shown to the nearest whole percentile.
3. The Pensioners Income Series gives single calendar estimates. However in 1991 one quarter of the family expenditure survey sample was omitted because of problems following the delayed issue of community charge bills in April 1991. As a result the sample size in that year it too small to provide sufficiently reliable estimates of pensioners' incomes. For this reason the remaining data for 1991 have combined with that for 1990 to produce estimates for the combined calendar years 1990 and 1991.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people are currently in receipt of incapacity benefit; and at what total annual cost. [40848]

Mr. Lilley: At 31 May 1996, the latest date for which figures are available, 1.8 million people were in receipt of incapacity benefit.[1] The estimated cost for the year 1995–96 is £8,120 million.[2]

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many appeals have been lodged against a disallowance of incapacity benefit in the benefits districts covering (a) Doncaster and (b) Mexborough in each quarter since April 1995; how many of these have been from (i) new incapacity benefit claimants and (ii) former claimants of invalidity benefit; in each case, how many appeals have been (x) disallowed, (y) superseded and (z) found in the claimants' favour; and how many are outstanding. [40837]

Mr. Burt: I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people disallowed incapacity benefit have successfully made claims to unemployment benefits or credits of national insurance in the Employment Service in (a) Doncaster and (b) Mexborough districts in each quarter since April 1995. [40841]

Mr. Lilley: The available information is in the tables.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what are his latest estimates of the expenditure on all external consultants, including management consultants, for each year since 1992, in 1996 prices, for his Department and its agencies; and what are the quantified annual cost savings which such expenditure has resulted in. [41187]

Mr. Burt: I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Incapacity Benefit

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many people have undergone the all-work test for incapacity benefit; what were the results of the tests; and how many are now employed.[40843]

Mr. Lilley: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

Income Support

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the percentage level of income support payments that met the target for accuracy in 1991–92 and 1995–96; what are the reasons for variations; and by what date he expects the target for the accuracy of income support payments to be met. [40986]

Mr. Burt: The administration of income support is a matter for Peter Mathison, the chief executive of the Benefits Agency. He will write to the hon. Member.

Letter from Peter Mathison to Ms Liz Lynne, dated 16 October 1996:

The Secretary of State for Social Security has asked me to reply to your recent Parliamentary Question asking what was the percentage level of Income Support (IS) payments that met the target for accuracy in 1991–92 and 1995–96; what are the reasons for variations; and by what date he expects the target for the accuracy of income support payments to be met.

I have provided below the figures for accuracy, including the target set by the Secretary of State and the Benefits Agency achievement for IS for 1991/92 and 1995/96. I should explain that in 1991/92 district staff were responsible for checking and reporting the accuracy for IS. The figures quoted were based on a limited case check carried out on the most recent action on the case. In 1995/96 the target and accuracy figures were based on a full case check involving all aspects of the award. This, in part, accounts for the variation in figures.

The Benefits Agency is committed to improve its accuracy rate and meet the Secretary of State's target. However IS is a complex benefit. For example, on average each IS case needs to be reviewed 4 times per year. Sustained effort over a period of years will be required before a significant and lasting improvement can be achieved. The Agency has a programme of measures designed to bring about improvements in accuracy in the short term and is also undertaking a fundamental review of IS processes and its computer systems. The aim of the review is to improve accuracy, security and efficiency, thereby working towards paying benefit accurately at the outset.

IS—accuracy target and achievement

Percentage

	1991–92	1995–96
Secretary of State's target	94.00	87.00
Agency figure	95.7	78.01

I hope you find this reply helpful.

Performance Targets

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will publish the performance targets for each social security office in the county of South Yorkshire for (a) 1995–1996 and (b) 1996–97; and how many of these targets were achieved in 1995–96 in each case indicating how these targets and achievements relate to those set nationally. [40829]

Mr. Roger Evans: I will write to the hon Member shortly.

Child Care Disregard

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many families now claim the child care disregard. [41018]

Mr Andrew Mitchell: The information is not available in the format requested as information on claims is not available. The latest information on the number of awards where the childcare disregard has resulted in extra benefit payment is in the table:

Benefit	[1]Numbers benefitting from childcare disregard
Family Credit[2]	25,000
Disability Working Allowance[3]	99
Housing Benefit[4]	4000
Council Tax Benefit[4]	5000

Notes:

[1] All figures are rounded to the nearest thousand except Disability Working Allowance which is an exact figure. Numbers exclude cases where maximum benefit is already payable before the childcare disregard.

[2] Family Credit figures as at 31 May 1996.

[3] Disability Working Allowance figures as at 30 April 1996.

[4] Housing Benefit/Council Tax Benefit as at 31 May 1995.

Sources:

1. Family Credit Statistics Quarterly Enquiry (5 per cent. sample).
2. Disability Working Allowance 100 per cent. count of all claims.
3. Housing Benefit Management Information System, annual 1 per cent. sample enquiry for those not in receipt of Income Support taken at the end of May 1995.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the Government's original estimate of the number of families who would be eligible for the child care disregard. [40892]

Mr. Mitchell: The original estimate was that, in the long term, 150,000 families would benefit from the child care disregard.

Executive Agency Staff

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security if he will list the number of staff employed by his Department's (a) Benefits Agency, (b) Contributions Agency, (c) Information Technology Service Agency, (d) Child Support Agency, (e) War Pensions Agency and (f) other agencies in (i) Doncaster and (ii) Mexborough areas for each of the last five years. [40891]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table:

	Doncaster	Mexborough
Benefits agency	349	29
Contributions agency	29	0
Information technology services agency	0	0
Child support agency	20	0
Total	398	29

Notes:

1. The figures are represented as staff in post figures and include permanent and fixed term appointment staff as at 31 March 1996. Casual staff are excluded.
2. Figures for previous years are not available.
3. The sites covered by the reply are Doncaster Crossgates House and Mexborough Crown Buildings.

National Insurance Records

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security on how many occasions in the last 10 years national insurance records have been mislaid; what back-up system was available in each case; and how secure is the current computer system. [40842]

Mr. Burt: There have been no instances of loss of registered national insurance records within the last 10 years. The back-up system consists of holding two copies of records within the computer installation and one copy remotely for added security. The computer system is regarded as very secure in protecting records and has a sophisticated series of computer program checks to detect corruption and loss of personal data.

New Buildings and Premises

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the total expenditure on new buildings and premises by his Department and its agencies; and if he will indicate the square footage of new office space purchased or newly rented in each of the last five years. [41138]

Mr. Burt: The information is not available in the format requested. Such information as is available is in the table.

£ million

Year	Maintenance	Accommodation capital	Total
1995–96	36.6	89.3	125.9
1994–95	32.1	89.1	121.1
1993–94	28.3	97.1	125.3
1992–93	39.4	113.3	152.8
1991–92	32.9	127.6	160.5

Information required regarding the square footage of new office space purchased or newly rented in each of the last five years could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Benefits

Mr. Hain: To ask the Secretary of state for Social Security what has been the total value of in-work benefits paid for each year since 1990–91; and if he will break down these figures for each year by family credit, housing benefit, income support, council tax benefit and disability working allowance. [40901]

Mr. Roger Evans: I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the benefit bill for (a) income support, (b) family credit, (c) housing benefit, (d) council tax benefit, (e) one-parent benefit and (f) lone-parent premium for lone parents (i) in the last year for which figures are available and (ii) in each of the last five years. [41026]

Mr. Andrew Mitchell: Information for (a) to (e) is shown in the table 1. Expenditure on the lone–parent premium (f) is not available in the format requested. Components of a benefit award cannot be separately identified. Lone-parent premium is payable with income support, housing benefit and council tax benefit. The lone-parent premium has varied since in April 1990. The rate of premium would give implied expenditure in Great Britain as shown in the table 2. However, some recipients will receive an overall amount of benefit which is less than the value of the premium.

Table 1: Benefit expenditure on lone parents

Housing benefit (c)	30	37	44	54	63	75
CCB/council tax benefit (d)	46	45	45	47	57	68

Notes:

1. The above estimates are based on sample data and are not entirely consistent with Departmental Report figures.
2. Council tax benefit replaced community charge benefit in April 1993.

Social Fund

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many applicants were refused a social fund loan on the grounds of inability to pay in 1995–96. [41291]

Mr. Roger Evans: I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Combined Heat and Power

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what capacity of electricity used in his Department's buildings is generated in a combined heat and power plant; and what plans he has to increase that capacity. [41314]

Mr. Burt: I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Sick Pay

Mr. Dunn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what plans he has to go ahead with that proposal to free employers from operating statutory sick pay rules where they pay more generous wages or occupational sick pay. [41276]

Mr. Lilley: I will be laying regulations later in the year which will free employers from the obligation to make SSP calculations where they pay contractual remuneration as good as or better than SSP for a period of incapacity for work. Around 900 copies of the consultation paper "Exempting Employers from Statutory Sick Pay (SSP)" were sent to employers, their organisations, employees' organisations and other interested parties and I am grateful to all those who responded. I am placing a copy of the responses in the Library. The majority view was that the new arrangements would be a useful easement. The change, which will take effect from April 1997, will allow greater flexibility to employers and cut back on administration. Employees' underlying entitlement to SSP will not be affected.

Disabled People (Water)

Mr. Soley: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what financial assistance is available to the severely disabled and their carers who use water meters, and because of their disability or medical condition, have to use large quantities of water. [41281]

Mr. Burt: I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Fraud Hotline

Mr. Denham: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security what was the cost, by (a) county and (b) parliamentary constituency of publicising the fraud hotline; and what was the number of responses (a) by county and (b) by parliamentary constituency. [41327]

Mr. Heald: I will write to the hon. Member shortly.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security how many answers to (a) written and (b) oral parliamentary questions have required correction by his Department in each of the past two years. [40641]

Mr. Burt: The information is in the table.

Session	Total number of questions	Corrections to written questions	Corrections to oral questions
1994–95	2,750	20	0
1995–96	2,808	12	2

Child Benefit

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Social Security in respect of how many (a) 16-year-olds and (b) 17-year-olds child benefit was paid in the first week of January for each year since 1985. [40760]

Mr. Burt: The information is set out in the table.

Year	Children 16-year-olds	17-year-olds
1984	531	292
1985	517	291
1986	513	287
1987	521	289
1988	520	317
1989	493	324
1990	490	329
1991	505	358
1992	517	373
1993	514	387
1994	535	386
1995	576	400

1. Figures represent the number of children for whom child benefit was paid as at 31 December in each year.
2. The figures for 1984 to 1993 are based on a 4 per cent. sample. 1994 and 1995 are based on a 1 per cent. sample. Figures include late notifications received up to and including 31 March of the following year.
3. Figures including children in Great Britain and overseas.

HEALTH

Yorkshire Regional Health Authority

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health who was the relevant regional general manager prior to Mr. McClean's appointment to the Yorkshire regional health authority; and who authorised the provision of a free private use car to Mr. McClean's predecessor. [40118]

Mr. Malone: The predecessor of Mr. McClean was Mr. A. W. Foster. Authorisation for the arrangements concerning the use of Mr. Foster's car was given by the director of personnel of the regional health authority.

Blood Transfusion Services

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what plans he has to increase co-operation between the national blood transfusion service and the Scottish National Blood Transfusion Service; and if he will make a statement. [40774]

Mr. Horam: The National Blood Authority and the Scottish National Blood Transfusion Service are responsible respectively for blood services in England and in Scotland. They co-operate with each other as necessary in providing those services.

Lead

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the Government's current recommended safety levels for lead (a) in air and (b) in blood for (i) children, (ii) young people aged 16 to 18 years, (iii) women of child-bearing age, (iv) pregnant women and (v) men. [41120]

Mr. Horam: The current ambient air quality standard for lead is 2 microgrammes per cubic metre as an annual average.

There is no blood lead level that is considered completely safe although there is no clear evidence of harm at level below 10 microgrammes per decilitre of blood. It is for this reason that the policy of successive Governments has been to reduce exposure to lead, from all sources, whenever reasonably practical. Measures taken to date have produced a very substantial fall in blood lead levels in the past two decades as shown by various surveys including the health survey for England.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the average level of lead in the blood of (a) children, (b) young people aged 16 to 18 years (c) women of child bearing age, (d) pregnant-women and (e) men in the United Kingdom. [41121]

Mr. Horam: A major blood lead monitoring programme was carried out as part of the health survey for England. The initial findings show a significant fall in blood lead concentrations. The median blood lead concentrations for men, women, and boys and girls aged 11 to 15 years, were 3.6, 2.6, 2.2 and 1.7 microgrammes per decilitre respectively. Results from this survey were published in a letter in the 5 October edition of the British Medical Journal.

Fostering Allowance

Mr. Thurnham: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the fostering allowance payable in each local authority area. [40827]

Mr. Burns: This information is not collected centrally.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the health service projects in South Yorkshire in respect of which (a) successful and (b) unsuccessful efforts have been made to pursue funding under the private finance initiative since 1 January 1995. [40996]

Mr. Horam: Two projects valued at more than £1 million have received approval under the private finance initiative in South Yorkshire since 1 January 1995. They are: Rotherham General Hospitals national health service trust—concourse development value £1.1 million; Rotherham General Hospitals national health service trust; clinical waste incinerator, value £3.4 million.

Information on unsuccessful schemes and lower value schemes is not held centrally.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information he has collated regarding expenditure incurred by each health authority and NHS hospital trust in South Yorkshire in unsuccessfully pursuing funding for projects through the private finance initiative since 1 January 1995; and if he will make a statement. [40997]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Birmingham, Northfield (Mr. Burden) on 17 July, Official Report, column 562.

Further information is not available centrally.

Health Service Staff Dismissals

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list (a) the number of (i) medical, (ii) dental and (iii) nursing staff suspended or dismissed in the Trent region for each year since 1 January 1993 and (b) the number of staff in each category heard by disciplinary hearing who were not so suspended or dismissed in this period. [40928]

Mr. Horam: National health service bodies are separate, autonomous employers and the decision on whether an employee's conduct warrants disciplinary action, and its severity, is a matter for the health authority or trust concerned. Information collected centrally from national health service employers is the number of suspensions of hospital and community medical and hospital dental staff lasting more than six months since 31 March 1995. The number of reported cases in the Trent region from 31 March 1995 to 30 June 1996 is two.

New Buildings and Premises

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the total expenditure on new buildings and premises by his Department and its agencies; and if he will indicate the square footage of new office space purchased or newly rented in each of the last five years. [41143]

Mr. Horam: From 1 April 1996, the Department of Health took over responsibility for its buildings from Property Holdings. The area of buildings leased by Property Holdings in the last five years which are now the responsibility of the Department of Health and its agencies is 21,400 sq m—1992–93—and 850 sq m—1995–96.

Expenditure on new buildings and premises is not separately recorded from other building-related costs.

Abortion

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will introduce legislation to ban the use of partial birth abortion in late pregnancy; and if he will make a statement. [40954]

Mr. Horam: We are not aware of this procedure being used in the United Kingdom. Methods of abortion are a matter of clinical judgment.

Adoption

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many children were placed for adoption with their existing foster carers in every year since 1987 giving (a) the age of the children and (b) the length of time in foster care prior to adoption; [40960]

(2) if he will list the number of adoption breakdowns in each year since 1974, indicating the (a) ages of children and (b) length of time in adoptive family. [40942]

Mr. Burns: The information requested is not held centrally.

Ms Coffey: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the number of children in care and looked after by local authorities who were placed for adoption in every year since 1987, broken down by age. [40953]

Mr. Burns: The information requested, as at 31 March in each of the years to 31 March 1991, was published annually in "Children in Care of Local Authorities in England". Figures for the period from 1992 to 1994 were published annually in "Children Looked After by Local Authorities, England". Figures for the year ending 31 March 1995 were published in the statistical bulletin "Children looked after by local authorities: year ending 31 March 1995, England". Copies of all of these publications are available in the Library.

Joint Ventures

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many joint ventures are currently established between the NHS and the private sector in hospitals covering the Trent region; and if he will list each project indicating the hospital involved. [40994]

Mr. Horam: Four private finance initiative schemes over the value of £1 million have been approved in the Trent region. The trusts and schemes approved by the national health service executive are as follows:

NHS body	Scheme
Rotherham general hospital	Concourse development
Rotherham general hospital	Clinical waste incinerator
Nottingham ambulance service	Radio replacement scheme
Leicester mental health services NHS trust (trust HQ)	Office accommodation

Dedicated Case Managers

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make it his policy to collate centrally information on the locations of dedicated case managers for (a) head injury, (b) cancer and (c) fertility patients; and if he will make a statement. [40834]

Mr. Horam: No.

Beta Blocking Drugs

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 15 July, Official Report, column 386, about the cost per patient per month of beta blocking drugs, in what form the information is available. [40989]

Mr. Malone: The net ingredient cost per prescription item dispensed for beta blockers in England for 1995 was £5.81. Most repeat prescriptions will be for one to three months.

GP Fundholding

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current percentage of patients in the Doncaster health authority who are covered by general practitioner fundholders. [40855]

Mr. Malone: Some 64 per cent. of the population of Doncaster health authority is currently served by a general practitioner fundholding practice.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much was spent by the Doncaster health authority in (a) 1995–96 and (b) 1994–95 on (i) tendering for services and (ii) administering the general practitioner fundholding scheme; and what were the comparable figures for the previous financial year. [40925]

Mr. Malone: Information is not collected centrally in the form requested.

Waiting Times

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the median waiting periods (a) currently and (b) in each of the last two years for patients needing (i) hip replacements and (ii) cataract treatment at each hospital in the Trent region where the operation is provided. [40924]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Southwark and Bermondsey (Mr. Hughes), on 23 July, Official Report, column 225.

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on hospital waiting times in Leeds. [41287]

Mr. Horam: Waiting times for in-patient and day case treatment in Leeds have improved considerably over the last year. Latest published figures show that only 51 patients out of 16,268 were waiting more than a year for treatment at the two main hospitals in Leeds this March compared with 675 out of 13,492 last March. Along with the rest of the country, Leeds hospitals are working towards achieving the patients charter standards for the first out-patient appointments so that everyone is seen within 26 weeks of referral by their general practitioner, with nine out of 10 patients seen within 13 weeks.

Children's Services

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what re-assessment has been made of the calculations of the standard spending assessment for children's services for the financial year 1997–98; what was the assessed figure for the London borough of Newham for the year 1996–97 and that for 1997–98 under this assessment. [40839]

Mr. Burns: For 1996–97, the standard spending assessment—SSA—for children's social services for the London borough of Newham is £27.191 million. The Government's proposals for 1997–98 SSAs are expected to be issued for consultation shortly after the Budget.

Anti-psychotic Drugs

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, (1) pursuant to his answer of 23 July, Official Report, column 216, if he will list the research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into the likelihood of developing tardive dyskinesia as a result of taking anti-psychotic drugs and ascertaining whether tardive dyskinesia is an irreversible condition; and if he will make a statement; [40860]

(2) if he will estimate how many people have developed tardive dyskinesia as a result of taking anti-psychotic drugs; and if he will make a statement. [40863]

Mr. Burns: I will write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people are currently prescribed anti-psychotic drugs; and if he will make a statement. [40862]

Mr. Malone: Information in the form requested is not available.

Private Medical Insurance

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many people he estimates were covered by private medical insurance in (a) 1979, (b) 1989 and (c) 1995. [40998]

Mr. Horam: The Department does not collect this information.

Management and Administrative Staff Costs

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for the (a) Doncaster Royal Infirmary and Mexborough Montagu NHS trust and (b) Doncaster Healthcare NHS trust the (i) total income, (ii) amount spent on the overall cost of management, staff, administrative staff and board members and (iii) (ii) as a percentage of (i) in each year since 1991–92. [40909]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the annual reports of the Doncaster Royal Infirmary and Mexborough Montagu and the Doncaster Healthcare national health service trusts respectively, published since September 1993.

Managers

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of (a) managers and (b) senior managers employed by (i) each South Yorkshire health authority, (ii) each South Yorkshire health trust and (iii) in total, in each year since 1979. [40991]

Mr. Horam: I will write to the hon. Member.

GP Lists

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are the recommendations issued by his Department in respect of homeless people being placed on a general practitioner's list; up to how many refusals a homeless person may receive before he is placed on a general practitioner's list; and if he will make a statement. [40969]

Mr. Malone: A permanent address is not necessary for the registration of a patient with a general practitioner and all health authorities and general practitioners are aware of this. The Department encourages the permanent registration of homeless people wherever possible. Should, however, any patient have difficulty in registering with a doctor, health authorities have the power to assign the patient to a GP.

Voluntary Gender Reassignment

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the current maximum age for voluntary gender reassignment on the national health service for (a) males and (b) females. [40859]

Mr. Horam: There are no clinically effective treatments provided under the national health service that should be withheld from any patient on age grounds alone. The NHS provides services for everybody on the basis of clinical need.

Dental Health

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what number of teeth affected by decay in five-year-old children, and what number of decayed, missing and filled teeth in 14-year-old children are currently found in the Doncaster health authority area; and what is the national average for each category. [40999]

Mr. Malone: The most recent figures available show that the number of decayed, missing and filled teeth—DMFT—for five-year-olds in Doncaster in 1993–94 was 2.15, while the national average was 1.74; and the DMFT figure for 14-year-olds in Doncaster in 1994–95 was 2.32 while the national average was 1.67.

Mentally Handicapped Children

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many mentally handicapped children are currently in NHS hospital care in (a) the Trent region and (b) nationally; and what were the equivalent figures in each of the past four years. [40923]

Mr. Burns: I will write to the hon. Member.

Methicillin Resistant Staphylococcus Auraus

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the hospitals in South Yorkshire that have recorded incidents of MRSA since 1990; and how many patients suffered in each incident. [40992]

Mr. Horam: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave the hon. Member for Wakefield (Mr. Hinchliffe) on 28 February, Offical Report columns 569–70.

Nurses

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list the number of nurses employed by each of the health authorities in South Yorkshire for each of the last five years; and what was the national average for each health authority in this period. [40995]

Mr. Horam: I will write to the hon. Member.

Nursery Places

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is the estimate for unmet need for nursery places in England. [41044]

Mr. Burns: This information is not held centrally. Information on the percentage of children attending each type of pre-school day care facility was published in the Office of Population Censuses and Survey survey of "Day care services for children", 1990, a copy of which is available in the Library.

Resource Allocation

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he plans to publish the official Government response to the Health Committee report into resource allocation. [41238]

Mr. Dorrell: The response to the report has been published today and copies placed in the Library.

Intensive Care Beds

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many beds there are in intensive care units in Leeds infirmary, St. James' hospital, Leeds and Pinderfields hospital, Wakefield. [41285]

Mr. Horam: Information on the daily number of available beds by ward classification is collected annually from each trust. The latest published information shows that in 1994–95, the average daily number of available beds in wards classified as adult intensive care were as follows:

United Leeds Teaching Hospitals National Health Service Trust: 28

St. James' University Hospital National Health Service Trust: 9

Pinderfields Hospital National Health Service Trust: 27

Notes:

1. Figures on numbers of beds by trust are published annually in 'Bed Availability for England' copies of which are available in the Library. Data for 1995–96 is available from 17 October 1996.

2. The figures above exclude intensive care cots and paediatric intensive care beds.

NHS Staff

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many doctors and nurses have been employed in NHS hospitals in (a) West Yorkshire and (b) Leeds since 1990; and how many vacancies for doctors and nurses in West Yorkshire and Leeds remain unfilled at the present. [41289]

Mr. Hroam: I will write to the hon. Member.

Combined Heat and Power

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what capacity of electricity used in his Department's buildings is generated in a combined heat and power plant; and what plans he has to increase that capacity. [41322]

Mr. Horam: At present, no electricity used by the Department in its buildings is generated by a local combined heat and power plant.

One building, Richmond house in Whitehall, is connected to the Whitehall district heating system. It is proposed to convert the WDHS to a combined heat and power plant during the summer of 1997.

The energy requirements of the Department are kept under review and any opportunities to connect departmental buildings to a combined heat and power plant will be actively considered.

Coproxamol

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health under what names drugs containing coproxamol are marketed; and what is its concentration in each. [40608]

Mr. Malone: Coproxamol is authorised to be marketed under five names: distalgesic, cosalgesic tablets, co-proxamol tablets, co-proxamol tablets BP and co-proxamol tablets (paracetamol 325 mg dextro-propoxyphene 32.5 mg). All of these contain 32.5 mg dextropropoxyphene and 325 mg paracetamol.

Promotional Expenditure

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how much his Department has spent on (a) publicity, (b) promotions, and (c) hospitality in each of the last six years. [40626]

Mr. Horan: Annual publicity spend information and hospitality spend for the financial years 1990–91 to 1995–96 is shown in the table. Promotions cannot easily be separated from publicity but the majority of health promotion work is in any case carried out by the Health Education Authority and other bodies.

Paracetamol

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health under what names drugs containing paracetamol are marketed; and what is its concentration in each. [40609]

Mr. Malone: A list of the names of the 490 products containing paracetamol currently authorised for marketing, together with the content of paracetamol in each, will be placed in the Library.

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what is his most recent calculation of the total number of deaths that have been (a) associated with, and (b) attributed to, paracetamol use in each of the past seven years for which records are available. [40606]

Mr. Malone: The number of deaths associated with paracetamol in 1993, 1994 and 1995 reported to the Office of Population Censuses and Surveys—the Office for National Statistics from 1 April 1996 following a merger with the Central Statistical Office—is shown in the table. The data for 1989 to 1992 are published, for each year separately, in table 10 of "Mortality statistics:injury and poisoning, England and Wales", series DH4, Nos. 16–18, copies of which are available in the Library.

For the number of deaths attributed to paracetamol use in the past six years, reported to the Committee on Safety of Medicines, I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave him on 12 February 1996, Official Report, column 462. For the year 1989, no fatal reports associated with the use of paracetamol were received by the Committee on Safety of Medicines.

	1993	1994	1995
Deaths by poisoning—accident	86(27)	94(26)	111(27)
Paracetamol only	44(9)	40(10)	41(6)
Paracetamol with other drugs[1]	42(18)	54(16)	70(21)
Deaths by poisoning - suicide	236(42)	212(25)	239(19)
Paracetamol only	67(7))	68(5)	77(2)
Paracetamol with other drugs[1]	169(35)	144(20)	162(17)
Deaths by poisoning—undetermined	130(25)	147(27)	218(30)
Paracetamol only	62(6)	52(5)	72(1)
Paracetamol with other drugs[1]	68(19)	95(22)	146(29)

[1] These include deaths from paracetamol-containing compounds. The figures in brackets include indicate the number of deaths with a mention of alcohol. These bracketed figures are already include in the unbracketed data and should not, therefore, be added to them.

Health Service Deficits

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) if he will list for each district health authority serving the Greater London area for each of the financial years 1996–97 and 1997–98 and subsequent years for which figures can be given (a) the recurrent deficit, (b) the non-recurrent surplus or deficit, (c) movement in balances, (d) the cash deficit and (e) those cash deficits expressed as a percentage of revenue or expenditure; [40794]

(2) when he received the letter dated 31 July from the hon. Member for Newham, South concerning his failure to answer his written question requesting information on health service deficits, of 22 July; when a substantive reply was sent; and for what reason the figures requested were regarded as being unsuitable for publication. [40795]

Mr. Horam: I will reply to the hon. Member as soon as is possible.

Morphine

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what assessment he has made of the effects on the public of potentially addictive drugs containing morphine available without prescription in the past four years. [40607]

Mr. Malone: Medicines containing morphine available without prescription are effective remedies for common complaints such as diarrhoea and cough. The low dose and limited strength allowable without prescription, and the requirement for supply under the supervision of a pharmacist are considered to minimise the potential for addiction. The Medicines Control Agency monitors the safety of all authorised medicines and since October 1992 there has been only one report of a side effect with these products. We are not aware of any significant problem of people misusing these medicines.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health how many answers to (a) written and (b) oral parliamentary questions have required correction by his Department in each of the past two years. [40633]

Mr. Horam: This is a matter of public record.

Salaried General Practices

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what proposals he has to set up schemes for salaried general practice; and if he will make a statement. [40669]

Mr. Malone [holding answer 14 October 1996]: Proposals for the development of primary care health services, including a salaried option for general practitioners, are set out in the White Paper "Choice and Opportunity", Cm 3390, published on 15 October.

Copies have been placed in the Library.

ENVIRONMENT

Environmental Information

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many applications his Department, and non-departmental public bodies and executive agencies which report to his Department, have received for the release of information under the Environmental Information Regulations 1992 since they came into force; how much it has cost the Department to provide the information requested; how many applications for information were refused; what reasons were given for the non-provision of the information; what was the (a) average charge and (b) highest charge made in each year for the provision of information; and what plans he has to review the operation of the regulations. [40342]

Mr. Clappison: No records are kept of the number of applications for information under the Environmental Information Regulations 1992. The Department does not keep central records of the aggregate cost in supplying information nor of any charges levied—the vast majority of requests are met without a charge being levied.

As of April this year, when records were last collated, the Department had refused 33 requests for environmental information. The reasons cited for refusal were non-jurisdictional (1), manifestly unreasonable (3), international relations (3), national defence (3), legal or other proceedings (7), confidential deliberations (4), incomplete document (3), commercial confidentiality (7), contravene existing statutory provision (1), and delay (4).

The operation of the regulations will be reviewed at the end of this year and a report will be submitted to the European Commission.

Prosecutions

Ms Ruddock: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will list the prosecutions carried out in England and Wales by the Environment Agency, in each month from 1 April 1996 to the latest available date, giving in each case the person or company prosecuted, the date and outcome of the prosecution, the nature of the offence, and where relevant, the penalty imposed; [40330]

(2) if he will list the prosecutions carried out by (a) Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution, (b) the National Rivers Authority, (c) the London waste regulation authority and (d) local waste authorities, in each month from 1 January 1995 to 31 March 1996 in England and Wales, giving in each case the person or company prosecuted, the date and outcome of the prosecution, the nature of the offence and, where relevant, the penalty imposed. [40329]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 14 October 1996]: I have placed the following information in the Library of the House: prosecutions carried out by (a) Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution, (b) the National Rivers Authority, and (c) the London waste regulation authority, between 1 January 1995 and 31 March 1996. Data relating to the prosecution activity of the 83 former local waste authorities are not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

I have also placed in the Library of the House information on the prosecutions carried out by the Environment Agency for water quality and integrated pollution control offences from 1 April 1996 to the latest available date. Data relating to prosecutions by the Environment Agency for waste offences are not yet held centrally, although detailed records are held at local level. When the data on waste offences from 1 April 1996 are centrally available, I will write to the hon. Member with them.

Sites of Special Scientific Interest

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many sites of special scientific interest have been destroyed in each of the last 20 years; and how many sites are currently designated. [40359]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 14 October 1996]: Statistical information on damage to SSSIs in Great Britain is set out in the annual reports of the former Nature Conservancy Council. Since 1 April 1991, similar details for England, Scotland and Wales are contained in the annual reports of the country agencies and, for Great Britain, in that of the Joint Nature Conservation Committee. Copies of annual reports are in the Library. As at 31 March 1996, 6,185 sites had been designated.

World Bank and IMF Meetings

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what contribution his Department made to the United Kingdom submissions to the annual meetings of the World bank and International Monetary Fund held in Washington at the start of October; what environmental matters were discussed and decided upon during the meetings; and if he will place in the Library copies of all papers submitted to the meetings with an environmental component. [40652]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 14 October 1996]: Specific environmental issues were not on the formal agenda at the annual meetings of the World bank and International Monetary Fund earlier this month. My right hon. and learned Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer has placed in the Library copies of his speeches to these meetings and copies of the communiqués.

Orton Scar

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will send a representative of his Department on 14 October to Orton scar; and what assessment he has made of the damage to the limestone pavements there. [40720]

Mr. Clappison: None of my officials was available to attend the event at Orton village hall on the 14 October, but I welcome the news that Cumbria county council has secured the future protection of this site. English Nature, the Government's scientific adviser, has examined the site. Although there has been some damage, almost five hectares of pavement will be protected by the new agreement.

Environmental Programmes (Employment)

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the total employment opportunities available from programmes to (a) clean up contaminated land, (b) restore derelict land, (c) protect and promote sites of ecological fragility and special scientific interest and (d) enhance the habitat of protected species in the United Kingdom. [40779]

Mr. Clappison: The information is not held in the form requested.

Environmental Programmes

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what (a) discussions and (b) other contact he has had with the World bank over the implementation of the bank's environmental management and sustainable development programmes; how many officials from his Department are on secondment to the World bank to work on environmental issues; and if he will make a statement on the impact on his departmental policy of the World bank's environmental policy programme. [40604]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 15 October 1996]: Responsibility within government for the World bank rests with the Overseas Development Administration, with which the Department of the Environment co-operates very closely. The Government welcome the steps which the bank has taken to ensure that environmental concerns are properly reflected in its operations and continues to press for further improvements. There are no officials of the Department of the Environment on secondment to the World bank.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many environmental projects his Department co-sponsors with the World bank involving non-governmental organisations; and if he will make a statement on the role of non-governmental environmental and business groups in enhancing the global environment. [40599]

Mr. Clappison [holding answer 14 October 1996]: The Department of the Environment does not co-sponsor any environmental projects with the World bank. As I said in answer to question 40604, responsibility for the World bank rests with the Overseas Development Administration. The Government believe that non-governmental and business groups have an important role to play in supporting sustainable development and in enhancing the global environment and wishes them to develop their role further.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to article 4(4) of Council decision number 46/96 of 27 June, Official Journal of the European Communities No. C 264/28–33, of 11 September, what plans he has to make available new resources for the co-funding of projects studies, non-governmental groups and audits to further the integration of the environmental dimension into sustainable development in industrial developing countries. [40811]

Mr. Clappison: Council regulation 46/96 of 27 June addresses action by the European Community, not member states. However, the Overseas Development Administration funds, and in some cases co-funds, a wide range of projects and studies to help developing countries draw up and implement sustainable development strategies, and to help them tackle specific environmental problems. This includes support to a large number of non-governmental groups. Over £200 million was spent in this way in 1995–96. The ODA also supports work on sustainable development in developing countries through its substantial contributions to European Union development funds and to other multilateral bodies such as the World bank and the global environment facility. All the ODA's work is subject to environmental screening.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consumer research his Department has commissioned since 1990 on the uptake of, and attitude to clean technology by British industry and British exporters, and what are the liaison arrangements between his Department and the appropriate export promotion division of the Department of Trade and Industry and the research council's clean technology unit in respect of the promotion of the expansion of clean technology research, demonstration, development and utilisation. [40765]

Mr. Clappison: My Department, with the Department of Trade and Industry, jointly manages the environmental technology best practice programme and the joint environmental markets unit. These programmes promote better environmental performance, including cleaner technology, and sponsor the environmental industry. Through these programmes, the Departments have undertaken attitude surveys of British industry and maintain close liaison arrangements with the export services of the DTI and the Engineering and Physical Sciences Research Council's clean technology unit.

Planning System Indicators

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment for what reasons the project to provide advice to the departmental planning directorate on the development of strategic indicators for the planning system has fallen behind the schedule established in the departmental "Minis Returns 16 (1995)". [40809]

Sir Paul Beresford: The research project on developing performance indicators for evaluating the effectiveness of planning policy was included, in Minis 16, in the Department's work programme for both 1994–95 and 1995–96. The project was subsequently extended into 1996–97 to provide both the Department and the researchers additional time to address the complex issues involved. It is now due to be completed in November 1996.

Water Quality

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what consultations (a) he and (b) officials of his Department have had in the past year with (i) the World Health Organisation regional office for Europe, (ii) the United Kingdom water research centre at Medmenham and (iii) interested non-governmental environmental organisations, in regard to the effectiveness of the WHO guidelines for drinking water purity as incorporated in the Water Resources Act 1991 and the Environment Act 1995. [40791]

Mr. Clappison: The WHO guidelines for drinking water quality were reviewed and updated in 1993 in the light of new scientific information. The revised guidelines form the basis of many of the standards contained in EC proposal COM (94) 612 final, concerning the quality of water intended for human consumption. My officials have consulted widely on the Commission's proposal for a revised drinking water directive. The consultations have involved among others, WRC Medmenham plc and numerous non-governmental organisations, including Friends of Earth and Greenpeace.

Business Pressures

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the negative effects of short-term business pressures on strategic thinking and cross-departmental work co-operation. [40808]

Mr. Gummer: A review conducted in 1995 concluded that my Department should improve its strategic approach to policy development and advice, which can all too easily suffer because of short-term pressures of work. Various steps have been taken to bring about such an improvement.

Thermal Oxide Reprocessing Plant

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has received from British Nuclear Fuels concerning variation in the discharge authorisation for nuclear waste from the THORP facility. [40799]

Mr. Clappison: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave on this subject on 14 October column 825.

Uranium Waste

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps have been taken to isolate and package pyrophoril uranium wastes at British Nuclear Fuels, Sellafield and Chapelcross plants since 1966. [40806]

Mr. Clappison: Any steps taken are a matter for BNFL subject to satisfying the regulatory requirements of the nuclear installations inspectorate.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the implications for Her Majesty's Government's policy on substitution for the return of radioactive waste to countries of origin after reprocessing of the European Council written reply H629/96 of 18 September on this issue. [40810]

Mr. Clappison: None. The assertion that

"BNFL is now considering the permanent on-site storage at Sellafield of high-level waste from the THORP plant, rather than returning it to foreign customers in Japan and Germany" as contained in the question answered on 18 September H629/96 is incorrect.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment he has made of the extent to which the sight ion exchange extraction plant—SIXEP—and the enhanced actinide removal plant—EARP—waste filtration plants servicing the thermal oxide reprocessing plant facility at Sellafield have met their planned operational functions. [40800]

Mr. Clappison: The operation of the SIXEP and EARP plants has been closely monitored by the Environment Agency, and previously Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution, since the plants came into operation. This monitoring has revealed that the two plants have met and some cases exceeded planned operational functions. The agency is continuing to monitor plant performance.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what resources are available to the Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee to commission independent scientific, technical or other relevant support studies from institutes or academic establishments. [40804]

Mr. Clappison: Members of the Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee are appointed for their ability to advise the Secretaries of State for the Environment, for Scotland and for Wales directly. Any additional advice required would normally be commissioned by the Government themselves. However, RWMAC is able to request resources to commission studies on an ad hoc basis.

The committee is currently undergoing a financial management and policy review. The prior options stage of this review will consider whether there is a continued need for the operation of RWMAC. If it is decided that the committee should continue, the second stage of the review will consider its structure and operation. This will include examination of the resources available to the committee.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to extend the remit of RWMAC to oversee the expenditure of public money by public companies and organisations charged with the management of nuclear waste. [40803]

Mr. Clappison: The Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee is currently undergoing a financial management and policy review. The prior options stage of this review will consider whether there is a continued need for the operation of RWMAC. If it is decided that the committee should continue, the second stage of the review will consider its structure and operation. This will include examination of the scope of the committee's remit.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what environmental policies are in place to cover the management of separated plutonium and plutonium contaminated wastes at nuclear facilities in the United Kingdom. [40805]

Mr. Clappison: Plutonium contaminated wastes are managed in accordance with the same policies that apply to all radioactive wastes. These are set out in the White Paper "Review of Radioactive Waste Management Policy—Final Conclusions", 1995, Cm 2919.

Separated plutonium is not designated as waste at United Kingdom facilities. It is managed through safeguards applied to nuclear materials under chapter VII of the Euratom treaty, and through voluntary agreements which the United Kingdom has under the International Atomic Energy Agency's safeguards regime.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to request the Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee to prepare guidance on the optimum environmental strategy on the handling, packaging, storage and disposal of plutonium designated as waste at United Kingdom facilities. [40802]

Mr. Clappison: There is no plutonium designated as waste at United Kingdom facilities.

Policy Documents (Implementation)

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for Environment what factors led to his Department's delayed implementation of the principles published in the Government documents "Appraisal and the Environment" and "Making Markets Work for the Environment"; and what has been done to rectify the delay. [40790]

Mr. Clappison: The principles set out in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" relate to the integration of environmental considerations into the formulation of policies, programmes and projects, through the use of appraisal methodology. An evaluation of the extent to which the "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" guidelines have been adhered to across Whitehall was to be undertaken last year, but had to be postponed due to resource constraints. However, consultants have now been commissioned to undertaken the study and a report is due around the end of the year. The findings should provide a good overview of the extent to which the approach in "Policy Appraisal and the Environment" is being followed, and to comment on this before seeing the report would be to pre-judge the issue. "Making Markets Work for the Environment" is concerned with developing better instruments to deliver environmental and sustainable development policies. The Government are committed to seeking an appropriate balance between direct regulation, economic instruments and voluntary actions, in a way fully consistent with the approach set out in "Making Markets Work for the Environment".

Water Resources and Supply

Mr. Spring: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement about public water resources and supply arrangements in the longer term. [41119]

Mr. Gummer: I commissioned in September 1995 a review of water resources and supply arrangements in England and Wales in the longer term. It has been undertaken with the full involvement of representatives of the water companies and their regulators—the Environment Agency, the Office of Water Services and the drinking water inspectorate. Other organisations have contributed views.

As a result of that work, my Department and the Welsh Office are publishing today a paper entitled "Water Resources and Supply: Agenda for Action". Copies are available in the Library of the House. The paper confirms that the framework within which public water supplies are provided and developed is sound. It discusses the various factors which need to be considered in refining longer-term arrangements and identifies actions which the Government will take, together with actions for the water companies and their regulators.

Prominent among these are steps which should be taken to build upon work on climate change, such as that which informed the report of my Department's climate change impacts review group which was published in July. Reliable yields of existing water resource systems need to be reassessed from recent data and against climate change scenarios. Water companies need to study in more detail how water is used by households and how that may change with changing climate.

Demand on existing water resources needs to be managed in order to reduce the need for new resources. This can be done by encouraging efficient use of water, through the development of effective and equitable charging arrangements for water supply, and by companies reducing leakage to economic levels. Against the background of maximum economic use of demand management and a clear understanding of the capabilities of each discrete water resource and supply system, there needs to be a dialogue between water companies and their customers on the balance to be struck between higher security of supply and higher costs, taking full account of the need for sustainable development.

A case for new water resource development will be compelling only if there is insufficient scope for deployment of existing resources to meet properly-managed demand. Where there are local resource pressures, water companies need to consider the scope for bulk transfers of water or redistribution of water abstraction licences. The Government believe that it is important that market mechanisms, including price signals, provide incentive for this and will publish a consultation paper on economic instruments in relation to water abstraction in early 1997.

The Environment Agency has the central role in the planning of water resources at the national and regional levels. However, water companies have the duty to develop and maintain water supply systems and it is their responsibility, with full involvement of their regulators, to draw up plans for the timely development of new resources if the projected demand for water in particular areas cannot be reasonably or reliably managed to remain within the capacity of all the available existing resources. Where the existing resources are most finely balanced against projected demand increases, new resource planning should proceed in parallel with the continued implementation of measures to meet demand from the existing resources and against the background of continuous review of that balance. Each of these organisations will no doubt publicise its response to those actions in due course.

The paper also draws attention to the various contributions which water companies, manufacturers of water-using equipment and water consumers can all make to the sustainable management of water resources through water conservation. This agenda for action is for us all and outlines a strategy for the environmentally sustainable provision of water supplies in the longer term.

Estuarial Boundaries

Mr. McNamara: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has now revised the report of the National Rivers Authority reviewing estuarial boundaries with special reference to the Humber; and if he will make a statement of its effect on the urban waste water directive. [39910]

Mr. Clappison: My Department is considering the recommendations that the Environment Agency has made and I intend to make an announcement soon.

Environment Agency Guidance

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many sets of guidance have been published by (a) the Environment Agency and (b) its predecessor agencies during 1996; and if he will make a statement on the application of the guidance. [40438]

Mr. Clappison: This information requires compiling from a number of sources. I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

Organophosphates

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what studies have been conducted by (a) his Department and (b) the scientific panel of the Veterinary Products Committee of the environmental implications of the discharge of organophosphate sheep dip effluent into rivers and water courses; and if these studies were published. [40730]

Mr. Clappison: My Department has not carried out any studies, but the Environment Agency, which has statutory powers to protect the aquatic environment, has an on-going research and development programme. As part of this programme, the agency has published two reports "The Disposal of Sheep Dip Waste—Effects on Water Quality" (1994) and "Pesticides in the Aquatic Environment" (1995).

The activities of the Veterinary Products Committee are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans he has to issue guidance to Health and Safety Executive inspectors to apply strict guidelines for the early investigation of incidents involving the alleged misuse of pesticides, including organophosphates. [40731]

Sir Paul Beresford: None. Guidance was issued in November 1993.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many prosecutions have taken place for the misuse of organophosphate pesticides under the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985; how many prosecutions for organophosphate misuse have been made, pursuant to the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations 1988 since they came into force; and what steps have been taken to ensure stricter control over the use of organophosphates. [40735]

Sir Paul Beresford: There have been no prosecutions under the Food and Environment Protection Act 1985 concerning the misuse of organophosphate pesticides. Three prosecutions have been taken under the Control of Substances Hazardous to Health Regulations and three convictions were secured.

The Health and Safety Executive has always strictly enforced health and safety legislation regarding the use of organophosphate pesticides at work. Free guidance has been sent to the agricultural sector and HSE inspectors give advice during workplace visits and, where necessary enforce measures to protect health and comply with FEPA and COSHH. Where significant shortcomings are found, they can issue enforcement notices and, ultimately prosecute.

HSE pursues an effective policy of guidance for prevention. This is considered more effective than regulation enforced by prosecution.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what joint research his Department has conducted with the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food over the environmental implications of the failure of all sheep farmers to enrol in the certificate of competence for the safe use of organophosphate sheep dips under the National Proficiency Test Council [40732]

Mr. Clappison: No joint research has been conducted, but without a certificate of competence, sheep farmers may not purchase organophosphate sheep dips. The certificate, held by over 12,000 sheep farmers, ensures that the holders are aware of the requirements for the safe disposal of sheep dip.

Correspondence (Response Times)

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what has been the change in the time taken to reply to letters from hon. Members in each of the last three years; and what are the reasons for this change. [40659]

Mr. Gummer: The percentage of letters from honourable and right hon. Members replied to within the 15 days deadline in the last three years is as follows:

1995: 52 per cent.

1994: 57 per cent.

1993: 56 per cent.

The slower performance in 1995 resulted from the high pressures on the Department's resources. I am concerned about delays in replying to any letters and a recent departmental review has identified various ways in which performance can be improved.

Ministerial Speeches

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will place in the Library copies of all speeches he made in the week beginning 7 October. [40815]

Mr. Gummer: The main text of my speech during the environment forum of the Conservative party conference and a note on the Government's environmental record that was produced for that are available in the Library. This emphasised the comprehensiveness of the Government's vision for an improved environment for us all, whether in city, town or country.

I also spoke at a number of fringe events about different aspects of current and future Government policies.

Speaking to the agriculture and countryside forum, I set out how Government policies help secure economic development in rural areas in a sustainable manner, and how we are extending our support for key rural services including the isolated village shop.

Speaking at the invitation of the Worldwide Fund for Nature, I demonstrated that the UK is a world leader both in meeting our existing climate change obligations, and in calling for more robust future targets for international action.

Speaking at the invitation of Conservative Students, I showed how active engagement in the European Union enables the Government to achieve a number of important environmental aims which we could not expect to achieve by acting alone.

Finally, I spoke to a meeting of the Conservative political centre on the theme "Town and Townscape—a thousand years of English urban culture". I drew attention to the importance of the town in our history and to the interdependence of urban and rural areas, restated the Government's commitment to strengthening the economy and environmental quality of our existing towns and cities, described how this helped us to realise our sustainable development objectives, and regretted that the official Opposition had signalled their desire to weaken existing support for town centres.

Text or transcripts of these other speeches are not available.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many answers to (a) written and (b) oral parliamentary questions have required correction by his Department in each of the past two years. [40631]

Mr. Gummer: This is a matter of public record.

International Reports

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his Department's policy regarding the assessment of relevant reports jointly produced by the World Health Organisation, World Meteorological Organisation and United Nationals Environment Programme. [40780]

Mr. Clappison: The Department of the Environment always takes into account relevant reports prepared by these organisations.

Green Ministerial Meetings

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many green departmental meetings have been held since 26 July; what matters were (a) discussed and (b) decided; and when the next green ministerial meetings are planned. [40788]

Mr. Clappison: Government Departments' green contacts met on 18 September. They discussed and reached agreement on the draft agenda and the papers to be prepared for the next green Ministers meeting, which will be held on 28 October. Some green contacts met on 23 September to discuss the progress of a consultant's study to evaluate "Policy Appraisal and the Environment".

Asbestos

Mr. Pike: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy to prohibit the use of asbestos in roof tiles. [41083]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Health and Safety Commission, in conjunction with my Department, will include the scope of asbestos prohibitions when reviewing the legislation. No doubt, asbestos-containing roof tiles will form part of this review. I will respond when this advice is received.

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will undertake an evaluation of the effectiveness and independence of asbestos sampling companies. [41106]

Sir Paul Beresford: As part of the Health and Safety Executive's monitoring of the effectiveness of asbestos regulations, the HSE investigates the performances of asbestos sampling companies where appropriate. The Health and Safety Commission's approved codes of practice on asbestos strongly encourage employers to use laboratories that are accredited by the national measurement accreditation service.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he will take to ensure that companies introduce an asbestos control programme in their workplace buildings, along the lines of the Health and Safety Executive booklet, "Managing Asbestos in Workplace Buildings". [41104]

Sir Paul Beresford: This is being promoted though the "Good Health is Good Business" campaign and by the HSE field inspectors during visits to businesses.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will undertake an evaluation of the safety of asbestos respirators. [41108]

Sir Paul Beresford: I refer the hon. Member to the HSE study "Workplace Effectiveness of Respiratory Protective Equipment for Asbestos Removal Work", published in July 1996.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will assess the advantages of introducing a ban on the use of white asbestos in British industry. [41103]

Sir Paul Beresford: Many uses of white asbestos are already prohibited. Whether or not the regulations should be extended will be a matter the Health and Safety Commission will consider in its current review of the legislation on asbestos. I will consider its recommendations carefully.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will undertake a study of the best methods of asbestos removal and sealing techniques. [41107]

Sir Paul Beresford: I do not intend to carry out such a study. The Health and Safety Executive already keeps under review the available techniques for asbestos removal and sealing, and issues guidance as appropriate. For example, HSE inspectors require all those undertaking asbestos removal operations to use controlled wet removal techniques unless it is not reasonably practicable to do so.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will undertake an evaluation of the effectiveness of the asbestos licensing scheme. [41105]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Asbestos (Licensing) Regulations 1983 have been subject to two reviews by the Health and Safety Commission. These reviews found that the regulations have been effective and were working well.

The Health and Safety Commission has also recently completed public consultation on a discussion document which outlined some possible adjustments to the licensing regime. The commission will be considering the results of the consultation, and I will examine any proposals the commission might subsequently make for amendments to legislation.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will undertake an evaluation of the value and purpose of medical examinations for workers who are currently or were previously exposed to asbestos. [41109]

Sir Paul Beresford: I do not intend to carry out such an evaluation. The Health and Safety Commission keeps under review the need for specific provisions of health and safety legislation. [41109]

Drought Orders

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) how many applications for drought orders have been (a) accepted and (b) refused in each of the past 10 years; [40880]

(2) if he will list the drought (a) orders and (b) permits refused in each of the last 10 years. [40881]

Mr. Clappison: The information is as follows:

	Applications received	Orders made[1]	Applications withdrawn	Orders refused
1987	—	—	—	—
1988	—	—	—	—
1989	118	89	27	2
1990	69	65	4	—
1991	33	28	4	1
1992	19	16	3	—
1993	—	—	—	—
1994	2	—	2	—
1995	61	53	8	—
1996	46	40	5	1

[1] A considerable number of the orders were made subject to conditions or amendments either at the recommendation of an Inspector (where a hearing was held) or the Environment Agency (formerly the National Rivers Authority).

The applications for drought orders which have been refused are as follows:

South West Water Authority (Burrator Reservoir)(Drought) Order—refused 15 August 1989

South West Water Authority (River Erme)(Drought) Order—refused 1 September 1989

South West Water Services Ltd. (River Axe)(Drought) Order—refused 1 July 1991

North West Water Ltd. (River Lune)(Drought) Order—refused 12 February 1996

Powers for the Environment Agency to authorise drought permits came into effect on 1 April 1996. As at 15 October 1996, 12 permits have been authorised and none has been refused.

Water Pollution

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will request the Environment Agency to investigate the leakage of chlorinated solvents into water sources close to the Atomic Energy Authority's Harwell science and engineering centre in Oxfordshire. [40441]

Mr. Clappison: The Environment Agency is carrying out an investigation and remedial works are in hand.

Confederation for British Industry

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he last met the CBI's environment and health safety group; and what plans he has for further meetings. [40435]

Mr. Gummer: I keep in close contact with Roderick Paul, the chairman of the CBI's environment committee, through his membership of the UK Round Table on Sustainable Development. Senior officials from my Department also have regular meetings with the CBI's environment, health and safety group. The most recent meeting took place in August.

Geosphere-Biosphere Programme

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what contribution departmental officials make to the global change newsletter of the international geosphere-biosphere programme; and if he will make a statement on the role of the geosphere-biosphere programme in respect of this policy on global climate changes. [40436]

Mr. Clappison: The global change newsletter reports research carried out by the international geosphere biosphere programme core programmes to other researchers and the national and international policy community. In general, departmental officials do not contribute to this newsletter. The UK contributes to the international geosphere biosphere programme through its nationally funded research programmes. Policy on climate change draws on a number of international scientific research programmes including those of the IGBP, largely through the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change's scientific assessments.

World Trade Organisation

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the work done to date in the World Trade Organisation's committee on trade and the environment; and what matters are currently on the committee's agenda for forthcoming meetings. [40437]

Mr. Clappison: The World Trade Organisation's Committee on Trade and the Environment has carried out analytical work in accordance with the decision on trade and environment adopted by Ministers at Marrakesh on 15 April 1994. It is currently preparing its report to Ministers at the conference to be held in Singapore on 9 to 13 December 1996.

Intergovernmental Conference

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what contribution his Department made to the United Kingdom submission on transparency to the intergovernmental conference in July; and if he will make a statement on the impact of the IGC discussions of transparency on his Department's policy. [40439]

Mr. Clappison: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave him on 14 October 1996, column 827.

Campaign for Water Justice

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what meetings he has held in 1996 with representatives of the Campaign for Water Justice. [40646]

Mr. Clappison: My right hon. Friend has held no meetings with representatives of the Campaign for Water Justice to date in 1996.

Promotional Expenditure

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much his Department has spent on (a) publicity, (b) promotions, and (c) hospitality in each of the last six years. [40624]

Sir Paul Beresford: The total figures for publicity, promotional expenditure and hospitality by my Department in each of the financial years requested are detailed.

The figures for central publicity and promotional expenditure include value added tax, advertising agency fees where relevant and all other levies as paid.

Landfill Policy

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what guidance has been published by the Environment Agency on landfill restoration and post-closure site management. [40658]

Mr. Clappison: In August the Environment Agency issued, for public consultation, a draft waste management paper 26E "Landfill Restoration and Post-Closure Management". The deadline for comments on this consultation paper is 18 November. Following this consultation, the Environment Agency will proceed to publish waste management paper 26E, which will provide guidance on landfill restoration and post-closure site management.

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he has had recently with (a) his ministerial counterparts and (b) the European Commission concerning the United Kingdom landfill policy; and if he will make a statement. [40789]

Mr. Clappison: Recently, the United Kingdom's landfill policy has been discussed in the context of the European Commission's communication on the review of the Community strategy for waste management. The Commission's communication suggests that all waste going to landfill should be pre-treated. There is no sound scientific basis to this approach. Landfill when properly engineered and controlled is a viable waste management option for a range of wastes.

The United Kingdom favours the disposal of untreated biodegradable waste to landfill, and the use of the biochemical process engineering—bio-reactor—approach to manage landfill sites. This approach is designed to prevent pollution caused by the degradation process, and to provide conditions in the landfill in which stabilisation of the waste in situ is as rapid as possible. The approach is based on research into landfill practices that the Department of the Environment has sponsored for more than 20 years.

Basel Convention Amendment

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his policy on the 1995 amendment to the Basel convention; and if he will make a statement. [40787]

Mr. Clappison: The Government support the decision, taken at the third conference of the parties to the Basel convention in September 1995, to amend the convention.

European Parliament

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what arrangements he has made to monitor the committee meeting discussions and reports examined at the European Parliament's Committee on Environment, Public Health and Consumer Protection. [40792]

Mr. Clappison: The Department studies the reports of the Committee on Environment, Public Health and Consumer Protection and receives the agendas for committee meetings on a regular basis. Officials from the Department, or the UK permanent representation in Brussels, generally attend these meetings when matters of relevance to the Department are discussed.

Carbon Dioxide Disposal

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he has made an assessment of the Joule II project report No. CT92-0031 on the underground disposal of carbon dioxide. [40814]

Mr. Clappison: Officials in my Department have considered the Joule II report and have been in touch directly with the British Geological Survey which participated in the study. Our assessment is that underground disposal of CO_2 from large sources such as power stations is technically feasible, but costly. The process would add an estimated 40 per cent. or more to the cost of electricity, mainly because of the additional capital expenditure needed at power stations, and the cost of the energy required to extract and dispose of the CO_2.

Hazardous Chemicals and Pesticides

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the reasons for delay in the adoption and implementation of the convention on prior informed consent for hazardous chemical and pesticide trade. [40793]

Mr. Clappison: The intergovernmental negotiating committee for a legally binding instrument on the prior informed consent procedure has held two meetings and at least two more are likely to be required to reach final agreement on the complicated issues involved. In the meantime, the present voluntary procedure will continue to be operated by the United Nations Environment Programme and Food and Agriculture Organisation.

Construction Products (Fire Testing)

Mr. Alex Carlile: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on test procedures for the evaluation of the reaction to fire of construction products. [40748]

Mr. Clappison: The test procedures at present in British standards and which are used to determine the reaction to fire properties of construction products for regulatory purposes are likely to be replaced by a set of new harmonised European test methods as part of the process of enabling the single market in such products. Several dozen different test methods are in use throughout the EU and it is proposed that these should be replaced by five new procedures now under development under the auspices of the European Commission and in CEN, the European standards organisation. Fire experts from the UK are taking an active part in this process.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are his latest estimates of the expenditure on all external consultants, including management consultants, for each year since 1992, in 1996 prices, for his Department and its agencies; and what are the quantified annual cost savings which such expenditure has resulted in. [41179]

Sir Paul Beresford: Expenditure on external consultants since 1992, in 1996 prices, is as follows:

Year	Expenditure £
1992–93	11.4
1993–94	11.1
1994–95	11.8
1995–96	9.2

It is not feasible precisely to quantify savings achieved by consultants since their work is usually only one of several factors leading to total savings achieved by a particular project.

Health and Safety Executive (Free Books)

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many free books were distributed by the books division of the health and safety division each year; to which organisations; what proposals he has to introduce charges for these supplies; and what is the projected potential income per year if payment is required. [41128]

Sir Paul Beresford: Between April 1990 and March 1996 the Health and Safety Executive has issued an average seven million free publications each year. The HSE does not list by category the customers to whom these publications are distributed. The HSE has no plans to charge for such supplies.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what were the costs to the books division of the Health and Safety Executive for each year since 1991 for supplying bulk supplies of free books and leaflets to organisations with charitable status. [41126]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information is not available.

Cricket Stadium, Wakefield

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the issuing of an article 14 directive by his Department's Leeds office to the City of Wakefield metropolitan district council for the outline planning application for a new stadium for Yorkshire county cricket club at Wakefield; and if he will make a statement on the application by Leeds city council for a proposed new county cricket ground at Aberford. [40984]

Sir Paul Beresford: An article 14 direction was issued to Wakefield metropolitan council on 23 July, preventing the council from granting planning permission for the proposed development at Denby Dale road, Wakefield. The Secretary of State is concerned that planning issues of more than local importance may arise from the proposal and he wishes to consider it having regard to his policy on calling-in planning applications. Further information is awaited from the council to enable the Secretary of State to complete this consideration.

Leeds city council is considering a planning application for a cricket ground at Parlington near Aberford. Should the council be minded to grant planning consent, I understand that the application will be referred to the Secretary of State as a departure from the development plan.

Lead

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many people are estimated to work with lead and its compounds in the United Kingdom. [41123]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Health and Safety Executive is aware of approximately 18,000 workers working with lead and its compounds. However, this is probably an underestimate.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what further steps have been taken by the Health and Safety Executive to draw attention to the dangers of working with lead, following the ombudsman report into lead poisoning at Stallite Batteries, Yorkshire in 1990. [41122]

Sir Paul Beresford: As a direct result of the ombudsman report, the operation of the appointed doctor system has been improved. Guidance for appointed doctors has been updated.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many (a) improvement notices, (b) prohibition notices and (c) fines have been issued in each year since the lead regulations became law in 1981; and if he will indicate the average amount for fines. [41125]

Sir Paul Beresford: Table A gives the number of improvement and prohibition notices issued under the Control of Lead at Work Regulations 1980 by the Health and Safety Executive since 1986. Figures for earlier years are not readily available. Table B gives the number of convictions and average fines for the same years.

Table A: Control of Lead at Work Regulations 1980 Enforcement notices issued by HSE's field operations division inspectorates 1986–87 to 1995–96 [1]

Planning Policy

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what priority he attaches to the achievement of sustainable patterns of development and the maintenance of long-term green belt boundaries as set out in PPG13 and PPG2 when he considers local plans as they relate to the green belt; and if he will make a statement. [41056]

Sir Paul Beresford: The fundamental aim of green belt policy is to prevent urban sprawl. Green belts can assist in moving towards more sustainable patterns of development. Their boundaries should be altered only in exceptional circumstances. PPG2 advises on the possible need to safeguard land for longer-term development needs, taking account of sustainable development, and on relating such land to public transport infrastructure.

The Secretary of State examines development plans carefully to identify whether their scope reflects national and regional planning guidance and whether there are conflicts which do not appear to be justified by local circumstances. If necessary, he will make a formal intervention.

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he is taking to ensure that adopted local plans comply with Government policy as expressed in the most recent planning policy guidance notes; and if he will make a statement. [41057]

Sir Paul Beresford: Section 54A of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990 requires that where, in making a determination under the planning Acts, regard is to be had to the development plan, a planning decision shall be made in accordance with the adopted or approved plan for the area, unless material considerations indicate otherwise. The Secretary of State expects local planning authorities to keep their local plans under review to ensure they remain up to date and appropriate documents for taking decisions on land use in their area. Where new or revised government policy is issued after a local plan has been adopted, local planning authorities are expected to consider such policies when the plan is reviewed. However, expressions of Government planning policy, for example in planning policy guidance notes or circulars, are capable of being a material consideration which must also be taken into account, where relevant, by the local authority in taking decisions on planning applications.

Occupational Injuries

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many serious injuries at work, involving three or more days absence from work, occurred in each of the last five years. [41133]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Reporting of Injuries, Diseases and Dangerous Occurrences Regulations 1985 required responsible persons—principally, employers and self-employed people—in most industries to report to the health and safety enforcing authorities work-related accidents to employees or self-employed people resulting in: death, major injury as defined in the regulations; or incapacity to do normal work for more than three days. Similar, but separate reporting requirements applied to the railway and offshore industries.

The total number of accidents reported for all industries in each of the last five years are as follows:

Injuries to workers[1] reported to enforcing authorities 1991–92 to 1995–96[2]

Year	Fatal	Major[4]	Over three days[5]	Total
1991–92	368	18,698	154,338	173,404
1992–93	339	18,053	143,283	161,675
1993–94	296	17,979	137,459	155,734
1994–95	272	18,354	142,218	160,844
1995–96[2]	256	17,571	132,359	150,186

[1] Includes employees, trainees and self-employed persons.
[2] Provisional.
[3] Years commencing 1 April.
[4] Injuries that result in hospitalisation for more than 24 hours.
[5] Any injury resulting in incapacity to perform normal work for more than three days.

Animal Remains, Penistone

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the result of the examination by Doncaster museum of the remains of a body of an animal found on land at Flouch, near Penistone, South Yorkshire in August; and if he will make a statement. [40966]

Mr. Clappison: I will write to the hon. Member.

New Buildings and Premises

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the total expenditure on new buildings and premises by his Department and its agencies; and if he will indicate the square footage of new office space purchased or newly rented in each of the last five years. [41145]

Sir Paul Beresford: I will write to the hon. Member.

Planning Inquiries

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what procedures should be adopted when new Government guidance is issued following the close of a local planning inquiry but before the adoption of that plan; how the public and participants in the inquiry are to be kept informed and involved; and if he will make a statement. [41058]

Sir Paul Beresford: If new Government guidance is issued following the close of a local plan inquiry, but before the planning inspector issues his report, that new guidance will be taken into account by the inspector in making his recommendations. In considering the inspector's recommendations, the local planning authority will decide what formal modifications need to be made to the plan. If new guidance is issued after the inspector's report has been received by the local authority, then the authority will need to decide how it intends to take on board the new guidance through formal modifications to the plan. The processes involved in making modifications to the plan, and in keeping the public and participants in the inquiry informed, are detailed in the Town and Country Planning (Development Plan) Regulations 1991, and in the code of practice on development plans, issued by my Department as a booklet, "Development Plans: What you need to know". However, planning policy guidance note 12, paragraph 4.19 makes it clear that where new information becomes available at a late stage in the plan adoption process, and modification would only delay implementation of proposals not affected by the new information, it may be preferable to adopt the plan and start an early review.

Deaths at Work

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many deaths at work occurred in each of the last five years; how many cases the Health and Safety Executive has referred to the Crown Prosecution Service for consideration of manslaughter charges; how many prosecutions took place; and how many were successful. [41132]

Sir Paul Beresford: The number of deaths at work reported to all enforcing authorities, including local authorities, in each of the last five years is as follows:

	Deaths at work
1991–92	473
1992–93	452
1993–94	403
1994–95	376
1995–96[1]	338

[1] Provisional.

The number of cases investigated by the Health and Safety Executive which have been referred to the Crown Prosecution Service since April 1992 for consideration of possible manslaughter charges, and the outcome, is as follows:

Year[1]	Number of cases referred to CPS	Prosecutions for manslaughter started by CPS	Guilty verdicts
1992–93	12	2	—
1993–94	5	1	1
1994–95	12	4	1
1995–96	9	2	1
1996–97	2	—	—
Totals	40	9	3

[1] Information for previous years is available only at disproportionate cost.

Contaminated Land

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the results of his Department's liaison with the Department of Trade and Industry in respect of compensation to English Partnerships relating to the clean-up of contaminated land used for coal extraction. [40962]

Sir Paul Beresford: I hope that an announcement can be made shortly.

Mr. McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many sentences in cases where companies were found guilty under health and safety law following the death at work of an employee, involved imprisonment; and how many resulted in fines of (a) less than £5,000, (b) £5,000 to £10,000, (c) £10,000 to £50,000 and (d) more than £50,000. [41134]

Sir Paul Beresford: Of the three cases in which people have been sent to prison following convictions under health and safety at work law, none followed a work-related death.

The other information requested is available only at disproportionate cost.

Housing Association Statistics

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many housing association houses were built in each South Yorkshire local authority in each of the last four years. [40965]

Mr. Clappison: Estimates of dwellings completed by housing associations in each local authority area in England are shown in the publication "Local Housing Statistics". Figures for the years 1992, 1993, 1994 and 1995 are in issue numbers 109, 110, 117 and 118 respectively.

While these figures cover newly built accommodation, housing associations have also provided additional social lettings by the rehabilitation of existing properties and the various home incentive schemes, whose relative importance has been growing with the greater emphasis being placed on making more effective use of existing stock.

Display Screen Equipment Regulations

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he estimates he will publish the results of the review of the display screen equipment regulations; and if he will make a statement. [40849]

Sir Paul Beresford: The results of the review of the Health and Safety (Display Screen Equipment) Regulations 1992 are still being considered. As soon as this is completed, I hope the Health and Safety Commission will be able to publish the report.

Sewerage Systems

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make a statement on the terms of reference of the committee reviewing the current revision of water byelaws and regulations with particular reference to setting standards for the construction and maintenance of sewerage systems. [40882]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: The Water Regulations Advisory Committee's terms of reference are to advise the Secretary of State for the Environment on the requirements for plumbing installations and fittings to be included in water regulations made under powers in section 74 of the Water Industry Act 1991 and on other technical matters connected with the regulations.

As provided for under section 74, the regulations will deal with contamination, waste, undue consumption and misuse of water in premises; they will not set standards for the construction and maintenance of sewerage systems.

The extension of the current water byelaws, membership of the committee and a timetable of meetings was announced by departmental press release on 14 October. Copies of the press release are available in the House Library.

Development (Outer London)

Mr. Jessel: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are the conditions for permitted development in respect of a bungalow in an outer-London borough. [40941]

Sir Paul Beresford: Householders may make certain types of minor changes to their dwellings without needing to apply for planning permission. These "permitted developments" are prescribed in the Town and Country Planning (General Permitted Development) Order 1995. For a bungalow in outer London the following developments, among others, would be permitted:

(i) the extension of the dwelling, providing the enlargement does not exceed 70 cubic metres at 15 per cent. (whichever is the greater) and providing in any case that the volume of the original house is not increased by more than 115 cubic metres;

(ii) the addition or alteration of a roof, providing the altered roof slope does not face a highway, and providing the addition does not increase the overall height of the dwelling nor add more than 50 cu m to the volume of the house. (Any additional volume created by a roof extension counts against the total volume limits of (i) above).

I am sending an extract of the general permitted development order and a booklet describing its contents to my hon. Friend.

1991 Census

Mr. Devlin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Enviornment when the findings of the analysis of the 1991 census commissioned from Newcastle university will be available. [40956]

Mr. Curry: This is being published today. Copies of the report "Urban Trends in England: Latest Evidence from the 1991 Census" have been lodged in the Library of the House.

Local Government Reorganisation

Mr. Sykes: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what finances he has made available to authorities that have been or are to be reorganised on 1 April 1995–96, and 1997 for reoganisation costs incurred by them in 1995–96; and if he will make a statement. [40955]

Mr. Curry: On 26 April I invited authorities that have been or are to be reorganised on or before 1 April 1997 to submit outturn figures of the amount of expenditure they incurred on transitional costs of reorganisation in 1995–96. On the basis, inter alia, of the information provided by the authorities, I have decided the amounts of supplementary credit approvals to allocate towards such costs in 1995–96. I have given priority to authorities that were reorganised on or before 1 April 1996.

The amounts are as follows:

SCAs: £000 rounded

Authority	1995–96
Isle of Wight
Isle of Wight Council	1,536
Cleveland
Cleveland County Council	3,169
Hartlepool Borough Council	3,200
Redcar and Cleveland Borough Council	2,891
Middlesborough Borough Council	2,160
Stockton on Tees Borough Council	2,947
Avon
Avon County Council	2,910
Bristol City Council	2,719
North Somerset District Council	3,197
Bath and North East Somerset Council	1,769
Bath City Council	299
Wansdyke District Council	715
South Gloucestershire Council	1,790
Kingswood Borough Council	438
Northavon District Council	484
Humberside
Humberside County Council	2,900
Hull City Council	3,080
East Riding of Yorkshire Council	1,200
Beverley Borough Council	800
Boothferry Borough Council	90
East Yorkshire Borough Council	864
Holderness Borough Council	500
North Lincolnshire Council	1,898
Glanford Borough Council	468
Scunthorpe Borough Council	626
North East Lincolnshire DC	1,634
Cleethorpes Borough Council	394
Great Grimsby	922
North Yorkshire
North Yorkshire County Council	1,400
Ryedale District Council	—
Selby District Council	685
York District Council	2,996
York City Council	550
Total	51,231

In addition, £200,000 has been issued, and distributed by the Home Office, for the reorganisation costs of combined fire authorities.

On 29 November 1995 I announced that I had considered carefully the bids submitted by authorities that are to be reorganised in 1997, but that, in my view, none of the bids established a sufficiently strong case to justify an allocation of SCA for 1995–96, Official Report, column 734. I have taken the same view following consideration of outturn bids submitted by these authorities. I have, however, issued capitalisation directions for the net eligible revenue expenditure incurred.

Sheffield and Tinsley Canal

Sir Irvine Patnick: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what are his proposals in respect of the Sheffield and Tinsley canal. [40957]

Mr. Robert B. Jones: Under the provisions of the Transport Act 1968, I have today made an order to upgrade the Sheffield and Tinsley canal from a remainder to cruising waterway.

British Waterways, which manages the canal, has in partnership with Sheffield city council and Sheffield development corporation, restored it to cruising standard. Reclassification is widely supported by local authorities, the boating industry and waterway user groups and will play an important part in regenerating the surrounding area. Significant public and private investment has already been committed to the area, and I am sure that upgrading the canal will boost investor confidence and help secure future investment.

European Week for Health and Safety

Mr. Allen: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what sums from public funds were allocated for promoting European week for Health and Safety; and if he will make a statement. [40850]

Sir Paul Beresford: The European Week for Safety and Health was aimed to encourage organisations themselves to raise awareness about hazards in the workplace and to be more effective in managing health and safety. In the UK we especially encouraged participation in the "Good Health is Good Business" campaign. I am extremely pleased that over 10,000 UK organisations registered an interest in participating in the European week. The Health and Safety Executive supported the week at a cost of £50,000.

Storm Damage (Torbay)

Mr. Allason: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will provide financial assistance to Torbay borough council under the Bellwin scheme for the costs incurred in dealing with exceptional storms in January 1996. [41218]

Mr. Curry: I am satisfied that financial assistance under the Bellwin scheme is justified given the exceptional nature of the storms between 20 and 24 January 1996. A scheme will, therefore, be established under section 155 of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989. Grant will be paid to cover 85 per cent. of eligible costs which are above a threshold, and which have been incurred by Torbay borough council in dealing with the aftermath of those storms.

Housing Associations

Mr. Nicholas Baker: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will examine how local needs are defined by housing associations seeking planning permission; and what advice his Department currently issues as to how these should be defined. [41199]

Mr. Clappison: Housing associations do not themselves define local housing needs. The responsibility to define and prioritise local housing needs rests with the local authority, in consultation with housing associations, the Housing Corporation, Government regional offices, local developers and other with an interest.

The Department provides guidance each year to local authorities on how to prepare their housing strategy and housing investment programme bid. The Housing Corporation also issues a national policy statement each year, containing details of the investment strategy for the next bidding round. Each August, the Housing Corporation publishes regional policy statements, containing details of the agreed local housing needs and priorities. Housing associations are invited to prepare schemes to meet these needs, and to submit them to the corporation for funding from the approved development programme.

Once a scheme is approved, it is for the association to seek planning permission in the normal way.

Commission for the New Towns

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when the Commission for the New Towns will be wound up; and what are its remaining powers. [41235]

Sir Paul Beresford: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given by my right hon. Friend the Minister for Local Government, Housing and Urban Regeneration on 15 May 1996, Official Report, columns 489–90. A decision on the future of the Commission for the New Towns will be made in due course. In the meantime, it continues with all its normal activities.

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what programme has been set for the Commission for the New Towns at Basildon. [41229]

Sir Paul Beresford: The Commission for the New Towns continues to dispose of the remaining new town land holdings and other assets at a rate consistent with maximising receipts and securing value for money, while also disengaging from its remaining liabilities. This applies to all towns where it is involved, including Basildon.

Castle Cement

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what test results are on the public register for kiln 6 at Castle Cement's Ribblesdale plant at Clitheroe when burning coal only or coal and cemfuel. [41236]

Mr. Clappison: Her Majesty's inspectorate of pollution—now the Environment Agency—carried out tests in respect of kiln 5 at Ribblesdale plant. Since kiln 6 is a similar kiln, the inspectorate did not consider it necessary to carry out tests for that kiln also. There are therefore no test results in the public register in relation to kiln 6, but all test results for kiln 5 are in the register.

Mr. Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how much pet coke has been burnt in kilns at Ribblesdale—Castle Cement, Clitheroe—in each year since 1990; and in which kilns. [41237]

Mr. Clappison: No pet coke has been burnt at the Ribblesdale plant since 1990.

Community Alarm Schemes

Mr. Stern: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what proposals he has to resolve uncertainties about the statutory powers available to local authorities to provide community alarm schemes for their residents; and if he will make a statement. [41241]

Mr. Curry: Community alarm schemes have become an increasingly common way to help vulnerable people to feel more secure in their own homes. Such schemes enable people in distress to summon assistance quickly and can be used to help the elderly to remain in their own homes, or support disabled people living in sheltered housing. They can also be useful in tackling crimes such as repeat burglary, domestic violence or racial harassment.

In the light of concerns that have been expressed, in particular by the Audit Commission and the Association of District Councils, about the statutory basis on which local authorities may operate such schemes, we have today published a consultation paper - entitled "Local Authorities and Community Alarm Schemes"—and this paper examines the present statutory framework and outlines the Government's preliminary view that local authorities' role in the provision of community alarms should be extended to allow them to provide, and charge for, this service to anyone resident in their area. If the Government were to conclude in the light of comments that this wider role should be given to local authorities, their intention would be to legislate to this effect at the next convenient opportunity.

I have arranged for copies of the consultation paper to be placed in the Library of the House. Copies are being sent to the local authority associations, individual local authorities and other interested parties, all of which are being invited to respond by 16 January 1997.

Enterprise Zones (Easington)

Mr. Cummings: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the timetable for the transfer of the non-operational land designated enterprise zones at Dowdon and Fox Cover situated in the Easington district to English Partnerships: and if he will make a statement. [41222]

Sir Paul Beresford: I hope that an announcement can be made shortly.

Special Areas of Conservation

Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will be sending further candidate special areas of conservation to the European Commission under the EC habitats directive. [41277]

Mr. Gummer: I indicated in my written reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Hexham (Mr. Atkinson) on 9 January 1996, Official Report, column 7, that further candidate special areas of conservation would be sent to the European Commission once points raised in public consultation had been considered and satisfactorily resolved. A further list of 44 sites was sent to the Commission on 14 October.

Consideration continues to be given to the remaining sites considered.

The list of sites sent to the Commission is as follows:

Central Heating

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what is his latest estimate of the percentage of dwellings with central heating for each constituency in the United Kingdom. [41283]

Mr. Clappison: Information is not available in this precise form. The 1991 census parliamentary constituency monitors provide figures for the number of households with and without central heating and copies are held in the Library.

Combined Heat and Power

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what capacity of electricity used in his Department's buildings is generated in a combined heat and power plant; and what plans he has to increase that capacity. [41320]

Mr. Clappison: This Government are committed to CHP and has recently published a national strategy which has been well received.

My Department's new headquarters buildings will both have CHP systems each with a capacity of 480 kW. In addition, the Whitehall district heating scheme, which covers a wide range of government buildings, will have a new CHP system from next autumn with a capacity of 4,500kW.

Hedgerows

Mr. David Martin: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment when he will publish draft regulations for the protection of important hedgerows; and if he will make a statement. [41278]

Mr. Gummer: The Government will issue for consultation on 21 October draft regulations for the protection of important hedgerows in England and Wales, under section 97 of the Environment Act 1995. The regulations are to be introduced jointly by the Secretary of State for the Environment, the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Secretary of State for Wales.

The Government are keen, during this consultation, to hear from a wide range of people and organisations that may be affected by, or have an interest in, these proposals—before the detailed arrangements are finalised.

The criteria for determining whether a hedgerow is important are based on a study undertaken by ADAS to develop a hedgerow evaluation system. The report will be published at the same time as the draft regulations.

Copies of the draft regulations and ADAS report will be placed in the House Library.

Health and Safety Prosecutions

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many cases, where companies were found guilty under health and safety law following the serious injury at work of an employee, resulted in fines of (a) less than £5,000, (b) £5,000 to £10,000, (c) £10,000 to £50,000 and (d) more than £50,000. [41135]

Sir Paul Beresford: The information requested is available only at disproportionate cost.

Homelessness

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment how many (a) households, (b) pensioners and (c) families with children (i) presented and (ii) were accepted as homeless in (1) Doncaster, (2) Mexborough and (3) South Yorkshire in each year since 1979. [40963]

Mr. Clappison: The available data on households dealt with under the homelessness provisions of the Housing (Homeless Persons) Act 1977 and the Housing Act 1985 are set out in the tables. The figures for acceptances of households with children or a vulnerable household member could be provided only at disproportionate cost for South Yorkshire for the years before 1991, other than those given for Doncaster. Separate figures for Mexborough are not available.

Flooding (Folkestone)

Mr. Nigel Evans: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will provide financial assistance to Shepway district council under the Bellwin scheme for the costs incurred in dealing with the extensive flooding in Folkestone on 12 August. [41282]

Sir Paul Beresford: I am satisfied that financial assistance under the Bellwin scheme is justified given the exceptional nature of the floods in Folkestone on 12 August. A scheme will, therefore, be established under section 155 of the Local Government and Housing Act 1989. Grant will be paid to cover 85 per cent. of eligible costs which are above a threshold and which have been incurred by Shepway district council in dealing with those floods.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Internet

Mr. John Marshall: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what steps he proposes to take to keep illegal material off the Internet. [41234]

Mr. Ian Taylor: The Internet is one of the most important developments in information technology of recent years, and the Government are determined that problems with the very small proportion of illegal material should not jeopardise the enormous potential benefits of the Internet to UK users.

The basis for the Government's approach is that the Internet is not a legal vacuum: the law applies on-line as it does off it.

We therefore welcome the recent industry-led initiative in the UK, put forward by the two leading UK trade associations, the Internet Service Providers Association and the London internet exchange, Linx, supported by the Government and the police, and facilitated by the DTI, which addresses these difficult issues. The proposals, "R³ Safety-Net" launched at a press conference at the DTI on 23 September, have two main parts. First, service providers will take responsibility for the removal from their servers of material which is notified to them as being illegal in the UK—for example, material which it is considered breaches the Criminal Justice Act 1988, under which it is an offence to possess child pornography. A hotline is to be established via which members of the public can report instances of material which they consider might be illegal. Secondly, news groups and web pages will be given a rating according to their usual content, so that users can chose to avoid those where illegal material has previously been found, or which contain material they personally may find offensive. Internet service providers will also contribute to research into the application of ratings systems, and the development of relevant screening software, to deal with material which, whilst not illegal, may be found offensive by many people. Copies of the proposals have been placed in the House Library, and can also be accessed on the DTI's homepage on the World Wide Web.

This initiative represents a concrete, practical and positive start to the problems of illegal or offensive material being distributed on the Internet. It also strikes the right balance between the need to ensure that the Internet can be used safely and the need to safeguard freedom of speech. There is already effective statutory backing to this approach because existing law applies on the Internet. No new regulation is needed.

This approach is the first in the world to bring industry, Government and the police together in this way. Work is now under way to promote its adoption internationally, which is vital given the ease with which material can be transmitted across borders. A positive start has been made in discussions in the EU following the recent Telecoms Council.

Balance of Trade

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade for trade in (a) good, (b) good and services and (c) on a balance of payment basis, what was (i) the trade balance for each EU country with the rest of the EU country with the rest of the EU in each year from 1990 to 1995, in real terms and in millions of pounds, (ii) the trade balance for each EU country with the rest of the world outside the EU in years 1990 to 1995 in real terms and in millions of pounds and (iii) the trade balance for each EU country with the whole world expressed as (1) a percentage of GDP between 1990 and 1995 and (2) in real terms and in millions of pounds. [40729]

Mr. Nelson [holding answer 16 October 1996]: The complete data requested could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, for EU(12) countries, statistics on the balance of trade in goods split by intra-EU and extra-EU can be obtained from Eurostat's Comext CD ROM. Comparable figures for the three new members can be obtained from the International Monetary Fund's "Direction of Trade Statistics". The EU(15) balance of trade in goods and services with the world, and GDP estimates can be obtained from OECD national accounts, volume 1. All these publications are available in the Library of the House. The EU(12) trade balance in services is published in Eurostat's "International Trade in Services" up to 1993.

Nuclear Energy

Mrs. Beckett: To ask the President of the Board of Trade what is the difference in billions of pounds between the assets of those advanced gas-cooled reactors and pressurised water reactors that have been privatised and the remuneration of all kinds that the Exchequer has derived from those privatisations. [40726]

Mr. Page [holding answer 16 October 1996]: At the time of privatisation, British Energy had net assets of some £1.5 billion, as shown on page 87 of the British Energy share offer prospectus. Proceeds from the sale of British Energy, including the repayment of debt but excluding the value of the remaining shares held by the Secretary of State on behalf of the Government, will be some £1.8 billion. Further proceeds will be generated by the future sale of the retained shares in British Energy, which have a value of about £180 million at the issue price.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

International War Crimes Court

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is his policy in respect of the establishment of a permanent international war crimes court. [41307]

Sir Nicholas Bonsor: I shall write to the hon. Member shortly. Copies of the letter will be placed in the Libraries of the House.

ENVIRONMENT

Radioactive Scale (Disposal)

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what provisions exist for the offshore disposal of radioactive scale arising from oil exploration and drilling in the North sea and Atlantic. [41251]

Mr. Clappison: Discharge of naturally radioactive scale from oil exploration and drilling in UK waters is regulated under the Radioactive Substances Act 1993, as amended. The Environment Agency is the regulator for the English and Welsh sectors. The Scottish Environment Protection Agency is the regulator for the Scottish sector.

World Conservation Congress

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Secretary of State for the Environment what contribution his Department made to the World Conservation Congress held in Montreal this month; if his Department was represented at the congress; and what plans he has to assess the conclusions of the congress. [41252]

Mr. Clappison: The UK is a state member of the International Union for the Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources. Officials from my Department are leading the UK delegation at the World Conservation Congress which began on 13 October and will finish on 23 October. My Department contributed towards the costs of the UK IUCN committee's report on the UK's contribution to IUCN 1994 to 1996, which will be launched during the congress.

PRIME MINISTER

Government Policies

Mr. Meacher: To ask the Prime Minister what new policy proposals were announced by Ministers of Her Majesty's Government in the week beginning 7 October; and if he will indicate which of them will be subject to compliance cost assessments. [40801]

The Prime Minister: The Government prepare a compliance cost assessment for all new legislation likely to have an impact on business and the voluntary sector. The Government's legislative programme will be presented to the House on 23 October. Compliance costs assessments will be presented in due course for the Bills in the programme.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Prime Minister what are his latest estimates of the expenditure on all external consultants, including management consultants, for each year since 1992, in 1996 prices, for his Department and its agencies; and what are the quantified annual cost savings which such expenditure has resulted in. [41173]

The Prime Minister: For these purposes my Office is part of the Cabinet Office, Office of Public Service. My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster will write to the hon. Member.

Unidentified Flying Objects

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Prime Minister if he will allocate to a department the assessments of the non–air defence implications associated with unidentified flying objects; and if he will make a statement. [40822]

The Prime Minister: The air defence and air traffic implications of unidentified flying objects are the responsibility of the Ministry of Defence and the Civil Aviation Authority respectively. The Government have no plans to allocate resources to researching extraterrestrial phenomena.

Terrorist Damage

Mr. Soley: To ask the Prime Minister if he will extend the Northern Ireland compensation scheme for terrorist attacks to mainland Britain. [40934]

The Prime Minister: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given to the hon. Member for Manchester, Blackley (Mr. Eastham), by my hon. Friend the Minister for Trade on 27 June 1996, Official Report, column 202.

New Buildings and Premises

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Prime Minister what was the total expenditure on new buildings and premises by his Department and its agencies; and if he will indicate the square footage of new office space purchased or newly rented in each of the last five years. [41148]

The Prime Minister: For the purposes of this question, my Office is part of the Cabinet Office, Office of Public Service. I refer the hon. Member to the reply given today by my right hon. Friend, the Paymaster General.

British Beef

Mr. Hanson: To ask the Prime Minister what steps he is taking to encourage the purchase and use of British beef by Government Departments. [41308]

The Prime Minister: The best way to encourage use of British beef is to restore confidence in the product. The Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has launched an initiative to reassure consumers and those responsible for procurement about the rigorous enforcement of the control measures introduced to protect public health. The Meat and Livestock Commission is continuing with its successful campaign to promote consumption.

WALES

GP Salaries

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what proposals he has and what consultations he has set up on the introduction of a salaried status scheme for general practice. [40668]

Mr. Hague [holding answer 14 October 1996]: Proposals for the development of primary care health services, including a salaried option for general practitioners, are set out in the White Paper "Choice and Opportunity", Cm 3390, published on 15 October. This issue is also addressed in the document "Primary Care: The Way Forward in Wales", also published on 15 October, which reflects the views put forward in the Principality during the wide-ranging consultation exercise which preceded the White Paper.

Copies of both documents have been placed in the Library of the House.

School Overcrowding

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what guidance he has published to prevent overcrowding in schools. [41196]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: Non-statutory guidance, produced by the Department for Education and Employment, entitled "Area Guidelines for Schools (Building Bulletin 82)" was published on 6 September 1996.

GCSE Scores

Mr. Win Griffiths: To ask the Secretary of States for Wales what percentage of total school leavers in the maintained sector failed to attain five GCSEs at grades A or C in each of the last five years (a) in total and (b) broken down by gender. [41197]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: The information requested is contained in the following table.

Percentage of school leavers, aged 15 and above[1], from maintained schools[2], leaving without 5 GCSEs at grades A(A) to C*

	All pupils	Boys	Girls
1990–91	69	73	65

Combined Heat and Power

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what capacity of electricity used in his Department's buildings is generated in a combined heat and power plant; and what plans he has to increase that capacity. [41310]

Mr. Hague: None. We review our energy costs regularly, and have concluded that a combined heat and power plant would not be cost-effective for any of the Welsh Office estate.

Benefits Agency

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what representations he has received concerning the change programme in the Benefits Agency; and if he will make a statement; [41273]

(2) what plans he has to meet the Civil and Public Services Association to discuss the change programme of the Benefits Agency; and if he will make a statement. [41274]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: This is a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Security.

Disabled People

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what arrangements are in place in (a) Blaenau Gwent and (b) Wales generally to support school leavers with physical disabilities with day care facilities. [41299]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: There were seven day centres in Blaenau Gwent in 1995—the latest year for which figures are available—offering a total of 600 places for mixed groups. The number of places specifically available to people with a physical disability was not reported.

In Wales as a whole, there were 249 day centres offering 2,500 places per week for people with physical disabilities and 5,300 for mixed groups which may include physically disabled people.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will investigate the adequacy of the application of the all-Wales strategy for support for those with severe disabilities in Blaenau Gwent. [41301]

Mr. Evans: We have no plans to undertake an investigation of Blaenau Gwent's discharge of its social services functions. The Welsh Office will be receiving the normal monitoring information on the authority's use of the mental handicap strategy funding.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what assessment he has made of the arrangement in place under the new unitary authorities in Wales for the application of the all-Wales strategy for care of the disabled. [41303]

Mr. Evans: Social Services Inspectorate Wales has published a report entitled "Local Government Reorganisation Personal Social Services Monitoring Exercise: Overview Report" a copy of which is in the Library of the House. The Welsh Office has met all the unitary authorities to discuss their arrangements for discharging their social services functions.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what is the average waiting period for local authorities in Wales to provide funding allocation for severely handicapped school leavers under the all-Wales strategy. [41300]

Mr. Evans: This information is not held centrally. Local authorities have the responsibility for the planning and commissioning of community care, including care and support for school leavers. This includes care and support for individuals with a learning disability and funding allocated to authorities under the mental handicap strategy.

Mr. Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales what review he has made of the home care provisions for the handicapped in Wales. [41302]

Mr. Evans: Local authorities are responsible for arranging community care services, including domiciliary care, to meet local needs. They are required to publish social care plans each year for the provision of community care services in their area.

Speech Therapists

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many additional speech therapists have been recruited since 1992; [41260]

(2) how many additional speech therapists have been recruited since 1992 with the capacity to practise in the Welsh language; [41261]

(3) how many speech therapists have the ability to practise in the Welsh language. [41262]

Mr. Hague: The number of speech therapists who have been recruited is not collected centrally. The following table shows the staff in post on 30 September for each of the last four years. Due to the use of local payscales, however, there are small numbers of staff within the scientific and professional pay group who cannot be allocated to a particular occupation and these staff—some of whom may be speech therapists—are excluded from the figures. Information on the number of speech therapists who can practise in Welsh is not available.

Whole-time equivalent number of speech therapists in post at 30 September

	Number
1992	168
1993	177
1994	180
1995	199

Organophosphates

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement on the agricultural use of organophosphates in Wales. [41298]

Mr. Jonathan Evans: I will write to the hon. Member as soon as possible, and place a copy of my reply in the Library of the House.

LORD CHANCELLOR'S DEPARTMENT

Combined Heat and Power

Mr. Battle: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what capacity of electricity used in his Department's buildings is generated in a combined heat and power plant; and what plans he has to increase that capacity. [41325]

Mr. Streeter: None of the electricity used by my Department is generated by combined heat and power plant. There are no plans to utilise this form of energy in the foreseeable future.

Land Registry

Mr. Jamieson: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department on what date the visit by the Parliamentary Secretary to the Land Registry in Plymouth on 18 September was first discussed by his Department. [40932]

Mr. Streeter: The visit to Plymouth Land Registry was first discussed on 4 June 1996.

Magistrates Courts

Mr. Mullin: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what assessment he has made of the reasons for the recent fall in the caseload of magistrates courts in south Westminster; and if he will make a statement. [41063]

Mr. Streeter: Over the past three years the main areas of work of the magistrates courts in south Westminster showing a reduction have been the number of charges brought and laying of information for summonses by the Metropolitan police, and the number of parking offences processed by the magistrates courts.

Court Closures

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the (a) magistrates and (b) other courts which have closed in the county of South Yorkshire in each of the past five years. [40906]

Mr. Streeter: There have been no magistrate, or Crown court closures in the last five years in South Yorkshire. The Thorne county court closed on 4 January 1994.

Legal Aid

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department if he will list the number of legal aid applications received from members of the public in South Yorkshire, for each of the last five years, indicating the total sums involved. [40968]

Mr. Streeter: It is not possible to identify separately applications for legal aid received from residents of South Yorkshire; the Legal Aid Board area office in Leeds covers the county of South Yorkshire along with 10 other counties or regions.

The total number of applications received for civil legal aid by the Leeds area office over the last five years were as follows:

1991–92: 42,954
1992–93: 53,084
1993–94: 48,586
1994–95: 53,278
1995–96: 54,436

The net cost of civil legal aid certificates issued by the Leeds area office, in respect of cases which closed during the last four years, were as follows:

1992–93: £19,076,615
1993–94: £26,465,169
1994–95: £32,581,004
1995–96: £36,343,203

Expenditure figures for 1991–92 are not available.

Applications for criminal legal aid are dealt with by the courts. Equivalent figures for criminal legal aid are therefore not readily available and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Benefit Fraud Hotline

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what redress will be available to a victim of a false, malicious communication to the Department of Social Security's Benefits Agency's shop–a–benefit–fraudster hotline; and if he will make a statement. [40887]

Mr. Streeter: Any redress available to people about whom such communications will have been made will depend on the nature of any harm suffered. This will vary from case to case, and it is not possible to give a general statement of what remedy would be available. Anyone who has suffered harm as a result of such communications would have to obtain legal advice. The Government are determined to crack down on benefit fraud.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what are his latest estimates of the expenditure on all external consultants, including management consultants, for each year since 1992, in 1996 prices, for his Department and its agencies; and what are the quantified annual cost savings which such expenditure has resulted in. [41181]

Mr. Streeter: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before Prorogation. I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of the letter in the Library.

New Buildings and Premises

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Parliamentary Secretary, Lord Chancellor's Department what was the total expenditure on new buildings and premises by his Department and its agencies; and if he will indicate the square footage of new office space purchased or newly rented in each of the last five years. [41141]

Mr. Streeter: The information shows the square footage of new office space acquired during the period requested. The information reflects space acquired for departmental headquarters offices, associated offices, the Public Trust Office and the Courts Service.

1993–94: 426.6 sqm

1994–95: 4573.41 sqm

1995–96: 13,316 sqm (together with nominal holdings for the General Commissioners of Income tax in buildings in Manchester, Liverpool, Edinburgh, Bristol and London transferred from the Inland Revenue)

1996–97: 2551.7 sqm (transferred to LCD under the provisions of the Efficiency Scrutiny of Civil Estate)

I regret that it has not been possible before Prorogation to provide details of the space acquired by the Court Service outside its headquarters. I will write to the hon. Member with these details for the period until 1 April 1995. The chief executive of the Court Service will reply in relation to the period after 1 April 1995, when the Court Service became an executive agency. The chief executives of Her Majesty's Land Registry and the Public Record Office will also reply separately after Prorogation. Copies of all these letters will be placed in the Library.

DUCHY OF LANCASTER

Combined Heat and Power

Mr. Battle: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what capacity of electricity used in his Department's buildings is generated in a combined heat and power plant; and what plans he has to increase that capacity. [41318]

Mr. Willetts: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy of the letter in the Libraries of the House.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what are his latest estimates of the expenditure on all external consultants, including management consultants, for each year since 1992, in 1996 prices, for his Department and its agencies; and what are the quantified annual cost savings which such expenditure has resulted in. [41172]

Mr. Willetts: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy of the letter in the Libraries of the House.

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Deputy Prime Minister what are his latest estimates of the expenditure on all external consultants, including management consultants, for each year since 1992, in 1996 prices, for his Department and its agencies; and what are the quantified annual cost savings which such expenditure has resulted in. [41174]

The Deputy Prime Minister: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy of the letter in the Libraries of the House.

Promotional Expenditure

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster how much his Department has spent on (a) publicity, (b) promotions, and (c) hospitality in each of the last six years. [40622]

Mr. Willetts [holding answer 16 October 1996]: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and place a copy of the letter in the Libraries of the House.

Public Services

Mr. Tracey: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what improvements have been made in key public services and to regeneration projects following Government capital investment since 1979. [41333]

Mr. Freeman: I have today deposited in the Library of the House available information and statistics on investments in schools, roads, hospitals and regeneration since 1979.

Deregulation

Mr. Tracey: To ask the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster what progress there has been in removing unnecessary burdens on business under the deregulation programme. [41334]

Mr. Freeman: Over 750 regulations have been repealed or amended in the last three years, 420 in the last 12 months, with about 350 further regulations to be repealed or amended by the end of 1996.

The Government also announced a number of new measures including several in response to the second report by the deregulation task force on 23 September. These included:

consultation on the recommendation by the task force to exempt small businesses from unfair dismissal legislation for new employees;

distribution to over 200,000 businesses through key business organisations of a green card setting out new rights under business-friendly enforcement procedures. These procedures are already being used in key areas such as health and safety, food safety and the new Environment Agency and are being extended; commitment to reduce the burden of Government surveys by up to 26 per cent. by 2000 as recommended by Edward Osmotherly;

a pilot for an automated telephone calculation service for new employers making it easier to work out PAYE and NIC deductions;

a pilot by selected local authorities of a "one-stop shop" giving a single point of contact for all development approvals under their responsibility; and the abolition or simplification of 67 business licences including the scrapping of seven of HM Customs and Excise's eight licensing or registration requirements.

Copies of the deregulation task force's report, the Osmotherly report on statistical surveys, the Government's responses to those reports and the green card have been placed in the House Libraries.

DEFENCE

Skin Cancer (Falkland Islands)

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the risk of skin cancer for service men in the Falklands as a result of perceived changes in the ozone layer; and what precautions he has initiated. [40708]

Mr. Soames: There is no evidence of health problems amongst service men or their families from ultraviolet light in the Falkland Islands.

Personnel deploying to the Falkland Islands are briefed on the risk of ultraviolet light exposure to the skin. Regular news bulletins warn of the daily risk, with personnel being advised to use high factor sun block and to cover up with long sleeve shirts and wide-brimmed hats. There is an environmental health team based at Mount Pleasant which regularly monitors the risk of all environmental health factors on the Falkland Islands.

Anti-depressants (Female Recruits)

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence for how many female recruits in the armed services anti-depressants have been prescribed since the start of training, in the last year. [40770]

Mr. Soames: This information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are his latest estimates of the expenditure on all external consultants, including management consultants, for each year since 1992, in 1996 prices, for his Department and its agencies; and what are the quantified annual cost savings which such expenditure has resulted in. [41175]

Mr. Arbuthnot: Individual budget holders in my Department have delegated powers to employ external consultants as they think fit within the limit of their resources and consistent with all requirements for propriety and value for money. The information required has therefore not hitherto been held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost. Furthermore, external consultants may be engaged by budget holders for assistance on a wide range of problems, but very seldom with the sole specific aim of securing financial savings.

My officials have now begun to collect data from all areas of the Department to establish the total expenditure on external consultancy. The exercise covering financial year 1995–96 was completed earlier this year and revealed that expenditure by the Department, including its agencies, in that period was £150.8 million. I wrote on 21 June 1996 to the hon. Member for Torfaen (Mr. Murphy), a copy of which was placed in the Library of the House, giving a breakdown of this expenditure.

A similar exercise will be undertaken to show expenditure during 1996–97. Once the information is to hand I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my letter in the Library of the House.

Gulf War Syndrome

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement concerning the extent of use of organophosphate insecticides by British forces during the Gulf war; how many troops sprayed these pesticides; what items were sprayed by the insecticides; where were the insecticides purchased; what research his Department had carried out (a) before the Gulf war and (b) after the Gulf war into the health implications of using organophosphates; and what advice was given by his Department during the Gulf war to service personnel spraying the insecticides. [41112]

Mr. Soames: These questions will be fully covered in the investigation I have already announced.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if he will list all the pesticides, together with the quantities, used by British troops during the Gulf war; [41253]

(2) if he will list the vaccines given to British forces before they were deployed to the Gulf war; [41254]

(3) if he will make a statement on the tests carried out by his Department on pyridostigmine bromide before its use in the Gulf war. [41255]

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if his Department's current investigations into the cause of Gulf war syndrome include research into the possible contribution made by the inhalation of uranium dust arising from the use of depleted uranium armour-piercing shells; [41295]

(2) which delousing agents were used to treat Iraqi prisoners captured during Operation Granby in the Gulf war; and what health protective measures were taken for (a) the British Army medical service and (b) the Iraqi prisoners from inadvertent inhalation ingestion or skin contamination; [41304]

(3) what research has been conducted on behalf of his Department by the national poisons information service into the causes of Gulf war syndrome. [41292]

Mr. Soames: I will write to the hon. Members and a copy of the letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Nicholas Pope

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence to what post Mr. Nicholas Pope was appointed by his Department after his tour of duty with Secretariat (Air Staff) Department 2A; and if he will make a statement. [40920]

Mr. Soames: Mr. Nicholas Pope was posted on promotion two years ago to a general finance policy branch.

Uranium-tipped Shells

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the current risk posed to civilians from exploded depleted uranium-tipped shells in Kuwait. [41101]

Mr. Arbuthnot: My Department has conducted no formal assessment of the risks to civilians from exploded depleted uranium-tipped ammunition in Kuwait.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement concerning the risk to soldiers of handling depleted uranium-tipped shells. [41100]

Mr. Soames: Depleted uranium has a very low level of radioactivity and the risks attached to the handling of depleted uranium ammunition are minimal.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the 1991 Atomic Energy Authority report on industrial technology concerning the risk of exposure to exploded depleted uranium-tipped shells. [41102]

Mr. Soames: I refer the hon. Member to the letter sent by my noble Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Defence to the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent (Mr. Smith) on 7 August 1996, a copy of which has been placed in the Library of the House.

Dr. Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence how many depleted uranium-tipped shells were fired by British forces during the Gulf war; and what assessment he has made of the number of exploded shells remaining in Kuwait. [41099]

Mr. Soames: British forces fired some 88 depleted uranium shells during the Gulf conflict. The Ministry of Defence has made no assessment of the number of exploded shells remaining in Kuwait, as we judge the risk to human health posed by DU rounds to be negligible. It is likely, though, that a large proportion of the 88 shells was expended in Iraq rather than Kuwait.

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what studies have been conducted by his Department into the nephrotoxicity of the inhalation of uranium particles. [41296]

Mr. Soames: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of the letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Married Quarters Estate

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what are the locations of the houses from the married quarters estate that have been released to Arrington Homes for immediate use by the private sector. [40931]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of the letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

RAF Rudloe Manor

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what work is currently undertaken at RAF Rudloe Manor; what work was undertaken in the last 10 years; what was, by rank, the establishment for the last 10 years; and if he will make a statement. [40823]

Mr. Soames: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of the letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Defence Intelligence Branches

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is the current function of DI55 SIG; what was its function (a) five years and (b) 10 years ago; and if he will make a statement; [41040]

(2) what is the current function of DI65B; what was its function (a) five years and (b) 10 years ago; and if he will make a statement; [41038]

(3) what is the current function of DI55; what was its function (a) five years and (b) 10 years ago; and if he will make a statement; [41041]

(4) what is the current function of DI61E; what was its function (a) five years and (b) 10 years ago; and if he will make a statement; [41037]

(5) what is the current function of DI10; what was its function (a) five years and (b) 10 years ago; and if he will make a statement. [41039]

Mr. Soames: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of the letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Unidentified Flying Objects

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what consultation has taken place in each of the last five years by his Department with the French Ministry of Defence Centre National d'Etudes Spatiales in respect of unidentified flying objects; and if he will make a statement; [41048]

(2) if a lodger unit housed within his Department's Flying Complaints Flight specialises in unidentified flying object investigations; and if he will make a statement; [41036]

(3) how many records currently held by his Department's Scientific Intelligence Branch are under extended closure for (a) 50 years, (b) 75 years and (c) 100 years; how many of these records refer to unidentified flying objects; and if he will make a statement; [40911]

(4) what consultation has taken place in each of the last five years by his Department with the Royal Australian air force in respect of unidentified flying objects; and if he will make a statement; [41042]

(5) what consultation has taken place in each of the last five years by his Department with the Spanish Ministry of Defence's intelligence section of the Spanish air forces air operations command in respect of unidentified flying objects; and if he will make a statement; [41050]

(6) if he will make statement on his Department's policy towards unidentified flying objects and on how this has developed during the past 30 years; [40913]

(7) what co-operation there is between the Royal Air Force and the United States air force in respect of establishing the facts relating to unidentified flying objects; and if he will make a statement; [40918]

(8) how many alleged landings by unidentified flying objects have been recorded in each year since 1980 and this year to date; how many have been investigated by his Department's personnel; which of these had been traced by radar and with what result; and if he will make a statement; [40921]

(9) what consultation has taken place in each of the last five years by his Department with the Italian Ministry of Defence air force general staff (2. Department) in respect of unidentified flying objects; and if he will make a statement; [41049]

(10) what instructions have been sent to the commanders of Royal Air Force stations to collect reports from air crews having allegedly sighted unidentified flying objects; what inquiries have been held following such sightings; to what extent there has been collaboration between his Department and departments in (a) Canada and (b) the United States of America on this problem; and if he will make a statement; [40917]

(11) what consultation has taken place in each of the last five years by his Department with New Zealand's Ministry of Defence in respect of unidentified flying objects; and if he will make a statement; [41043]

(12) what consultation has taken place in each of the last five years by his Department with the Portuguese Ministry of Defence's joint staff of the armed forces intelligence division in respect of unidentified flying objects; and if he will make a statement; [41051]

(13) how many instances of unidentified flying objects have been reported on by the defence services of the United Kingdom during the last 12 months; what steps are taken to co-ordinate such observations; and if he will make a statement; [40910]

(14) if he will list by year for the last 30 years how many structured craft of unknown origin have penetrated the United Kingdom's air defence region; and if he will make a statement. [40919]

Mr. Soames: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of the letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Tornado Crash (Blackpool)

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his oral statement of 14 October, Official Report, column 476, on what date the F3 Tornado which crashed on Blackpool beach in September, received its certificate of airworthiness. [41070]

Dr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his reply of 14 October, Official Report, column 484, by whom the investigation into the crash of the Tornado F3 off Blackpool on 28 September will be carried out. [41336]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The Tornado F3 that crashed near Blackpool on 28 September 1996 had been authorised to fly by the Ministry of Defence on the same day as the accident.

The authorisation was issued, at British Aerospace Warton where the aircraft was being refurbished, in accordance with standard procedures for aircraft undergoing such work.

The aircraft which crashed was the ninth of a series of 16 aircraft being refurbished by British Aerospace. The previous eight had already been returned to the RAF in fully operational condition.

A Ministry of Defence board of inquiry is under way into the causes of the crash and not one by the Department of Transport as suggested by my right hon. Friend on 14 October, Official Report, column 484.

New Buildings and Premises

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the total expenditure on new buildings and premises by his Department and its agencies; and if he will indicate the square footage of new office space purchased or newly rented in each of the last five years. [41147]

Mr. Arbuthnot: The information is not held centrally and could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Armed Forces (Strength)

Mr. David Clark: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the strength of the British armed forces on 1 April 1992; and what will be its strength on (a) 1 April 1999 and (b) 1 April 2000. [41111]

Mr. Soames: The total service strength of the regular armed forces on 1 April 1992 was 302,400. The estimated strength on 1 April 1999 and 1 April 2000 is 213,500 for each year. Both figures include Gurkha strengths, Royal Marines and Queen Alexandra Royal Naval Nursing Service, and an element for personnel undergoing training.

HMS Sceptre

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what was the result of his Department's investigations into an incident on board HMS Sceptre on 22 July; and if he will make a statement. [40835]

Mr. Soames: The Royal Navy board of inquiry into the incident on 22 July, when two peace demonstrators were apprehended shortly after gaining access to HMS Sceptre, identified the need to tighten certain aspects of the specific security procedures relating to our nuclear hunter killer submarines. This has been done. It also recommended a number of additional security and management measures to minimise the possibility of such an incident happening again. Many of these have already been put in place, and others are being addressed with the greatest urgency.

Mr. Nicholas Redfern

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the titles of the records of the Ministry of Defence's scientific intelligence branch in respect of correspondence sent to Mr. Nicholas Redfern by the Public Record Office, Kew on 21 September 1990. [40889]

Mr. Soames: I will write to hon. Member and a copy of the letter will be placed in the Library in the House.

Peninsula Barracks, Winchester

Mr. Fatchett: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) whether his Department entered into an agreement with the developers of Peninsula barracks, Winchester, so that his Department could share in any gain arising from development; and if he will make a statement; [41227]

(2) if he will set out (a) the purchase and (b) the sale price of Peninsula barracks, Winchester. [41228]

Mr. Soames: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of the letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Combined Heat and Power

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what capacity of electricity used in his Department's buildings is generated in a combined heat and power plant; and what plans he has to increase that capacity. [41317]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of the letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Foreign Police Officers (Powers)

Mr. Madden: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence by what authority (a) members of visiting forces and (b) US security police officers arrest and detain United Kingdom citizens on public highways for (i) theft and (ii) other alleged offences against United Kingdom law. [41328]

Mr. Soames: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of the letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Epidemiology Research Proposals

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to his answer of 17 July to the hon. Member for South Derbyshire (Mrs. Currie), Official Report, columns 532–33, if he will now make a statement on the outcome of the Medical Research Council selection process on the 37 outline proposals for research into Gulf war syndrome mentioned in his answer. [41306]

Mr. Soames: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of the letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Gulf War (Pesticides)

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) if the organophosphate pesticide Denenton–S–Methyl was used by his Department's medical personnel in Operation Granby in the Gulf war; [41293]

(2) pursuant to the letter from the Minister of State for the Armed Forces to the hon. Member for Blaenau Gwent, on 4 October, if he will now correct his answer of 11 July 1994, Official Report, column 436, on the use of pesticides during the Gulf war. [41294]

Mr. Soames: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of the letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Euratom Treaty

Mr. Llew Smith: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what activities of his Department come within the scope of the Euratom treaty. [41297]

Mr. Soames: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of the letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

War Graves (France)

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement concerning the desecration of war graves in northern France. [41256]

Mr. Soames: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of the letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

RAF Sealand

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects a decision on the market testing bids at RAF Sealand; and if he will make a statement. [41257]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of the letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Dominie Aircraft Contracts

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what prospects there are for the Raytheon Hawker jet work force at Broughton, Flintshire, obtaining contracts to service the MOD's Dominie aircraft; and if he will make a statement. [41258]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of the letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

A319 Tanker Airbus

Mr. Barry Jones: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence what plans his Department has to purchase British Aerospace's planned A319 tanker airbus; and if he will make a statement. [41259]

Mr. Arbuthnot: I will write to the hon. Member and a copy of the letter will be placed in the Library of the House.

Service Bares

Mr. Cox: To ask the Secretary of State for Defence (1) what is the present number of British naval bases in England and Wales; and if he will list them; [39224]

(2) what is the present number of British Army bases in England and Wales; and if he will list; [39226]

(3) what is the present number of Royal Air Force bases in England and Wales; and if he will list them. [39223]

Mr. Soames: I shall write to my hon. Friend and a copy of the reply will be placed in the Library of the House.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Attorney-General what are his latest estimates of the expenditure on all external consultants, including management consultants, for each year since 1992, in 1996 prices, for his Department and its agencies; and what are the quantified annual cost savings which such expenditure has resulted in. [41176]

The Attorney-General: The latest estimates of expenditure on external consultants for the departments and agencies for which I am responsible are set out in the table in 1996 prices. The legal secretariat to the Law Officers has not incurred any such expenditure. External consultants were engaged primarily to advise on matters of management or to develop new systems and, while their advice is considered to have contributed very significantly to efficiency, it is not possible to quantify the annual cost savings attributable to this expenditure.

TRANSPORT

Driving Tests

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list, by Driving Standards Agency regional office, the number of application forms currently awaiting a booking date, the time it currently takes to answer a telephone call and the current average waiting time for a driving test application to be processed. [40688]

Mr. Bowis: At 30 September the numbers of driving test application forms awaiting processing in each of the Driving Standards Agency Area Offices were:

Area office	Number
London and South East	1,689
Midlands and Eastern	1,640
Wales and Western	1,504
Northern	1,420
Scotland	201
National	6,454

The agency's target for telephone answering has been for 90 per cent. of calls to be answered within 60 seconds. The results for the week ending 27 September were:

Area office	Number of calls answered	In 60 seconds (per cent.)
London and South East	22,097	70
Midlands and Eastern	14,774	31
Wales and Western	12,894	88
Northern	17,722	96
Scotland	5,591	92
Total	73,078	75

The average number of days between receipt of valid application and issue of appointment cards at the start of October is estimated to be:

Area office	Average number of days
London and South east	5
Midland and Eastern	4
Wales and Western	5
Northern	3
Scotland	3
Average	4

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the average waiting times for driving tests for each of the past 18 months. [40693]

Mr. Bowis: The average waiting times for driving tests between March 1995 and August 1996 are shown in the table.

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if candidates undertaking driving tests are required to provide a signed driving licence before undertaking their test. [40703]

Mr. Bowis: Driving test candidates are required to present their signed driving licence at the start of a driving test as evidence of identity and driver status, though examiners have the discretion to allow the test to proceed if otherwise satisfied that the licence exists.

Mr. Corbett: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the numbers of people (a) passing and (b) failing driving tests at driving test centres by location from 1 July to the latest convenient date; and what percentage change these figures represent over those for (i) 12 and (ii) 24 months previously. [40443]

Mr. Bowis: I will write to the hon. Member.

Oxygenated Fuel

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the potential environmental benefits of oxygenated fuel; and if he will make a statement. [40717]

Mr. Bowis: An assessment by the Department of Transport has shown that increasing the quantity of oxygenates in petrol can result in reduced emissions, primarily carbon monoxide and hydrocarbons, through more complete combustion of the fuel in the engine. The assessment also showed that the addition of oxygen to petrol as an alternative octane booster allows for a reduction in benzene in the fuel, but at the expense of increased aldehyde emissions.

City Diesel

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what assessment he has made of the potential environmental benefits of the use of city diesel; and if he will make a statement. [40719]

Mr. Bowis: The Government are currently considering the role that cleaner fuels, including ultra low-sulphur diesels such as "city diesel", might play in minimising road transport emissions. To that end "city diesel" is included in the continuing comparative trials of cleaner or alternative fuels which the Government are sponsoring. The trials will provide an indication of both the emissions reduction potential of such fuels and of their practicality and cost-effectiveness in comparison with conventional fuels.

Mr. Chidgey: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what representations he has received about the potential environmental benefits of city diesel. [40718]

Mr. Bowis: Representations about the potential environmental benefits of city diesel and of a number of other alternative or cleaner fuels have been received from a number of bodies including fuel producers and retailers, operators, local authorities and environmental groups.

Heavy Goods Vehicles

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list those structures on (a) the M1, (b) the M6, (c) the M5 and (d) the M25 which fail to meet the standards for 44 tonne heavy goods vehicles. [40683]

Mr. Watts: I will write to the hon. Member.

Trust Ports

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list for each trust port (a) its date of privatisation, (b) the sale price and (c) its current value as listed on the stock exchange. [40701]

Mr. Bowis: The month of sale and price of each of the privatised trust ports are shown below. Stock exchange listings do not provide comparable data: not all the ports were listed after privatisation, and several are now part of larger port groups.

Proceeds from the sale of trust ports

Port	Sale Price £ million	Date of sale
Tees and Hartlepool	180.00	January 1992
Clyde	26.00	March 1992
Forth	112.70	March 1992
Medway	29.70	March 1992
Tilbury	32.00	March 1992
Dundee	18.05	November 1995

Roads Programme

Mrs. Dunwoody: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list for each of the last five years the budget for (a) re-signing, (b) landscaping and (c) lighting in the overall roads programme budget. [40700]

Mr. Watts: I will write to the hon. Member.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will update the figures and information given in his answer of 16 October 1995, Official Report, columns 75-80, in respect of road schemes completed for the last six years in respect of all projects; if he will identify which have been completed in the last 12 months; and what in each case was the average overrun. [40739]

Mr. Watts: I will write to the hon. Member.

Southend Test Centre

Mr. Channon: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will ensure that the test centre in Southend will remain in operation for the foreseeable future. [41192]

Mr. Bowis: The Driving Standards Agency has no current plans to cease operations from its driving test centre in Southend.

Traffic Congestion

Mr. Nicholas Winterton: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 26 February to the hon. Member for Bournemouth, West (Mr. Butterfill), Official Report, column 340, if he will now update the congestion or stress maps which were placed in the Library by producing a regional map showing more detailed forecasts of congestion for trunk roads in the north-west of England, with particular reference to key links on the motorway network in the region. [41243]

Mr. Olner: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport, pursuant to his answer of 26 February, to the hon. Member for Bournemouth, West (Mr. Butterfill), Official

Report, column 340, if he will now update the congestion or stress maps which were placed in the Library by producing a regional map showing more detailed forecasts of congestion for trunk roads in the midlands, with particular reference to key links on the motorway network in the region. [41242]

Mr. Watts: I have asked my officials to produce regional maps as requested covering each of the English regions and to place copies in the Library of the House within four weeks.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what are his latest estimates of the expenditure on all external consultants, including management consultants, for each year since 1992, in 1996 prices, for his Department and its agencies; and what are the quantified annual cost savings which such expenditure has resulted in. [41189]

Mr. Bowis: In each of the financial years from 1992–93 to 1995–96 the expenditure on external consultants, at 1996–97 prices, was as follows:

Financial year	Expenditure £ million
1992–93	226
1993–94	253
1994–95	208
1995–96	176

It is not possible to quantify the annual cost savings resulting from this expenditure.

Aviation (Unauthorised Landings)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what reports he has received of unauthorised landings from the air during the last 12 months over (a) South, (b) West, (c) North Yorkshire and (d) Humberside; and if he will make a statement. [40832]

Mr. Bowis: It is not clear to what sort of landings the hon. Gentlemen is referring.

Combined Heat and Power

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what capacity of electricity used in his Department's buildings is generated in a combined heat and power plant; and what plans he has to increase that capacity. [41312]

Mr. Bowis: None.

Roads (Litter)

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport if he will make a statement about the reduction in grass cutting and litter clearance on trunk roads in urban areas. [40940]

Mr. Watts: I will write to the hon. Member.

Transport Council

Mr. MacGregor: To ask the Secretary of State for Transport what was the outcome of the Transport Council held in Luxembourg on 3 and 4 October. [41344]

Sir George Young: The Transport Council met in Luxembourg on 3 and 4 October. My hon. Friend the Minister for Railways and Roads represented the United Kingdom.

The only item before the Council for decision was a proposal for negotiations with 10 central and eastern European countries on agreements aimed at integrating these countries' air transport markets with that of the Community. This was agreed. The Council met Transport Ministers from the 10 countries, as part of the agreed strategy of "structured relations" with these countries to help prepare them for EU membership. The discussion concentrated on the development of railways and combined transport.

The Commission reported on progress in the negotiations for land and air transport agreements between the Community and Switzerland.

The Council debated the Commission's White Paper on the future of the Community's railways. The United Kingdom welcomed the emphasis in the paper on greater commercialisation, the further separation of infrastructure and operations and open access for freight services.

The Council debated a draft directive on heavy goods vehicle taxation and road user charging, intended as a replacement for the existing directive, which has been annulled by the European Court of Justice. The Council also considered two proposals for further liberalisation of bus and coach services. The Council discussed a draft regulation on air transport, to extend and harmonise air carrier's liability in case of death or injury to passengers, and a draft directive on maritime safety, to introduce a harmonised safety regime for fishing vessels over 24m. It is planned that there should be further discussions at official level on all these proposals before the next Transport Council.

The United Kingdom presented a paper to the Council urging further work on methods of transferring the costs of marine infrastructure, such as navigational aids, from state budgets to users of the services provided. The Commission said that it would continue to look at this issue.

Other issues raised at the Council include aviation safety, air traffic management, and combined transport.

HEALTH

Tampons

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what advice he has given to tampon manufacturers in respect of overnight safety of products. [40740]

Mr. Horam: I will write to the hon. Member.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what are his latest estimates of the expenditure on all external consultants, including management consultants, for each year since 1992, in 1996 prices, for his Department and its agencies; and what are the quantified annual cost savings which such expenditure has resulted in. [41177]

Mr. Horam: Expenditure on all external consultants for the Department and its agencies for the years 1992–93 to 1995–96 in—1995–96 prices— is shown in the list. External consultants are used to assist in improving efficiency and effectiveness in the Department, but it is not possible to assess the savings which are a direct consequence of their activity.

1993–94: £16.611 million

1994–95: £18.927 million

1995–96: £18.363 million.

Dengue Fever Vaccine

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what research his Department has (a) commissioned and (b) evaluated into a vaccine against dengue fever; and if he will make a statement. [40861]

Mr. Horam: Information on research commissioned by the Department of Health is contained in "The Centrally Commissioned Research Programme" and "The Centrally Commissioned Research Programme: Commissions in 1994–95", copies of which are available in the Library.

Work on developing a vaccine against dengue has been underway for several years. Although recent work is encouraging, much further work is required.

Hepatitis

Mr. Luff: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will make a statement on his Department's policy on vaccination against hepatitis B. [41055]

Mr. Horam: The United Kingdom has one of the lowest prevalence rates of hepatitis B carriers in the world and the Department's current policy is to recommend immunisation against hepatitis B for those groups at increased risk of infection because of their life style, occupation or other factors such as close contact with a case or carrier. This policy, including the risk groups for whom immunisation is recommended, is kept under review.

Health Expenditure

Mr. Matthew Taylor: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what was the average expenditure per head in (a) each health authority and (b) nationally in the last financial year for which figures are available. [41332]

Mr. Horam: Per capita spend for each district health authority in 1994–95, the latest financial year available, has been placed in the Library.

The average per capita expenditure by district health authorities in England in 1994–95 was £383.

Comparisons of these per capita spend figures need to be treated with caution. First, not all the expenditure covered arises from population related activities. Secondly, crude populations do not reflect differences in age structure or relative health care need. These differences feature in the formulae used to inform the main allocations to the former district health authorities.

Mesothelioma

Ms Gordon: To ask the Secretary of State for Health what information relating to mesothelioma his Department distributes to general practitioners for issue to patients who have worked with asbestos. [41335]

Mr. Horam: I will write to the hon. Member.

Cervical Smears

Mr. Cousins: To ask the Secretary of State for Health (1) how many cervical cancer screening tests were carried out in each nation, region and health authority area in each year since 1990 with, in each case, the percentage of such tests requiring follow-up; [41339]

(2) if he will place in the Library all guidance he has issued about the adequacy and competence of cervical cancer screening tests; [41340]

(3) what guidance he has issued as to the acceptance by NHS pathologists as adequate cervical cancer screening test record cards that do not confirm that visual inspection has taken place; [41341]

(4) what representations he has received as to the adequacy of cervical cancer screening where no visual inspection of the cervix has taken place. [41342]

Mr. Horam: I will write to the hon. Member.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Timms: To ask the Secretary of State for Health, pursuant to his answer of 14 October, Official Report, column 755–56 (1) what is the total revenue payment in the current financial year to which his Department is committed in respect of projects funded under the private finance initiative; [41345]

(2) what total revenue payment in respect of national health service projects funded under the private finance initiative he projected for the current financial year at the time of the 1995 Budget; [41346]

(3) what total revenue payment in respect of national health service projects funded under the private finance initiative he now projects for the current financial year; [41347]

(4) what is the total revenue payment so far in the current financial year for national health service projects funded under the private finance initiative. [41348]

Mr. Horam: I will write to the hon. Member.

Health Service Deficits

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health if he will list for each district health authority serving the Greater London area for each of the financial years 1996-97 and 1997-98 and subsequent years for which figures can be given (a) the recurrent deficit, (b) the non-recurrent surplus or deficit, (c) movement in balances, (d) the cash deficit and (e) those cash deficits expressed as a percentage of revenue or expenditure. [40794]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 16 October 1996]: The information is not available in precisely the form requested. A table based on figures supplied by health authorities at the end of the first quarter of 1996-97 will be placed in the Library shortly. This sets out the forecast outturn position for each health authority including those serving the Greater London area, for 1996-97. These are shown as a percentage of each authority's income, and the forecast movement in balances in the year is also shown. We do not anticipate there being cash deficits as the system of brokerage between health authorities is expected to avoid these. Information on future years is not yet available.

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Secretary of State for Health when he received the letter dated 31 July for the hon. Member for Newham, South concerning his failure to answer his written question requesting information on health service deficits, of 22 July; when a substantive reply was sent; and for what reason the figures requested were regarded as being unsuitable for publication. [40795]

Mr. Horam [holding answer 16 October 1996]: The hon. Member's letter of 31 July concerning health authority deficits was received on 2 August. An initial reply was sent on 21 August. A substantive reply was sent today. At the time the question was initially asked, 22 July, the information held by the national health service executive was considered to be incomplete and therefore misleading, as it was still subject to discussion between health authorities and the NHS executive about their plans.

TREASURY

Public Expenditure

Mr. Morgan: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give details of the new mortgage interest payments uprating; and what estimate he has made of the effect of the uprating of MIPS on the current public expenditure survey round. [40672]

Mr. Waldegrave [holding answer 14 October 1996]: I cannot answer substantively before Parliament is prorogued. I will, however, write to the hon. Member.

Privatisation

Mr. Spearing: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list for each Department of State those parts and their functions or operations which have been disposed of to the private sector since 1987, stating for each the sum received at their stated date of disposal and that sum in 1996 prices. [40361]

Mr. Jack: The value of asset disposals for part of or functions undertaken by Departments of State since 1987 is as follows:

Mortgage Lenders

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to set up a body to regulate mortgage lenders; and if he will make a statement. [40772]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Banks and building societies, which constitute the vast bulk of mortgage providers, are already regulated as deposit takers, and their customers—be they borrowers or depositors—have access to their ombudsman schemes. The Personal Investment Authority has a role in regulating firms which sell, or offer advice on, endowment mortgages. In addition, the Council of Mortgage Lenders, which represents most of the industry, has published a draft code of mortgage lending practice with a view to covering all mortgage lenders.

Landfill Tax

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) if appointments to the regulatory body set up to oversee the operation of the landfill tax will be made by open competition; [40877]

(2) if he will list the environmental bodies which have made representations regarding enrolment as appropriate bodies to receive donations from landfill operators; [40875]

(3) if he will list the landfill operators in the south Yorkshire region who had registered their liability for landfill tax on 1 September; [40879]

(4) how many landfill operators in each Customs and Excise region had registered their liability as landfill operators on 1 September; [40878]

(5) if he will list the members of the regulatory body to oversee the operation of the landfill tax already appointed. [40876]

Mr. Oppenheim: I cannot answer substantively before Parliament is prorogued. I will, however, write to the hon. Member.

Tax Fraud Hotline

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will set up a free phone hotline for the reporting of suspected income tax fraud; and if he will make a statement. [40830]

Mr. Jack: The Inland Revenue already has arrangements for the receipt of information, which it publicises in the local and regional press as part of its normal compliance activities, and receives a substantial amount of information from concerned members of the public. Any member of the public who wishes to report suspected tax evasion can do so by telephoning any tax office in the knowledge that all such calls are treated in strict confidence. Thus the Government have no immediate plans to introduce a specific hotline for suspected income tax fraud.

Official Residences

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer on how many occasions since his appointment he has made use of each of his official residences. [41329]

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I live in 11 Downing street, and stay at Dorneywood from time to time.

Mr. O'Hara: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the annual cost to the Exchequer of the management and maintenance of each of his official residences. [41330]

Mrs. Angela Knight: I cannot answer substantively before Parliament is prorogued. I will, however, write to the hon. Member.

Unemployment-related Benefits

Mr. Hain: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer for those that are currently claiming unemployment-related benefits how many (a) men and (b) women for whom the interval in weeks between the latest and previous claim was (i) four or less, (ii) over four and up to 13, (iii) over 13 and up to 26, (iv) over 26 and up to 39, (v) over 39 and up to 52, (vi) over 52 and up to 104 and (vii) over 104 and those who had made no previous claim there are in (i) each standard region of England, (2) Wales, (3) Scotland and (4) Great Britain. [40902]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The information requested is contained in the following table.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what are his latest estimates of the expenditure on all external consultants, including management consultants, for each year since 1992, in 1996 prices, for his Department and its agencies; and what are the quantified annual cost savings which such expenditure has resulted in. [41190]

Mrs. Angela Knight: I cannot answer substantively before Parliament is prorogued. I will, however, write to the hon. Member.

Population Statistics

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will list the latest estimates by the Registrar General of Populations of those aged 17 years and over, plus 63 per cent. of those aged 16 years, for each district council area and parliamentary constituency in England and Wales, together with the equivalent electoral registration figures also expressed as a percentage of these population figures and in ascending order. [41045]

Mrs. Angela Knight: As the information is contained in several tables, I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy in the Library.

New Buildings and Premises

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the total expenditure on new buildings and premises by his Department and its agencies; and if he will indicate the square footage of new office space purchased or newly rented in each of the last five years. [41150]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The Treasury has not incurred any expenditure on new buildings and premises in the last five year; 5505 sq m—59,250 sq ft—in Allington towers were taken over in 1993. Information relating to the Chancellor's agencies could not be assembled before Parliament is prorogued.

Unemployment Statistics

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many people have experienced unemployment, by Employment Service area office, in each region since April 1992. [41170]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Figures for separate Employment Service jobcentres could be provided only at disproportionate cost. However, the figures for each standard statistical region are contained in the following table.

Number of people experiencing at least one spell of claimant unemployment since April 1992

Abortion

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the statistically most likely candidate for an abortion within the Trent region after the 24th week of pregnancy in the latest year for which figures are available in terms of (a) the age of the women, (b) marital status of the women, (c) the number of previous children of the women and (d) the grounds on which the abortion is performed. [40857]

Mrs. Angela Knight: The statistically most likely candidate for an abortion for each of the variables listed is defined as the category with the highest recorded frequency of legal terminations. The percentages are based on all legal terminations performed in 1994, to women usually resident in the Trent health region.

The categories with the highest frequencies found in each of the variables are as follows:

age of the women: 25 to 29 age group comprised 50 per cent. (4) of all post 24th week gestation terminations; marital status: married women comprised 88 per cent. (7) of all post 24th week gestation terminations; number of previous children borne by the women: women with no previous (live and still born) children born to them, comprised 50 per cent. (4) of all post 24th week gestation terminations;

legal ground under which the abortion was performed: statutory ground E alone comprised 88 per cent. (7) of all post 24th week gestation terminations. The definition of ground E is 'that there is a substantial risk that if the child were born it would suffer from such physical or mental abnormalities as to be seriously handicapped'.

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make statement on the statistically most likely candidate for an abortion within the Trent region in the latest year for which figures are available in terms of (a) the age of the woman, (b) marital status of the woman, (c) the number of previous children of the woman and (d) the grounds on which the abortion is performed. [40858]

Mrs. Knight: The statistically most likely candidate for an abortion for each of the variables listed is defined as the category with the highest recorded frequency of legal terminations. The percentages are based on all legal terminations performed in 1994, to women usually resident in the Trent health region.

The categories with the highest frequencies found in each of the variables are as follows:

age of the woman: 20 to 24 age group comprised 29 per cent. (3,463) of all terminations;

marital status: single women comprised 64 per cent. (7,570) of all terminations;

number of previous children borne by the woman: women with no previous (live and still born) children born to them, comprised 50 per cent. (5,923) of all terminations;

legal ground under which the abortion was performed: statutory ground C alone comprised 86 per cent. (10,143) of all terminations. The definition of ground C is "that the pregnancy has not exceeded its 24th week and that the continuance of the pregnancy would involve risk, greater than if the pregnancy were terminated, of injury to the physical or mental health of the woman".

Lone parents

Ms Harman: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what proportion of single lone mothers are in (a) part–time work, (b) full–time work and (c) all paid work; [41023]

(2) how many children are in families headed by (a) single lone mothers, (b) divorced or separated lone mothers, (c) widowed lone mothers and (d) lone fathers; and what were the figures five years previously; [41003]

(3) what proportion of one–parent families are (a) single lone mothers, (b) divorced or separated lone mothers, (c) widowed lone mothers and (d) lone fathers by English region. [41013]

(4) how many lone parents under 25 years of age are (a) in paid work, (b) economically active and (c) economically inactive; [41019]

(5) what proportion of lone parents are economically active; [41007]

(6) what proportion of one–parent families are headed by (a) single lone mothers, (b) divorced or separated lone mothers, (c) widowed lone mothers and (d) lone fathers (i) in total and (ii) in each region; and what were the figures five years previously; [41005]

(7) what proportion of widowed lone mothers are in (a) part-time work, (b) full-time work and (c) all paid work; [40894]

(8) what proportion of lone parents are economically active, by English region; [41024]

(9) how many children are currently in one-parent families; [41004]

(10) how many one-parent families there were in each of the last five years; [41014]

(11) how many lone parents are under 25 years of age; [41020]

(12) what proportion of families in England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland were one-parent families in each of the last 10 years; [41001]

(13) what proportion of families were one-parent families in each of the last 10 years (a) in total and (b) by English region; [41008]

(14) how many one-parent families are there (a) in England by region, (b) in Scotland, (c) in Wales and (d) in Northern Ireland; [41006]

(15) how many lone parents there are whose youngest child is over five years old; [41016]

(16) how many children are in families headed by (a) single lone mothers, (b) divorced or separated lone mothers, (c) widowed lone mothers and (d) lone fathers by English region; [41002]

(17) what proportion of lone fathers are in (a) part-time work, (b) full-time work and (c) all paid work. [40895]

Mrs. Angela Knight: I cannot answer substantively before Parliament is prorogued. I will, however, write to the hon. Member.

Retail Prices Index

Mr. Ainger: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if pensioner households mainly dependent on state benefits are included in the calculation of weights which form the basis of the retail prices index. [41011]

Mrs. Angela Knight: Pensioner households mainly dependent on state benefits are not included in the calculation of the weights used in the retail prices index.

The retail prices index excludes pensioners deriving at least three-quarters of their income from state pensions and benefits. Pensioners are excluded as their spending patterns differ significantly from those of a typical household. However, the Office for National Statistics does compile pensioner price indices to cover these households on a quarterly basis.

Details of the weights used are published each year in the retail prices index "Business Monitor", MM23. An article explaining how the weights were calculated for 1996 was published in the February 1996 issue which is available from the House of Commons Library.

Policy Making (Resource Implications)

Mr. Frank Field: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will place in the Library a copy of the full text of the Treasury guideline mentioned in paragraph 13 of Cm 2948, which requires that when any Government Department is considering policy it considers the resource implications for other Departments. [41215]

Mr. Waldegave: I cannot answer substantively before Parliament is prorogued. I will, however, write to the hon. Member.

Alcohol and Tobacco

Mr. Tipping: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the most recent estimate he has received of the loss of excise duty through smuggling (a) alcohol and (b) tobacco. [41219]

Mr. Oppenheim: Customs and Excise published estimates of revenue evasion through smuggling on 19 September. The actual loss to the Exchequer will be less than the amount of revenue evaded, as some smuggling is likely to represent additional consumption, rather than substituting for similar goods bought in the UK. Customs' estimates for the annual revenue—excise duty and VAT—evaded are (a) £210 million for alcohol and (b) £560 million for tobacco products. This amount represents less than 5 per cent. of the annual total excise duty and VAT collected on alcohol and tobacco. These figures do not include amounts for commercial fraud—where revenue is evaded by use of false documentation.

Nursing Home Fees

Mr. Nicholas Baker: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has any plans to introduce tax relief on the whole or part of payments by patients in registered nursing homes of their fees. [41198]

Mr. Jack: I cannot answer substantively before Parliament is prorogued. I will, however, write to my hon. Friend.

Combined Heat and Power

Mr. Battle: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what capacity of electricity used in his Department's buildings is generated in a combined heat and power plant; and what plans he has to increase that capacity. [41311]

Mrs. Angela Knight: I cannot answer substantively before Parliament is prorogued. I will, however, write to the hon. Member.

Property Improvement

Mr. David Atkinson: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what plans he has to introduce tax concessions to smaller landlords to improve their properties following the new conditions arising from the Housing Act 1996; and if he will make a statement. [41331]

Mr. Jack: I cannot answer substantively before Parliament is prorogued. I will, however, write to my hon. Friend.

Lost Revenue

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the amount of revenue lost by the Exchequer due to the facilities provided for (a) individual United Kingdom citizens and (b) companies operating in the United Kingdom on each of (i) Jersey, (ii) Guernsey, (iii) the Isle of Man, (iv) Gibraltar, (v) the British Virgin Islands, (vi) the Cayman Islands and (vii) other overseas United Kingdom dependent territories; what measures have been considered to recover such lost revenue; and if he will make a statement. [41244]

Mr. Jack: I cannot answer substantively before Parliament is prorogued. I will, however, write to the hon. Member.

Private Finance Initiative

Mr. Timms: To ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) how much capital spending by (i) the private sector and (ii) the public sector in the current financial year (a) he projected at the time of the 1995 Budget and (b) he projects now in respect of projects under the private finance initiative; [41337]

(2) how much capital spending has so far been committed by (i) the private sector and (ii) the public sector for the current financial year in respect of projects under the private finance initiative. [41338]

Mr. Jack: I cannot answer substantively before Parliament is prorogued. I will, however, write to the hon. Member.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Contracts

Mr. Austin Mitchell: To ask the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will list the number, nature and value of contracts awarded by his Department to Coopers and Lybrand, KPMG, Price Waterhouse, Ernst and Young, Deloitte and Touche, Arthur Andersen, Grant Thornton, BDO Stoy Hayward, Pannel Kerr Forster, and Robson Rhodes and their subsidiaries and associates, during 1995 and 1996. [37317]

Mr. Boswell: During the financial year 1995–96, my Department entered into two contracts with Deloitte Touche, both in connection with the Department's data communications strategy study, at a total cost of £130,988. One contract with BDO Stoy Hayward dealt with the monitoring of Dairy Crest activities for 1993–94 and April-October 1995, and one contract with Ernst and Young was concerned with the implementation of the Ministry's resource accounting and management information system. For reasons of commercial confidentiality, I cannot disclose the value of these two contracts. There were no contracts with the other companies named in the question.

ADAS employed the services of KPMG for a benchmarking seminar, Price Waterhouse for a privatisation feasibility project and Grant Thornton for VAT advice. The aggregate value of these three contracts was £7,002.

The Veterinary Laboratories Agency spent £18,689.35 in the calendar year 1995 with Price Waterhouse. This was all for merger-associated work including strategy development for the new agency. No other contracts were entered into with the organisations named in the period referred to.

I have asked the chief executive of Central Science Laboratory to provide a separate reply in respect of his use of the consultancy firms concerned.

Letter from P. I. Stanley to Mr. Austin Mitchell, dated 16 October 1996:

The Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food has asked me to reply to your question about contracts awarded to given companies and their subsidiaries and associates during the financial year 1995/96, as this is an operational matter for which I am responsible.[37317]

During the year in question two contracts totalling £6147 in value were awarded to Price Waterhouse for work involving a Review of Future Management and a Team Building Workshop. No contracts were awarded to any of the other companies listed.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Montserrat

Mr. Corbyn: To ask the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what has been the total sum spent on emergency relief in Montserrat in the last year; and if he will make a statement on forthcoming assistance in the next six months. [40845]

Dr. Fox: Since July 1995, when the volcanic emergency on Montserrat began, we have committed £8.5 million on a wide variety of projects, many of which are ongoing.

In August this year, my right hon. and noble Friend, Baroness Chalker, announced an additional £25 million package of assistance to Montserrat covering the period from April 1996 to March 1998. These funds will be used to maintain essential Government services in Montserrat and to improve the infrastructure in the North of the island which the scientists regard as at minimal risk from volcanic hazard. Specific projects include upgrading and temporary hospital facilities, additional classrooms for primary and secondary school children, power generation, water distribution and watershed protection, the improvement of roads, alternative port facilities and the establishment of a permanent observatory to monitor volcanic activity. Copies of the announcement and background note have been laid in the Libraries of both Houses. The permanent secretary of the Overseas Development Administration visited Montserrat on 4 and 5 October to review progress.

I pay tribute to the remarkable courage and forbearance of the people of Montserrat who had to endure difficult and stressful conditions for many months because of the volcanic activity.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Public Disorder

Mrs. Fyfe: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the ability of the relevant authorities to control public disorder; and if he will make a statement. [40137]

Sir John Wheeler: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

New Buildings and Premises

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the total expenditure on new buildings and premises by her Department and its agencies; and if she will indicate the square footage of new office space purchased or newly rented in each of the last five years. [41139]

Sir John Wheeler: The information requested on expenditure on new buildings and premises could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

The square footage of new office space purchased, including what has been constructed, or newly rented for the Northern Ireland civil service general office estate in each of the last five years is as follows:

	Square footage
1991–92	59,580
1992–93	106,730
1993–94	257,700
1994–95	72,430
1995–96	129,675

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what are his latest estimates of the expenditure on all external consultants, including management consultants, for each year since 1992, in 1996 prices, for his Department and its agencies; and what are the quantified annual cost savings which such expenditure has resulted in. [41183]

Sir John Wheeler: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Plastic Bullets

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the result of the Independent Commission for Police Complaints into the use of plastic bullets in Keady, County Armagh during the last weekend in July; and if he will make a statement. [41034]

Sir John Wheeler: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Population Statistics

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the latest estimates of those aged 17 years and over, plus 63 per cent. of those aged 16 years, for each parliamentary constituency in Northern Ireland, together with the equivalent electoral registration figures also expressed as a percentage of these population figures and in ascending order. [41046]

Sir John Wheeler: The 1991 electoral ward population figures taken from the Northern Ireland census, aggregated to parliamentary constituencies are as follows. Subsequent mid-year estimates are provided at district council level only and not broken down by age. Consequently the equivalent electoral registration figures shown relate to September 1991.

Parliamentary constituency	Column 1. Population aged 17 and over plus 63 per cent. of population aged 16 years	Column 2. Registered electors	Column 2 as a percentage of column 1
Belfast South	55,368	52,556	94.9
South Antrim	71,334	68,292	95.7
Lagan Valley	76,053	73,688	96.9
East Londonderry	78,930	76,912	97.4
Belfast East	54,655	53,375	97.7
Strangford	71,468	69,855	97.7
South Down	78,592	77,371	98.4
East Antrim	64,621	63,739	98.6
Foyle	77,264	75,970	98.8
North Antrim	71,096	70,217	98.8
Mid Ulster	71,186	70,410	98.9
North Down	70,201	69,604	99.1
Upper Bann	68,675	68,422	99.6
Newry and Armagh	68,837	68,716	99.8
Belfast West	54,960	55,280	100.6
Belfast North	54,931	55,587	101.2
Fermanagh and South Tyrone	70,489	71,472	101.4
Total	1,158,660	1,141,466	98.5

Work is currently in progress to produce 1991 census data for the parliamentary constituencies as defined by the Boundary Commission for Northern Ireland. These data will be deposited in the House of Commons Library in due course.

Nursery Places

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the estimate for unmet need for nursery places in Northern Ireland. [41054]

Mr. Ancram: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Prisoners (Unescorted Release)

Mr. Alfred Morris: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) if he will make it his policy that when high risk prisoners are given temporary unescorted release (a) the airports they are expected to use and (b) the police of the area to which they are to travel are informed in advance; [41206]

(2) pursuant to his answer of 14 October about the temporary release of unescorted high risk prisoners, when he last reviewed policy on the matter; and when the next review is planned. [41207]

Sir John Wheeler: Responsibility for the subject in question has been delegated to the Prisons Agency under its chief executive, Mr. Alan Shannon. I have asked him to arrange for a reply to be given.

Letter from Alan Shannon to Mr. Alfred Morris, dated 17 October 1996:

The Secretary of State has asked me to reply to the two Parliamentary Questions which you tabled about policy in relation to the unescorted temporary release of high risk prisoners.

You asked about the review of policy. Issues relating to risk are considered whenever changes in temporary release mechanisms are contemplated. The last significant change in compassionate release arrangements was in June 1995. The last significant change in escorting arrangements was in 1983. Policy in relation to unescorted release is currently being reviewed in the light of Liam Hefferman's failure to return from leave.

You asked about notification. This is an operational matter for the police.

Combined Heat and Power

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what capacity of electricity used in his Department's buildings is generated in a combined heat and power plant; and what plans he has to increase that capacity. [41316]

Sir John Wheeler: At present no buildings have combined heat and power plants.

Handguns

Rev. Martin Smyth: To ask the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what changes he plans to make to the legislation on the ownership and use of handguns; [41350]

(2) what are the implications of proposed changes to the legislation on the ownership and use of handguns for retired security forces personnel. [41349]

Sir John Wheeler: I shall write to the hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

NATIONAL HERITAGE

New Buildings and Premises

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what was the total expenditure on new buildings and premises by her Department and its agencies; and if she will indicate the square footage of new office space purchased or newly rented in each of the last five years. [41140]

Mr. Sproat: My Department and its agencies have incurred expenditure of approximately £4,800,000 on new buildings and premises. Within the last five years 66,798 sq ft of new office space was acquired.

Concessionary Television Licences

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) how many people qualified for concessionary television licences in each year since 1990 in the area covered by the Govan parliamentary constituency; [41208]

(2) how many people qualified for concessionary television licences in each year since 1990 in the area covered by Glasgow city council. [41209]

Mr. Sproat: The BBC, as licensing authority, is responsible for the administration of the television licensing system, including the maintenance of detailed licence records and the determination of eligibility for concessionary licences. We understand that the sort of information that the hon. Member requests is held only by individual scheme and by category of concessionary scheme.

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage (1) what plans she has to review concessionary television licences for the elderly; [41210]

(2) what assessment she has made of the advantages of relaxing the criteria for concessionary television licences, which restrict eligibility to those living within a group of at least four dwellings which fall within a common and exclusive boundary, in order to allow a larger number of individuals to qualify; [41212]

(3) pursuant to her answer to the hon. Member for Cheltenham (Mr. Jones) of 20 June, Official Report, column 567, when and how she proposes to overcome the difficulties caused by a whole housing scheme applying for a concessionary television licence but who are ineligible solely because of the ownership circumstance of a small proportion of dwellings within its boundary. [41225]

Mr. Sproat: The concessionary television licence is available to retirement pensioners and disabled people living in nursing or residential homes. It also extends to certain sheltered accommodation which meets a number of qualifying criteria and is directly comparable to a residential home.

At Committee stage of the Broadcasting Bill, the Government undertook to address a specific anomaly whereby some sheltered housing schemes which meet all the other qualifying criteria fail to qualify for the concession because a small number of units within the scheme were purchased under the right-to-buy provisions before the accommodation was designated as sheltered housing. We intend to bring forward new consolidated television licensing regulations before the end of the year, and they will address this anomaly.

There are no plans for any wider changes to the concessionary scheme. As was said in the 1994 White Paper "The Future of the BBC", Cm 2621, the Government believe that the right way to help the less well-off, of all ages, is through the welfare and benefit system.

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what concessionary television licence schemes are in place for retired people in other countries of the European Union; and if she will consider adopting any of those which she assesses to be an improvement on that presently offered in the United Kingdom. [41211]

Mr. Sproat: The Government do not have this information. Television broadcasting arrangements, including the size of the public sector broadcasters and the services they provide, vary widely from one EC country to another. Direct comparisons of this kind are therefore not always appropriate and our policy in this area is, and will continue to be, based on the circumstances which prevail in the United Kingdom.

National Lottery

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on when she expects to reach a decision in respect of the target group to be supported by the £100 million set aside from national lottery proceeds for sports development. [40851]

Mr. Sproat: The Sports Council is the statutory distributor in England of lottery funds for good causes in sport. I do not have any role in the distribution process itself. To date, the Sports Council has awarded £305 million of lottery funds to 1,537 projects.

Bronze Age Village (East London)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what have been the results to date of English Heritage's excavations into the bronze age village at Brisbane road, east London; and if she will make a statement. [40883]

Mr. Sproat: The archaeological evaluation has revealed several post holes, one dated to the bronze age, and a drain of possibly medieval or earlier date. The evaluation has helped to confirm the extent of the site of a bronze age village in the area which was identified in a nearby excavation two years ago, and the possible existence of other archaeological deposits in the surrounding area.

Historic Churches

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will list the grants made by the Millennium Commission to churches built before 1900. [41230]

Mrs. Virginia Bottomley: This is a matter for the Millennium Commission. I shall write to my hon. Friend in my capacity as chairman of the Commission and place copies of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what are her latest estimates of the expenditure on all external consultants, including management consultants, for each year since 1992, in 1996 prices, for her Department and its agencies; and what are the quantified annual cost savings which such expenditure has resulted in. [41182]

Mr. Sproat: My Department and agencies use consultants for a wide variety of tasks, only a small proportion of which are aimed at achieving cost savings. No central record is held on overall savings and it would not be possible to isolate those consultancies and quantify the cost savings without incurring disproportionate cost. The available information, in 1996 prices, is given in the following table:

	1992–93 (actual) £	1993–94 (actual) £	1994–95 (actual) £	1995–96 (actual) £	1996–97 (estimate) £
Department of National Heritage	1,286,964	1,613,144	478,806	304,632	200,824
Historic Royal Palaces agency	3,170,177	3,865,641	1,414,408	677,000	1,906,112
Royal Parks agency	[1]n/a	780,004	868,548	771,986	201,760

[1] The Royal Parks agency was not formed until April 1993.

Academy of Sport

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she proposes a single national academy of sport; and if she will make a statement. [40852]

Mr. Amess: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what criteria she proposes to lay down for the establishment of a sporting centre of excellence. [41239]

Mr. Sproat: Details of the Government's proposals for the British Academy of Sport, as the pinnacle of a regional network of centres of sporting excellence and academies for particular sports, are included in the bid prospectus which was published on 24 July. Bidders have until 31 October to submit their bids.

Combined Heat and Power

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage what capacity of electricity used in her Department's buildings is generated in a combined heat and power plant; and what plans she has to increase that capacity. [41326]

Mr. Sproat: I regret that it has not been possible to provide an answer before Prorogation. I shall therefore write to the hon. Member and place copies of my reply in the Libraries of the House.

Yorkshire County Cricket Club

Mr. Sutcliffe: To ask the Secretary of State for National Heritage if she will make a statement on the advice given by the Sports Council to Yorkshire county cricket club in respect of relocation from Headingley to Wakefield. [41205]

Mr. Sproat: The Sports Council has provided advice on technical issues associated with the relocation, in particular how Yorkshire county cricket club might assess the proposals for relocation to Wakefield. The council has also reminded the club that at present lottery applications for spectator accommodation have relatively low priority; and that the development of a new ground must be seen within the context of the strategy for the development of test match cricket, which is currently being developed by the Test and County Cricket Board, and due for publication next month.

EDUCATION AND EMPLOYMENT

School Transport

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what instructions have been issued to Office for Standards in Education inspectors in respect of (a) school transport and (b) the end of the three for two concession. [40743]

Mrs. Gillan: Instructions to inspectors are a matter for Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Schools. He has responsibility for arranging the inspection of all state-maintained schools. Ofsted inspectors have not specifically been instructed in respect of (a) school transport or (b) the three for two concession. They are, however, required to report on any health and safety problems related to individual schools which they note in the course of inspections.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will investigate how schools and local education authorities are successfully implementing the end of the three for two concession; and if she will make a statement. [40744]

Mrs. Gillan: The ending of the three for two concession applies to specified categories of vehicles where seatbelts are fitted. There is a legal requirement and there is, therefore, no choice about its implementation.

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what guidance has been issued to local education authorities and schools by the Health and Safety Executive in respect of (a) school transport and (b) the removal of the three to two concession. [40741]

Mr. Bowis: I have been asked to reply.

No advice has been issued by the Health and Safety Executive. My Department will shortly by publishing advice notes on seat belts in school transport. These will include advice on the removal of the three for two concession and will be distributed to local authorities.

Jobcentres

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) if she will list the jobcentres of South Yorkshire currently scheduled for closure; [4086]

(2) how many jobcentre service points have been closed in the past year; and in which areas. [40884]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I will ask him to arrange for a reply to be given and place a copy of his answer in the Library.

Jobseeker's Allowance

Ms Lynne: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what instructions were given by her Department on the marking by Employment Service staff of the introduction of the jobseeker's allowance; and what is the estimated total cost of the events held to coincide with the introduction of the jobseeker's allowance. [40961]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I will ask him to arrange for a reply to be given and place a copy of his answer in the Library.

Breakthrough Initiative

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what percentage of unemployed people who have not used services provided by the breakthrough initiative in north Staffordshire in the last 12 months have moved into employment; [41114]

(2) what assessment has been made of the success of the breakthrough initiative, undertaken between the employment service in north Staffordshire and Staffordshire training and enterprise council; [41113]

(3) what is the operating cost of the breakthrough initiative in north Staffordshire; [41115]

(4) how many unemployed people have used services provided by the breakthrough initiative in north Staffordshire in the last 12 months; and what percentage of these have subsequently moved into employment. [41116]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the questions has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I will ask him to arrange for a reply to be given and place a copy of his answer in the Library.

Training

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of people leaving Government-supported training in Yorkshire since September 1994 obtained a full-time job in a field closely related to that in which they received training. [40967]

Mr. Paice: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Library.

Female Employment

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is her latest estimate of the number of women in work in Leeds, West (a) full time and (b) part time; and what percentage of the work force these figures constitute. [41284]

Mrs. Angela Knight: I have been asked to reply.

I cannot answer substantively before Parliament is prorogued. I will, however, write to the hon. Member.

Full-time Education

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many (a) 16-year-olds and (b) 17-year-olds were in full-time education at school or college in the January of each since 1985. [40759]

Mr. Paice [holding answer 16 October 1996]: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy in the Library.

Nursery Voucher Scheme

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment, pursuant to her answer of 16 July, Official Report, column 466, what is the total cash value of vouchers issued to parents but not redeemed, in each of the four pilot authorities; and if the cash value of the unredeemed vouchers will be retained by the Exchequer. [40575]

Mr. Robin Squire [holding answer 16 October 1996]: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy in the Library.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what will be the cost of the publicity measures relating to the national implementation of the voucher scheme, as announced by her Department on 24 July, identifying separately the costs under the headings (a) poster campaigns, (b) leaflets and other publications, (c) television and radio advertising, (d) newspaper and journal advertisements, (e) specialist mailing, (f) seminars and (g) other. [40541]

Mr. Squire: The estimated budget for publicity about the nursery voucher scheme up to its initial implementation is £1,900,000. This will provide information for parents and providers of nursery education which will enable them to participate fully in this new scheme.

The figure is broken down in the table:

Posters, leaflets and other publication	475,000
TV and radio advertising	850,000
Newspaper and journal advertisements	50,000
Specialist mailings	100,000
Seminars and exhibitions	40,000
Other	385,000

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is the annual cost of administering the nursery voucher scheme. [41028]

Mr. Squire: The cost of administering the nursery education voucher scheme will be around £15 million over three years, that is an annual cost of around £5 million—a cost of less than £10 per child.

Mr. Blunkett: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many four-year-olds were eligible to receive a voucher during the first term of phase one of the voucher scheme in (a) Kensington and Chelsea, (b) Westminster, (c) Wandsworth and (d) Norfolk; and of these, how many, expressed as a number and as a percentage of the above, redeemed a voucher in that term. [40577]

Mr. Squire: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Library.

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many extra nursery places the nursery voucher scheme has created in (a) the public sector and (b) the private sector. [41029]

Mr. Squire: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Library.

Training for Work

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what are the results of the training for work leavers survey for each region and for Great Britain as a whole, for the periods between April 1994 and March 1995 and April 1995 and March 1996, for all leavers and separately for male and female, for each ethnic group, and for those with a disability or health problem, broken down to show the number and proportion of Training for Work leavers who (a) have been entered for a vocational qualification, (b) had obtained a vocational qualification, (c) had failed to obtain a vocational qualification, and (d) were awaiting their results; [41087]

(2) what was the number and proportion of training for work leavers who six months after leaving were (a) in a full-time job with their work experience employer, (b) in a full-time job with another employer, (c) employed in their own business, (d) in a part-time job, (e) in voluntary work, (f) on another Government training programme, (g) on a full-time education or training course, (h) unemployed and claiming benefit, (i) unemployed and not claiming benefit, (j) in a job club and (k) doing something else; and what is the number and proportion of training for work leavers who had completed the training agreed in their initial action plan; [41088]

(3) what are the results of the youth training leavers survey for the period December 1994 to January 1996 for each training and enterprise council area in England and Wales and each local enterprise council area in Scotland, broken down to show the number and proportion of youth training leavers who were (a) in full-time work with the same employer, (b) in full-time work with a different employer, (c) in part-time work, (d) on a full-time course at a college or training centre, (e) on another youth training scheme, (f) doing something else, (g) unemployed and (h) had obtained a vocational qualification; and what was (i) the number of questionnaires issued, (ii) the usable percentage response and (iii) the percentage of respondents who were early leavers; [41089]

(4) what are the results from the training for work leavers survey for the period December 1994 to January 1996 for each training and enterprise council area in England and Wales and each local enterprise council area in Scotland, broken down to show the number and proportion of leavers who (a) had been entered for a vocational qualification, (b) had obtained a vocational qualification, (c) had failed to obtain a vocational qualification and (d) were awaiting their results; [41090]

(5) what was the number and proportion of training for work leavers who, six months after leaving were (a) in a full-time job with their work experience employer, (b) in a full-time job with another employer, (c) employed in their own business, (d) in a part-time job, (e) in voluntary work, (f) on another Government training programme, (g) on a full-time education or training course, (h) unemployed and claiming benefit, (i) unemployed and not claiming benefit, (j) in a job club and (k) doing something else; and what is the number and proportion of training for work leavers who had completed the training agreed in their initial action plan; [41091]

(6) what is the number and proportion of trainees who six months after leaving were (a) in a full-time job with their work experience employer, (b) in a full-time job with another employer, (c) employed in their own business, (d) in a part-time job, (e) in voluntary work, (f) on another Government training programme, (g) on a full-time education or training course, (h) unemployed and claiming benefit, (i) unemployed and not claiming benefit, (j) in a job club and (k) doing something else; and if she will base her reply on data set out in the youth training leavers survey for each region and for Great Britain as a whole, for the periods April 1994 to March 1995 and April 1995 to March 1996, (i) in total and (ii) broken down, (l) by gender, (2) by ethnic group and (3) to show those with a disability or health problem. [41110]

Mr. Paice: As the reply will consist of a large amount of data, I will write to the hon. member and place a copy of my reply in the Library.

Education Spending

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how much was available for the local education authority in Doncaster to spend on each pupil, in (a) 1994–95, (b) 1995–96 and (c) 1996–97. [40983]

Mr. Robin Squire: Local authorities are free to determine their own levels of spending on pupils within their total budgets. The per pupil allowances in the education component of Doncaster's standard spending assessment are as follows:

	Primary £	Secondary £
1994–95	1,943	2,717
1995–96	1,934	2,572
1996–97	2,039	2,719

Employment Service

Mrs. Helen Jackson: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment on the basis of what criteria decisions are taken to close or merge Employment Service offices which are used by the public seeking jobs. [40885]

Mr. Forth: Responsibility for the subject of the question has been delegated to the Employment Service agency under its chief executive. I will ask him to arrange for a reply to be given and place a copy of his answer in the Library.

Mr. Ian McCartney: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what assessment her Department has made of the advantage of widening the role of the Employment Service to provide information about education and training, careers guidance and basic skills work. [41118]

Mr. Forth: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Library.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what are her latest estimates of the expenditure on all external consultants, including management consultants, for each year since 1992, in 1996 prices, for her Department and its agencies; and what are the quantified annual cost savings which such expenditure has resulted in. [41185]

Mr. Robin Squire: Information in the form requested could be provided only at disproportionate costs.

Pupils (South Yorkshire)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list by local authority, the number of (a) primary and (b) secondary pupils resident in South Yorkshire who attended schools in local authorities other than the one in which they live, in each of the last 10 years for which figures are available. [40907]

Mr. Robin Squire: The following table shows the number of pupils resident in each authority who attended maintained schools elsewhere in the years 1992 to 1994. No data are available for other years.

Local authority	5 to 10 years	11 to 15 years	Over 16 years

Training and Enterprise Councils

Mr. Byers: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will list for each training and enterprise council its budget for 1996–97 and the total national budget for 1996–97. [40753]

Mr. Paice [holding answer 16 October 1996]: The Budget made available to each training and enterprise council in England by the Department for 1996–97, is shown in the following table. The responsibility for TECs in Wales lies with my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Parliamentary Questions

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many answers to (a) written and (b) oral parliamentary questions have required correction by her Department in each of the past two years. [40630]

Mr. Robin Squire [holding answer 16 October 1996]: This is a matter of public record.

Exclusions and Expulsions

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment if she will publish for the last available four years for each local authority in South Yorkshire and for South Yorkshire as a whole the number of school exclusions or expulsions recorded for (a) primary schools, (b) secondary schools and (c) all schools, indicating the percentage of exclusions and expulsions as a proportion in each case of overall pupil numbers. [40958]

Mr. Forth: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Library.

Combined Heat and Power

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what capacity of electricity used in her Department's buildings is generated in a combined heat and power plant; and what plans she has to increase that capacity. [41319]

Mr. Paice: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Library.

Grants (Children of Missionaries)

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what arrangements are in place for grants to be provided for university education for the children of missionaries who have been working abroad; [40896]

(2) if she will list by faith, the arrangements in place for grants to be provided for university education for the children of missionaries who have been working abroad. [40824]

Mr. Forth: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Library.

New Buildings and Premises

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what was the total expenditure on new buildings and premises by her Department and its agencies; and if she will indicate the square footage of new office space purchased or newly rented in each of the last five years. [41146]

Mr. Robin Squire: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Library.

A-level Science Students

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what percentage of 16-year-olds last year went on to study an A-level science subject, broken down by (a) region and (b) gender. [41286]

Mr. Paice: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my of my reply in the Library.

Free School Meals

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment how many and what percentage of (a) primary and (b) secondary school children in each south Yorkshire local authority received free school meals in each year since 1989. [40826]

Mrs. Gillan: The information is shown in the following table.

Student Loans

Mr. Bryan Davies: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what was the cost of the production and circulation of (a) the invitation to tender documents prepared for the proposed twin-track student loan scheme, (b) the revised invitation to tender document and (c) any publicity material associated with the proposed scheme; [41247]

(2) if she will list the occasions on which she, her Ministry or departmental officials met with those private sector institutions which put forward bids under the proposed twin-track student loan scheme; [41248]

(3) for what reasons her Department was unable to come to an agreement for the introduction of publicity-subsidised private sector student loans under the proposed twin-track scheme; [41249]

(4) what is the planned timetable for the contracting out of the administrative work of the Student Loans Company; [41250]

(5) what is her Department's estimate of the public sector borrowing requirement effect of the proposed sale of student loan debts to the private sector and the contracting out of the administrative work of the Student Loans Company in 1996–97 and each relevant year thereafter; and if this includes revisions to forecasts made necessary by the cancellation of the twin-track scheme. [41305]

Mr. Forth: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Library.

Barnsley and Doncaster Training and Enterprise Council

Mr. Redmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment (1) what percentage of the Barnsley and Doncaster TEC budget is currently spent on management training for small firms; and if she will make a statement; [40964]

(2) on how many occasions in the last 12 months the Barnsley and Doncaster TEC has been visited by officials from the European Commission Court of Auditors; for what reasons the visits were made; and what was the result of the visits. [40825]

Mr. Paice: I will write to the hon. Member and place a copy of my reply in the Library.

Aerodynamic Design and Electronic Engineers

Mr. Spellar: To ask the Secretary of State for Education and Employment what is her Department's estimate of the demand for aerodynamic design and electronic engineers over the next two years; and how many training places are available on courses. [40939]

Mr. Paice: The Department does not collect information about the demand for specific technologist occupations nor about the training places available to provide for such skills; such information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

SCOTLAND

Statistical Information

Mr. David Marshall: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what categories of statistical information his Department collects in respect of the new parliamentary constituencies; what plans he has to collect similar information for the new constituencies to that currently collected for the existing constituencies; what categories he intends his Department to collect in future; and if he will make a statement. [40154]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Currently it is only electoral statistical information which is specifically collected for the new constituencies. Some of this information has already been published in the ONS Monitor EL 96/2 which is available in the Library. Further information will appear in the ONS volume "Electoral Statistics 1996" to be published towards the end of the year. We shall continue to collect the same information on the new constituencies as is currently collected for the present constituencies.

A census monitor, published by the General Register Office for Scotland (GRO(S)) on 30 September 1996, presented selected data from the 1991 census for each of the new constituencies. GRO(S) can also provide information on vital events such as births and deaths for the new constituencies using analysis by postcode.

Bee Diseases

Mr. Dalyell: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland, pursuant to the letter from the Under-Secretary, the Minister with responsibility for agriculture and forestry and the environment, of 15 July, if he will make a statement on his co-operation with the bee-keeping community on monitoring and diagnostic tests in relation to varroa and other bee diseases. [40369]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson [holding answer 14 October 1996]: The Scottish Office Agriculture, Environment and Fisheries Department undertakes focused inspection of bee colonies in the spring and autumn of each year to confirm the continued absence of the varroa mite in Scotland. Similar action is taken each year in the areas outwith the statutory infested area in England to establish spread of disease and, if necessary, to redefine that area from which it is illegal to move bees without prior authorisation and inspection. More generally, the Scottish Office Agriculture Services Agency provides diagnostic and treatment advice on the statutorily controlled bee diseases for subsequent inspection and remedial action as necessary. Bee-keepers can also seek advice on non-statutory bee diseases from the Scottish agricultural college.

Methadone Prescriptions

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the cost of methadone prescriptions for drug addicts for each health board area for the most recent available 12-month period; if he will express this as a cost per 1,000 of the population; what guidance is given on the prescription of methadone; and if he will make a statement. [40677]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and arrange for a copy of the letter to be placed in the Library of the House.

Alcoholic Lemonade

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received regarding the sale of alcoholic lemonade and other alcopops to under-age persons; what action he has taken or proposes to take; and if he will make a statement. [40678]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Since October 1994, we have received representations from eight Members of Parliament, and from eight other correspondents, about the subject of alcoholic lemonades and other designer alcoholic products.

Officials have been discussing with the Portman group and other Government Departments how we might best address the problem of the marketing and sale of designer alcoholic drinks apparently targeted at under 18-year-olds. It was agreed that the issue should be tackled in the wider context of under-age drinking generally. A direct outcome of these discussions was the voluntary code of practice launched by the Portman group in April which sets out guidelines on the naming, packaging and merchandising of these products. The code has the full support of the leading United Kingdom drinks companies and a number of major retailers.

According to the Portman group's first report on the operation of the code, which was published on 2 October, there have been 28 complaints about 21 products. Complaints were upheld on four. We will continue to monitor the progress of these guidelines over the coming months.

The Scottish Office is also considering the introduction of experimental schemes in selected areas of Scotland in which the police would work closely with the community in addressing the sale and supply of alcohol to those who are under-age. Details of this initiative will be announced in due course.

General Practitioners

Mr. Foulkes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the grants given to general practitioner out-of-hours co-operatives and other cover arrangements for each health board area in the financial year 1995–96 and projected expenditure for 1996–97. [40679]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Health boards were allocated totals of £4,967 million and £5.105 million in 1995–96 and 1996–97 respectively to provide for the reimbursement of certain expenses incurred by general practitioners in delivering out-of-hours services.

The totals were distributed between health boards on a per capita general practitioner basis as shown in the table.

Cairngorms

Ms Walley: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what representations he has received in respect of preservation and conservation of the Cairngorms; and if he will make a statement. [40713]

Mr. Kynoch: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and arrange for a copy of the letter to be placed in the Library of the House.

Blood Transfusion Services

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what plans he has to increase co-operation between the Scottish National Blood Transfusion Service and the national blood transfusion service; and if he will make a statement. [40776]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: The Scottish National Blood Transfusion service and the National Blood Authority are responsible respectively for blood services in Scotland and England. However, regular contact is maintained and they co-operate in many ways.

Mr. Galbraith: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland when the national director of the Scottish national blood transfusion service will be appointed; and if he will make a statement. [40775]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: Pre-selection interviews for the appointment of a national director for the Scottish National Blood Transfusion service were held on 15 October. Final interviews of the shortlisted candidates will be held on 25 October. The successful candidate's subsequent appointment will be subject to negotiation and availability.

Promotional Expenditure

Mr. Flynn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how much his Department has spent on (a) publicity, (b) promotion and (c) hospitality in each of the last six years. [40614]

Mr. Michael Forsyth: The amount spent by my Department on (a) publicity, (b) promotion and (c) hospitality in each of the last six years is set out in the table.

Year	Publicity/Promotions[1] £	Hospitality £
1990–91	2,786,595	65,123
1991–92	2,887,153	83,836
1992–93	3,116,135	[2]125,118
1993–94	2,876,585	76,088
1994–95	3,141,383	79,510
1995–96	3,433,676	[3]82,978

[1] The figures include expenditure on advertising, printwork, exhibitions and educational material for Scottish Office paid for publicity campaigns, leaflets and publications. It is not possible to give a separate figure for promotions.
[2] This figure includes expenditure on hospitality during the EC Council Meeting in Edinburgh in December 1992.
[3] In addition, the Scottish Office spent £34,680 on the VE Day and VJ Day events in Edinburgh in May and August 1995.

Core and Cluster Facility (Orkney)

Mr. Wallace: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what response he has given to representations made to him by the Hoy Action Group in respect of the siting of a core and cluster facility at Longhope, Orkney. [40433]

Mr. James Douglas-Hamilton [holding answer 16 October 1996]: The Scottish Office has responded to representations made on the action group's behalf of my right hon. Friend. The response indicated that Orkney health board's decision to locate the new facility at Longhope was reached after consultation with the local community and that, taking account of all relevant factors, the board's belief is that a site at Longhope will best address the community's needs in terms of service requirements and value for money.

Housing

Mr. Chisholm: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) if he will set out for each district and islands council area for 1995–96 the total public expenditure in the categories of Scottish Homes approved development programme (a) housing association for rent, (b) housing association shared ownership, (c) housing association improvement for sale, (d) GRO grant for rent, (e) GRO grant for low cost home ownership and (f) total ADP; [41066]

(2) if he will set out for each district and islands council area for 1995–96 the total number of dwelling completions in the categories of Scottish Homes approved development programme, (a) housing associations for rent, (b) housing associations shared ownership, (c) housing associations improvement for sale, (d) GRO grant for rent, (e) GRO grant for low cost home ownership and (f) total ADP. [41061]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The information requested is held by Scottish Homes. I shall ask its chairman, Mr. John Ward, to write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Davidson: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the progress to date of the individual house purchase scheme established to assist the disabled in obtaining appropriate housing. [41213]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: The individual house purchase scheme, which assists disabled people to buy—or rent—suitable homes, is operated by Margaret Blackwood housing association using funding provided by Scottish Homes. Scottish Homes is currently in discussion with the association on ways to improve the usefulness of the scheme.

Nursery Places

Ms Harman: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what is the estimate for unmet need for nursery places in Scotland. [41052]

Mr. Raymond S. Robertson: This information is not held centrally. The most recent departmental information about nursery education and day nursery provision in Scotland is in two Scottish Office statistical bulletins: in the November 1994 "Survey of Day Care/Education Provision for Children in Scotland", published in March 1996; and in "Summary Results of the 1995 School Census", published in August 1996. Copies are in the Library.

New Buildings and Premises

Mrs. Bridget Prentice: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what was the total expenditure on new buildings and premises by his Department and its agencies; and if he will indicate the square footage of new office space purchased or newly rented in each of the last five years. [41137]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and arrange for a copy of the letter to be placed in the Library of the House.

Consultants

Mr. Milburn: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what are his latest estimates of the expenditure on all external consultants, including management consultants, for each year since 1992, in 1996 prices, for his Department and its agencies; and what are the quantified annual cost savings which such expenditure has resulted in. [41186]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and arrange for a copy of the letter to be placed in the Library of the House.

Government Expenditure and Revenue Document

Mr. Salmond: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland how many copies of "Government Expenditure and Revenue in Scotland 1993–94" were (a) produced and (b) distributed free of charge; what were the costs of the (i) design and (ii) printing and publishing of the document, what were the costs of producing the document in terms of staff research costs; what were the costs of (1) the launch and (2) publicity; and if he will make a statement. [41067]

Lord James Douglas Hamilton: The Scottish Office produced 5,000 copies of the publication "Government Expenditure and Revenues in Scotland 1993–94"–GERS—of which approximately 2,250 were distributed free of charge, excluding postage which the recipients had to pay. The cost of design, printing and publishing the document was £6,326.34 while the cost of the launch and publicity was £290.23. The cost of research staff time is unknown; the research for the document formed part of the normal duties of Government economists and statisticians.

The GERS publication is intended to provide a strictly factual contribution to the public understanding of budgetary issues in Scotland. In future, GERS will be updated annually to a pre-announced publication schedule. As has already been announced, the next edition covering the fiscal year 1994–95 will be published on Monday 21 October 1996.

Population Statistics

Mr. Barnes: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list the latest estimates of those aged 17 years and over, plus 63 per cent. of those aged 16 years, for each parliamentary constituency in Scotland, together with the equivalent electoral registration figures also expressed as a percentage of these population figures and in ascending order. [41047]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I shall write to he hon. Member as soon as possible and arrange for a copy of the letter to be placed in the Library of the House.

Combined Heat and Power

Mr. Battle: To ask the Secretary of State for Scotland what capacity of electricity used in his Department's buildings is generated in a combined heat and power plant; and what plans he has to increase that capacity. [41315]

Lord James Douglas-Hamilton: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible and arrange for a copy of the letter to be placed in the Library of the House.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 282

SESSION 1995–96

22nd July—17th October 1996

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes and cannot therefore, be used in connection with the daily part or weekly Hansard. For these versions use the Fortnightly Index.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There are, however, the headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one can find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instruments etc, under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Speaker and deputies are brought together under the heading 'Speaker's rulings and statements'.

Other contributions by Speaker and deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates and Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates, etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Comm = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
